SPEAKER ASSAILS 'INCONSISTENCIES' OF ROOSEVELT

CIO AND N L R B ARE DENOUNCED

Missouri Republicans End Gathering Here With Banquet and Organization Action.

The Republicans of Missouri inaugurated their 1938 State campaign last night at the annual Lincoln day banquet of the Young Republicans' Association of Missouri at the Jefferson Hotel with a speech by Congressman Clare E. Hoffman of Michigan, severely denunciatory of President Roosevelt, the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, the CIO and the National Labor Relations Board. About 1000 persons crowded the hotel's Gold Room.

Assailing the President's record as one of constant and repeated inconsistencies, Hoffman asserted that it clearly demonstrated a desire to change the form of government, and charged a "conspiracy" between the President and John L. Lewis.

Hoffman began his speech with a quotation from a speech by Lincoln in Congress in 1848, in which Lincoln assailed President Polk, and which was quoted on the floor of Congress Wednesday. In part, Lincoln was quoted:

"He knows not where he is. He is a bewildered, confounded, and miserably perplexed man. God grant he may be able to show there is not something about his conscience more painful than all his mental perplexity."

"What was then said of Polk is true today of the chief executive," Hoffman added, and proceeded to set forth a long list of Roosevelt promises and actions, which he cited in support of his statement.

Roosevelt 'Inconsistencies.'

Hoffman listed:

Roosevelt's effort to increase prices and his more recent statement that prices were too high and must be lowered.

His statement in 1926 that a reduction in cost of manufacture meant less goods consumed, and his 1927 statement that increased cost meant reduced consumption.

His position that manufacturing costs must be reduced but that wages could not be lowered in the face of the fact, Hoffman said, that "every school boy knows that labor, generally speaking, is the largest item in the cost of production."

His agricultural program for decreased production on the one hand, and increased production on the other through reclamation of producing land.

The farm bill with a $500,000,000 subsidy to farmers, but at the same time curtailing production.

"His demand that industry take up the slack in employment, while, at the same time, he hampers, hinders and persecutes industry in every possible way, especially through the C I O, the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, the Wagner law and the National Labor Relations Board, which creates unemployment in industry."

He ridiculed the President's criticism of installment buying when "clerks in Federal departments were forced to buy $100 banquet tickets on the installment plan," and contrasted the President's denunciation of automobile installment buying with the lending of Federal funds for home building on the installment plan.

Sees Platform Violation.

Resuming his listing of inconsistencies, Hoffman said abandonment of the gold standard was violation of a platform pledge, that governmental expenditures had been vastly increased in the face of a platform pledge for a 25 per cent reduction, that, instead of keeping a pledge to reduce the number of bureaus and employes, the President had vastly increased them.

The increased national indebtedness, which has been the subject of criticism in Congress and outside, was discussed by the speaker, who said it is approaching 38 billion dollars and equaled approximately 30 per cent of the assessed valuation of all property.

He recited that, on a per capita basis, Missouri's share of the national debt is $1,096,068,834, and that of New Deal indebtedness, incurred in the past five years, is $804,482,013.

"In 1933 he gave us the N R A

Soviet Scientists on Floe Report Seeing Searchlights of Icebreaker 40 Miles Away—Planes Prepare for Flight.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Feb. 12. — Hope for early rescue of the four Soviet scientists adrift on an ice floe rose today when the party reported it had discovered flat ice suitable for airplane landings and had seen rays of the searchlight of the icebreaker Taimyr 40 miles away.

Radio Operator Ernest Krenkel reported the searchlight's rays were seen from the floe this morning. Preparation of planes aboard the icebreakreaker for flight were begun after the scientists, headed by Ivan Papanin, radioed they had seen flat ice near their floe as they drifted along the east coast of Greenland.

The Taimyr reported at 6:45 p. m. tonight that she could see the coast of Greenland from her position at 71.36 degrees north and 17.20 degrees west. The scientists' position at 12:30 p. m. was 71.37 degrees north and 20.10 degrees west.

Both the ice camp and the icebreaker were between Greenland and San Mayen Island.

The scientists, who, besides Papanin and Krenkel, include Astronomer Eugene Fedoroff and Marine Biologist Peter Shirshoff, established their ice camp near the North Pole last May 21.

The Taimyr emerged from a storm as two other icebreakers seeking to rescue the scientists, the Murman and the Murmanets, reported a gale had halted their progress.

G. O. P. TO DINE ON POTATOES DUMPED BY FEDERAL AGENCY

Salvaged From Slough, They Will Be Served at Poplar Bluff Banquet.

By the Associated Press.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Feb. 12.—Fred Williams, president of the Butler County Young Republican Club, said today committees preparing for a Republican banquet Feb. 25 expect to serve potatoes salvaged from a slough where they were dumped last week by the Surplus Commodities Corporation officials as unfit for human consumption.

About 7500 pounds of the potatoes were fished out of the water by persons living in the vicinity.

C. R. Dyck, State Supervisor of Surplus Commodities, said at Jefferson City there was some danger of persons who eat the potatoes becoming ill.

Said Williams: "We expect to have the salvaged potatoes at our banquet. Fine potatoes like those won't make anybody sick. I'm positive the only persons made sick through the apparently unjustified attempt to destroy the potatoes are the Democrats."

DRIVER SHOT TO DEATH BY COMPANION IN AUTO

Witness Says Man He Knew Only as 'Brownie' Then Drove Away.

By the Associated Press.

CANTON, Ill., Feb. 12.—Harold Politie, 21 years old, of Peoria, tonight turned over to authorities the body of a man he said had been murdered by a companion he knew only as "Brownie.' The victim, killed by a bullet through the head, was identified by cards in his pockets as Harold D. Cleary, plumbing salesman for the Kinsey-Mahler Co., Peoria.

Deputy Sheriff Wayman Wheeler said Politie told him the man called "Brownie" reached across him and shot Cleary in the temple as the three were driving toward Canton in Cleary's car.

Cleary and "Brownie" had been disputing whether to go to Peoria or East St. Louis. Suddenly "Brownie' pulled a pistol from a shoulder holster and shot the driver.

Wheeler said Politie told him Cleary and "Brownie" picked him up as he was returning to Peoria from Hamilton, Ill., where he had been visiting. The three stopped at Lewistown, Ill., for several drinks and again at a tavern outside of Lewistown.

After shooting Cleary "Brownie" stopped the car, ordered Politie to carry Cleary's body to the roadside, and then drove away in the direction of Peoria. Politie made his way to a farmhouse and called the Sheriff's office.

NAZIS ASK PASTOR NIEMOELLER TO REINSTATE HIS LAWYERS

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—Ministry of Justice officials began negotiations with the Rev. Martin Niemoeller today for reinstatement of Niemoeller's three attorneys in his trial on charges of treasonably opposing the Nazi church program.

The Rev. Mr. Niemoeller, leader of the Protestant opposition to Nazi church policies, dismissed his attorneys when the trial was closed to the public. He declared the Nazis had "besmirched the honor of his counsel."

Baron Konstantin von Neurath, as Chancellor Hitler's personal representative, attended a mass today celebrating the sixteenth anniversary of the coronation of Pope Pius. Von Neurath is head of the newly-created Foreign Policy Advisory Council, formed in the recent Government shakeup.

AMERICAN TANKER FREED BY REBELS, HELD UP BY CREW

By the Associated Press.

GIBRALTAR, Feb. 12.—Sailing of the American tanker Nantucket Chief for the United States today was postponed because members of the crew demanded payment of bonuses and wages.

They declared payments were overdue and said they would continue their voyage if the bonuses and wages were forthcoming.

The vessel arrived here yesterday after being released by Spanish insurgents who captured it on the way from a Russian port with a cargo of oil for Barcelona.

Capt. J. E. Lewis, the skipper, last night said he was beaten with a rubber hose every day of the 16 days he and his crew were held prisoners at Palma, Mallorca.

JURY FINDS FOUR GUILTY IN RENO SWINDLE TRIAL

J. C. McKay, W. J. Graham, Boies Heed and Allan Comer Convicted of Mail Fraud Conspiracy.

THOMAS O'DELL FREED BY VERDICT

Sentence Tomorrow — Maximum Possible Penalty Is 17 Years in Prison and $25,000 Fine.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—James McKay and William Graham, wealthy Nevada gamblers, Boies Heed of Phoenix, Ariz., and Allen Comer of Sioux City, Ia., were convicted today of mail fraud and conspiracy in swindles in Reno, Nev., involving $2,500,000. The Government had sought conviction for seven years. Two previous juries had disagreed. Thomas O'Dell of New Britain, Conn., tried with them, was acquitted.

O'Dell was linked in the indictment with the alleged $23,000 swindle of Judson Elston, 87 years old, former U. S. Commissioner, in Idaho, who, feeble, of failing sight, and testifying from a stretcher, was inconclusive in his identification of O'Dell.

The verdict was returned by a jury in the United States District Court 24 hours after the case was submitted to it.

Justice Willis Van Devanter, who heard the case, directed the defendants to be in court Monday for sentence.

Defense counsel, headed by John J. Taaffe of San Francisco, were undecided about an appeal.

The men were convicted on three mail fraud counts and on one conspiracy count. On each of the mail fraud counts, the maximum penalty is a five-year term and a $5000 fine. The prison term maximum for a conspiracy count is two years and the fine $10,000, making the total maximum 17 years in prison and the maximum fine $25,000.

Share Put at 15 Pct.

Graham commented: "We have to take the bitter with the sweet." McKay said merely, "What the Hell?"

McKay and Graham were pictured as using the now defunct Riverside Bank in Reno as a clearing house for swindlers, taking the intended victims there to get securities converted and large drafts cashed; of exercising political influence through which confidence men were allowed to operate and of collecting as their share, 15 per cent of the loot.

McKay and Graham contended futilely that they had alibis in regard to many of the swindles; and that testimony connecting them otherwise with the frauds came from criminals "fixed" by the Government.

Twenty-four persons were indicted originally. Ten of them have not been brought to trial; some are fugitives, some dead. One of them, Henry Schuyler, alias Melville Brew, who was arrested recently in Gulfport, Miss., is in jail here.

Leading Witness Recants.

One of the principal prosecution witnesses was Noble John Moore, veteran confidence man who pleaded guilty in 1934, served his sentence, and had been guarded zealously by Federal agents since against any attempt to get him out of the way. He recanted part of his previous testimony.

Other Government witnesses included John Paul Chase, Alcatraz convict and former aid of the now dead Baby Face Nelson; Cullen Friswold, former confidence man now in the insurance business in Oregon and C. C. Harris, Folsom prison life termer and former member of the Reno ring.

Notably absent was Roy Frisch, missing cashier of the Riverside Bank, who, Chase told Government agents, had been killed. Joseph Feutsch, assistant cashier, who described McKay's and Graham's activities in the bank in connection with pre-swindle transactions, testified instead.

How Swindles Were Managed.

The swindles were all of a familiar pattern. Confidence men struck up acquaintance with victims in various cities and persuaded them to go to Reno. There the victims' drafts were cashed and their securities sold through the Riverside Bank, and the victims were persuaded to give the money to the swindlers on promises of its quick multiplication. They never got the money back, being hoaxed by spurious explanations of the loss or unfulfilled promises of restitution.

Elston was persuaded to part with his money as a supposed loan to a financially embarrassed friend of a bunco steerer who had gained Elston's confidence while he was in an El Paso (Tex.) hospital.

WRIGHT CONVICTED OF KILLING; SANITY HEARING ORDERED

Same Jury That Found Him Guilty of Manslaughter to Consider His Mental State Tomorrow.

SHOT HIS WIFE AND FRIEND IN HOME

Los Angeles Man Pleaded Shock of Finding Them Made Him Unconscious of What Followed.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 12.—The jury that convicted Paul A. Wright of the killing of his wife and his friend, John Kimmel, will return to the jury box on Monday to hear Wright's plea of not guilty by reason of insanity. Wright was found guilty today on two counts, on which he could be sent to prison for 20 years.

The jury of four women and eight men who sat through his month-long trial decided the former airport executive was "conscious" of the act when he killed his wife, Evelyn, and Kimmel in the Wright home last Nov. 9.

Wright, who is 38 years old, said the killings were the result of his finding his wife and friend in an abnormal embrace on the piano bench in his Glendale home.

If the jury should find Wright was temporarily insane on the morning of the killings, but sane now, he would be freed. If it should decide he still is insane, then Superior Judge Ingall Bull could commit him to an asylum. But if the jury finds he was sane, the court may impose sentence on today's manslaughter verdict.

Jury Out Four Hours.

Foreman Joseph M. Stokes read today's verdict in a tremulous voice. The eyes of several of the veniremen were tear-stained when they filed into the courtroom after deliberating less than four hours.

Jerry Giesler, defense attorney, declined to let the defendant comment on the decision. Dr. Wright said: "Paul did not expect this verdict, but I did."

Between bursts of tears, Mrs. Edith McBride, mother of Mrs. Wright, said: "I feel vindicated. I don't see how anyone could believe that terrible story about Evelyn."

"There never was any need for vindication," said Mrs. Marrene Kimmel, made a widow by the tragedy.

They referred to the story Wright told on the witness stand of the scene he said caused him to rush for his automatic pistol and commit the act of which he said he was unconscious until he saw the bodies on the floor at his feet.

Given the Jury Yesterday.

The case was given to the jury late yesterday after the prosecution concluded its case with the contention murder in some degree had been committed.

At the county jail hospital, where Wright was taken after the case went to the jury, physicians said they found a condition of slight and temporary paralysis of both legs.

The conviction of Wright being armed, under the California law, would limit the minimum of his term to 10 years if the possible sentences on the two counts should run concurrently. The State Prison Board, however, could parole him at the end of half this minimum sentence.

MAN ENDS LIFE AFTER PHONING WOMAN WHO REJECTED HIM

Suitor in Louisville Calls Her in Los Angeles to Hear Fatal Shot Over Wire.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 12.—William Richard Tompkins, 29 years old, fatally wounded himself in a hotel here after calling, by long distance telephone, the Los Angeles woman had had rejected him, to hear the shot.

Tompkins, a former sailor, died five hours later and his body was sent to Gallatin, Tenn., for burial.

Tompkins telephoned Miss Dora Munsell in a Los Angeles hotel. She informed reporters in that city he told her that her refusal to marry him had wrecked his life.

"He told me 'I am going to send a bullet through my heart. Do you want to hear the shot?' And I said, 'No!' 'No!'," she related. Then came a sound she thought was a shot.

She said she had pleaded with him but he said his mind was made up. In a letter she received Tuesday he threatened to end his life, adding that he worried over his inability to repay $400 he borrowed from her.

THAMES, SWOLLEN BY GALE, FLOODS HOMES IN LONDON

Storm Disrupts Shipping, Ties Up Train Service—Destroyer Blown Aground.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 13. (Sunday).—The Thames River, swollen by an 80-mile-an-hour gale driving water in from the North Sea, began to overflow its banks in the heart of London today. Many families living along the waterfront were warned to be ready to evacuate.

The storm, described as the worst in 40 years, disrupted shipping and piled up floodwaters along the English Channel coast that caused train service to be suspended in several areas.

The 1100-ton British destroyer Walrus, which broke adrift while under tow in the North Sea, was blown aground in North Bay. Her four-man skeleton crew reached shore exhausted on a rubber raft.

Opposite the Houses of Parliament the Thames poured over its banks to cover the Albert embankment. The densely populated areas of Chelsea, Putney and Twickenham were flooded. Residents marooned in their houses were ordered not to retire.

Margate, on the English Channel, reported the highest seas since 1897, with cellars of shops and hotels along the coast flooded. Falling trees killed two persons in the interior.

Heavy seas balked attempts by the Dover-Ostend channel steamer Princess Astrid, with 275 passengers, to enter the harbor at Ostend, Belgium. The vessel was damaged in one attempt before returning outside the harbor to toss in the heavy sea.

13 KILLED IN LAND DISPUTE IN MEXICO, PEASANTS SAY

They Report Forcible Seizure of Property and Later Attack When They Try to Recover It.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO, D. F., Feb. 12.—A land dispute that led to two fights in which 13 persons were killed in Hidalgo State was reported today by a delegation of peasants arriving here.

The peasants said the trouble started 10 days ago at Tlahualilpan when armed men headed, they said, by the Police Chief of Pachuca, capital of Hidalgo, forcibly seized lands belonging to 60 small farmers. A 9-year-old boy was killed in that raid, they said.

The farmers came to Mexico, D. F., and told their story to Gabino Vasquez, head of the Agrarian department, who sent an official to see that the lands were restored. Returning to Tlahualilpan, the peasants reported, they stopped at San Primitivo where the official of the Agrarian department was to arrange for troop protection. There 50 men attacked them and in the shooting 12 persons were killed, including a woman. The survivors made their way back to Mexico City to tell of the occurrence.

G.L. TOEL CLEARED OF FORGERY

W. F. Walpole Previously Convicted in Connection With Same Note.

By the Associated Press.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Feb. 12. — A jury in Circuit Court acquitted G. Lorance Toel of forgery this afternoon, after deliberating less than one hour.

Toel was charged with forging a note which was sold to the Morris Plan Co., of which he was an officer. W. F. Walpole previously had been convicted of uttering the same note.

4 TORONTO MOTHERS IN ON $500,000 PRIZE

Each Bore 9 Children in 10 Years—Claims of Two Others in Dispute.

TORONTO, Feb. 12.—(Canadian Press.)—Justice W. E. Middleton of the Ontario Supreme Court today accepted claims of four Toronto mothers to shares of the $500,000 prize bequeathed by the late Charles Vance Millar to the woman giving birth to the most children in the 10 years following his death.

The four mothers — Mrs. Isabel Mary MacLean, Mrs. Annie Katharine Smith, Mrs. Kathleen Ellen Nagel and Mrs. Lucy Alice Timleck—each gave birth to nine children in the 10-year period. Their claims were unchallenged.

Unless two other mothers, proof of whose claims was in dispute, are admitted to the group, the four women will be awarded $125,000 each by executors of the Millar estate.

Mrs. Nagle, 35 years old, is the wife of an unemployed carpenter. She has borne 12 children, all living. The Nagles were married 18 years ago and for several years have been on relief.

Mrs. Timleck, 38, has borne 18 children. Her husband works for the City Parks Department.

Those contending for the right to shares were Mrs. Lillian Kenny, who was asked to prove that none of her children was still-born, and Mrs. Pauline Mae Clarke who must prove her nine all are legitimate. Argument on these points was set for Feb. 25.

Justice Middleton overruled a suggestion by an attorney for Mrs. Kenny that he might attempt an out-of-court settlement with the four winners on behalf of his client.

Relatives of Millar, wealthy Toronto lawyer, had carried their contest of the will to Canada's highest court on the ground that its provisions were contrary to public policy. The Supreme Court at Ottawa ruled that Millar had a perfect right to dispose of his estate as he did. The case was closed except for an unlikely appeal to the Privy Council in London, the highest court of the British Empire.

The Supreme Court decided, however, that only children born in wedlock and registered in Toronto in the 10 years following Millar's death Oct. 31, 1926, could be eligible.

By the Associated Press.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Feb. 12.—James Boney, 17-year-old Watrous (N. M.), farm youth, pleaded guilty before United States Commissioner Samuel Dazzo today to sending a threatening letter to President Roosevelt.

He was held for action of the Federal Grand Jury.

Boney previously had admitted writing the letter and signing the name of Jose Tapia, now the husband of the woman who spurned Boney's affections.

JAPAN TURNS DOWN U. S. REQUEST FOR NAVY PLANS

MIKADO'S FORCES FOR DEFENSE ONLY

In Reply to Protest It Admits American Rights in China Were Violated, to Try to Avoid Recurrence.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Feb. 12.—Japan flatly refused today to tell the United States its naval building plans.

At the same time Japan admitted that its soldiers had violated American property in Hangchow, China, and committed disorders in Nanking, and said measures taken had been taken to prevent recurrence of such incidents.

Japan answered requests from the United States, France and Great Britain for information concerning warship construction with an offer to discuss numerical fleet limitation.

The formal note handed United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew insisted Japan had "no intention" of maintaining a fleet that would menace other nations.

An accompanying statement asserted Japan's naval forces were "solely for defense and declared other leading naval Powers must bear the responsibility for any future developments," such as a world naval armaments race.

Dogmatic Conclusion "Unfair."

Japan said it was unfair for other Powers "to conclude dogmatically" that Japan is building warships in excess of the 35,000-ton limit imposed by the 1936 London Naval Treaty, to which Japan does not adhere, and for the other Powers to make current reports of such construction "a reason for their armament expansion."

The three Powers had asked Japan for the information Feb. 5, the American and British notes asserting that refusal to reply before Feb. 20 would be considered as an admission that Japan's plans exceeded the treaty limit. The United States declared it would "resume full liberty of action" in the event of no reply.

Escape clauses in the 1936 London Naval Treaty provide release from the 35,000-ton upper limit if any non-treaty Power exceeds the tonnage limit. (Russia and Germany are bound by the limitation by separate agreements with Great Britain.)

Puts Size of Fleets First.

Japan restated its stand taken at the London conference, asserting it could not discuss limiting the size of battleships and their armaments unless such discussions gave "primary importance" to the limitation of the size of total fleets.

"The Japanese Government fails to see any logical reasoning for the assumption" Japan's naval plans are not in conformity with the London Treaty, the note said expressing unconcern if the treaty's escape clauses are invoked.

The accompanying statement gave Japan's desire for quantitative naval limitation as the reason it could "not afford to disclose plans of naval construction."

Expansion of naval construction by other Powers would leave Japan "no alternative but to alter building plans to cope with such construction," the statement declared.

Explanation on Disorders.

Concerning the actions of Japanese troops in China, the Government handed Grew a note replying to a United States protest of Jan. 17.

It said disorders committed by Japanese after the occupation of Nanking were the result of "unavoidable insufficiency of the force detailed to duty protecting the rights and interests of third Powers."

Illegal entry by Japanese soldiers into American property at Hangchow occurred after supply lines were cut and requisitioning of provisions was necessary.

"It is possible some requisitioning squads made mistakes in identification" since they were operating at night, the note said.

Japan assured the United States military police in China had been reinforced, a high officer sent from Tokio to execute instructions and

HITLER CONFERS IN SECRET WITH VON SCHUSCHNIGG

1936 TREATY TAKEN UP, VIENNA SAYS

Visiting Chancellor Also Has With Him Incriminating Documents Seized in Nazi Raid.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—Adolf Hitler conferred today with Austria's anti-Nazi Chancellor, Kurt von Schuschnigg.

Schuschnigg came to Hitler's Berchtesgaden retreat for the talk, which lasted so long a complete consideration of Austrian-German relations was indicated.

Details of the meeting were kept secret, but Austrian Government officials in Vienna said the basis of the conference was the Austrian-German treaty of 1936 guaranteeing the independence of Germany's neighbor.

Franz von Papen, until Feb. 4 German Ambassador to Austria, was present for the conference which Germans said consisted of two separate conversations—one for an hour in the forenoon and another which began at 5 p. m. and continued late into the evening.

A communique said the meeting grew out of a desire on both sides "to examine in direct conversations all questions touching on relations between the German Reich and Austria."

Both Germany and Italy have cast longing eyes at Austria, wedged between the Nazi and Fascist Powers. Hitler's alarm over the collapse of the Fascist-inclined Rumanian Government and the unfriendly world press reaction to his governmental shakeup were believed to have caused a moderation of the Reichsfuehrer's attitude toward Austria.

How great a change in policy had been made was indicated by the fact the German press had attacked the Austrian Chancellor as recently as Jan. 7 for disparaging remarks about Nazism. Since then Austrian Nazi leaders have been arrested in Vienna.

HOUSE GROUP INDORSES RELIEF APPROPRIATION

Officials Testify $250,000,000 Is Needed to Provide Jobs for 950,000:

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—President Roosevelt's request for $250,000,000 to provide a "reasonable measure" of relief for victims of the business slump won speedy approval of a House appropriations sub-committee late today.

After hearing officials testify the money was needed immediately to provide work relief for 950,000 persons, the sub-committee approved the appropriation without any attempt to reduce it.

Chairman Taylor (Dem.), Colorado, said the vote was along party lines. He said the bill would be considered Monday by the full committee, and would come up for House debate either that day or Tuesday.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau; Daniel Bell, acting budget director; Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer of the Social Security Board, Aubrey Williams, Acting Works Progress Administrator, and other Federal officials testified before the sub-committee.

Williams testified that the fund was needed to permit the addition of 500,000 persons to relief rolls and to prevent the discharge of 450,000 others between now and June 1. He said W P A had about $495,000,000 available for work projects, but that the heaviest relief load would have to be borne during the next two or three months. The need is particularly urgent, he said, in industrial centers like Detroit and other large automobile manufacturing areas.

Questioned as to how unemployment compensation payments would affect the relief load, Altmeyer said only 22 states and the District of Columbia were making such payments at this time. Thus far, he said, only about $10,000,000 or $12,000,000 had been paid out. Payments cannot begin in Michigan, he said, until next July unless a change is made in existing requirements. They won't start in Ohio until next January, he added.

"We've got to look after these people," said Morgenthau. "We can't let them starve."

The sub-committee also voted to make $2,000,000 available immediately for grasshopper control. The money would be appropriated now instead of in the forthcoming Agriculture Department appropriation. Members said the money would do more good if available immediately.

New Disturbance Moving in From Pacific After Record-Breaking 17-Day Storm.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 12. — Flood waters kept numerous Central California lowland areas inundated tonight and intensified their threat to the agriculturally rich Sacramento-San Joaquin River delta.

The State reported about 2000 persons were temporarily homeless as the result of the record-breaking 17-day storm.

Another meteorological disturbance was moving in from the Pacific, but weather forecasters predicted the prolonged wet spell would end by the middle of next week.

Hundreds of houses were flooded in Watsonville when the Pajaro River Levee broke. Ten business blocks were under water. Three hundred families were driven from their homes near Madera, and were being fed on an emergency basis.

Deep snow covered the Sierra Nevada Mountains, even far into Southern California. Tahoe City was virtually isolated by 10 feet of snow. George Whittell, San Francisco sportsman, and a party of 12 in his lake shore home on the Nevada side, reported by telephone they had only canned food.

The death list, which began with last Wednesday's high winds, included two persons killed by a snowslide in the Southern Sierra, two fishermen lost off San Diego, and one drowning when a flood torrent swept away a cabin.

CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT PUT UP TO SUPREME COURT

Kansas Legislators Deny Right of States to Vote On It, Asserting It Is Dead.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Twenty-one Kansas State Senators and Representatives filed in the Supreme Court today a challenge of the right of states to vote now on the proposed constitutional amendment to outlaw child labor. They contended that the proposal, submitted to the states by Congress in 1924, had been rejected by more than one-fourth of the states and hence had been withdrawn automatically from consideration. They ask the Supreme Court to review the ruling against them by the Kansas Supreme Court.

In order to become effective, proposed amendments to the constitution must be approved by two-thirds of the United States Senate and House of Representatives and by three-fourths of the states.

SONS OF MAN FATALLY SHOT CONFESS PART IN HOLDUP

Two Arrested in New Jersey After Father Dies of Wounds at Utica, N. Y.

NETCONG, N. J., Feb. 12.—State Police arrested today two brothers who, they said, confessed attempting a robbery in New York State in which their father was fatally shot.

The brothers, Raymond Bradley Hammersten, 19 years old, and Henry Lindabury Hammersten, 16, of Hackensack, N. J., were arrested as they left a relative's home.

Police quoted them as saying their father told them he was "hit too hard" and urged them to leave him in Utica, N. Y., and go home and tell their mother he "got a job driving a truck to North Carolina and wouldn't be home for a while."

The father was Raymond Bradley Hammersten Sr., unemployed milk truck driver. A man who died today in Utica hospital from gunshot wounds told police his name was John Brazen, but police said it had been established his right name was Hammersten.

Utica police said the wounds were received in the attempted robbery of a gasoline station at Remsen, 21 miles north of that city.

JAPANESE PRESS PINCER DRIVE ON LUNGHAI ZONE

Two Vital Railways Into Shantung Province Repaired for Carrying of Reinforcements.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 13.—(Sunday.)—The Japanese announced today that two vital railways into the heart of Shantung Province had been reopened, making it possible to send reinforcements to Japanese troops driving southward toward the important Lunghai line.

The Tsingtao-Tsinan and Tientsin-Tsinan railways, put out of commission by fleeing Chinese soldiers several weeks ago, have been completely rehabilitated, the Japanese said.

They asserted Japanese offensives along the Tientsin-Pukow and Peiping-Hankow lines were continuing but that they had no reports on the progress.

Reports last night stated Japanese forces had clamped a pincer movement on the Western flank of China's Central armies simultaneously with start of a Northern drive apparently aimed at the 3000-mile Chinese highway artery of Soviet Russia.

Attempting to bottle up 400,000 Chinese soldiers defending the Lunghai railway zone, which separates the two areas of Japanese conquest in China, Japan's armies struck from the North and South at the same time.

Eight Japanese columns are trying to close in on China's central defense forces in the rich agricultural corridor connecting Japanese-occupied territory of North China with the Yangtze Valley.

Moving south from the walled town of Nanlo, captured earlier in the week, the Japanese were said to have occupied Puyang, an advance of about 40 miles. This placed them 60 miles north of the Lunghai line.

Fighting at Hwai River.

Japanese reported another column, moving north, had crossed the Hwai River north of Pengpu after a battle and was advancing steadily toward Suchow, junction point of the Lunghai and the Tientsin-Pukow railways and principal objective of the North China campaign.

These reports said the Japanese had reached a place known as "Little Pengpu" and were threatening Hsinmachiao, 16 miles north of Pengpu.

Chinese dispatches from Hankow, however, said more than 1000 Japanese troops were wiped out in a futile attempt to cross the Hwai River near Pengpu. They admitted some Japanese units reached the north bank of the stream but said most were annihilated in hand-to-hand fighting and all others were taken prisoners.

Chinese dispatches said many of the Japanese were drowned and others were picked off by Chinese sharpshooters.

British Flour Mill Fired.

Chinese planes bombed Pengpu and set fire to a British-owned flour mill, a Domei (Japanese) news agency dispatch to Shanghai said.

Military observers regard the fighting on the southern edge of the Lunghai corridor as one of the three biggest battles of the war.

The fighting in the Pengpu sector was compared by the observers with the battle for Shanghai, which paved the way for Japanese domination of the Yangtze Valley, and the battle of Nankow Pass, early in the war, where desperate Chinese resistance failed to stem a Japanese thrust into Far Northern China.

Japanese Seize Chinese Junks in British Waters Off Hongkong.

HONGKONG, Feb. 12.—An armed Japanese trawler using a machine gun captured six Chinese junks and set fire to four, a police patrol launch of this British colony reported this morning.

The trawler was outside the harbor, but within British waters. Two junks were rescued. One member of the crews was known to have been shot, but the fate of the others was not determined.

Louis N. Wolf Gets Continuance.

JOPLIN, Mo., Feb. 12.—Circuit Judge Ray E. Watson today granted Louis N. Wolf, Joplin, attorney, a change of venue for Wolf's trial in disbarment proceedings brought by the State Bar Advisory Committee. It was to be determined later whether the case is to be sent out of the county or a special trial Judge agreed on.

Reply of Japan to United States

TOKIO, Feb. 12.

FOLLOWING is the text of Japan's reply to the request of the United States for information on Japan's naval program:

It may be recalled that at the last London naval conference the Japanese Government proposed in earnest their desire to bring about a drastic reduction in naval armament, the total abolition of capital ships and aircraft carriers which are aggressive in their nature, and at the same time contended that qualitative limitation, if unaccompanied by quantitative limitation, would not be calculated to achieve any fair and equitable measure of disarmament.

Unfortunately, the views of the Japanese Government were not shared by your government and other governments concerned. This fundamental principle entertained by the Japanese Government was, as your government will be aware, made clear again last year in their reply to the proposal of your government regarding the limitation of gun calibres. The Japanese Government always were prompted by a spirit of non-menace and non-aggression and have no intention whatever of possessing armament which would menace other countries.

At this juncture, when as a result of the non-acceptance by other countries of the reasonable desires of Japan in the matter of disarmament there is as yet in existence no fair disarmament treaty to which Japan is a party, the Japanese Government are of the opinion that mere communication of information concerning the construction of vessels will, in the absence of quantitative limitation, not contribute to any fair and equitable measure of disarmament and regret that they are unable to comply with the desire of your government on this point.

The Japanese Government fail to see any logical reasoning in the assumption on the part of your government that this government must be deemed to entertain a scheme for constructing vessels which are not in conformity with the limits provided by the London Treaty of 1936, from the mere fact that they do not dispatch a reply giving the desired information; and they are of the opinion that it is not a matter which should concern this government if your government, on the basis of whatever reason or rumor, should exercise the right of escalation provided in any treaty to which Japan is not a party.

Your Government are good enough to intimate that, should the Japanese Government hereafter be prepared to agree to some limitation in respect of the tonnage of vessels and the caliber of guns, they would also be prepared to discuss the matter. The Japanese Government, still holding the firm conviction that qualitative limitation, if not accompanied by quantitative limitation, would by no means contribute to the attainment of any fair and equitable measure of disarmament, cannot but consider that the discussion suggested by your Government would not conduce in any measure to the realization of their desires concerning disarmament.

It is to be added, however, that as the Japanese Government did not fall behind other governments in their ardent desire for disarmament, they will be ready at any moment to enter into any discussions on the matter of disarmament which gives primary importance to a fair, quantitative limitation.

("The right of escalation" is the escape clause permitting signatories of the London Treaty to exceed the 35,000-ton limit if it is exceeded by non-signatories.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Secretary of State Hull declared today the Japanese reply on warship construction encourages rather than discourages an armament race.

In a short formal statement, Hull said "this Government seeks constantly to co-operate in advancing the policy of limitation and reduction of armaments and regrets any development which has the effect of encouraging rather than discouraging races in armament building."

Senator King (Dem.), Utah, said otday he would introduce a resolution Monday authorizing President Roosevelt to call a disarmament conference immediately.

He said he feared Japan's refusal to give other information about its naval plans would encourage an armaments race and place a "crushing burden' on taxpayers of all nations.

King said it was the duty of the United States to take the lead "because of her pre-eminence and her impregnable military position."

"No nation could successfully attack us, and all the navies and all the nations of the world couldn't successfully make war on the United States. We have no enemies planning to attack us, and we can afford to take the lead."

Although he felt Japan was "unwarranted" in refusing to give the information, he said the Japanese attitude would "justify and encourage" in the minds of many persons steps to strengthen military and naval forces.

King said the United States has "never lost a war and never won a conference," but that the "crushing burden of militarism demands efforts be made to lift it from the backs of the people."

Chairman Pittman (Dem.), Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, expressed the opinion that Japan's statement of willingness to confer on naval limitation "doesn't mean much" unless "coupled with a desire to be bound by the London agreement."

"Our country is very much in favor of conferences," Pittman added, "and no doubt we would delay for a reasonable length of time to see what Japan is willing to do before going outside the London limitations."

Senator Capper (Rep.), Kansas, proposed "tying up Japan" on the expression of willingness to confer on disarmament and "encouragement" of a discussion.

Senator Bone (Dem.), Washington, also said the Japanese note brought some hope of getting Japan to agree on definite naval commitments. But Senator Johnson (Rep.), California, declared the whole procedure of inviting Japan to divulge her naval plans was foolish and that the results justified his conclusion.

SPEAKER ASSAILS "INCONSISTENCIES" OF ROOSEVELT

and the A A A, took a warship or two and sailed to the Pacific Ocean. In 1936, when sit-down strikes confronted us, he went to Warm Springs, Ga., and remained as silent as the oyster he loves so well, while hundreds of thousands of men were driven from their jobs by his co-conspirator, John L. Lewis, whose organization contributed more than a half million dollars toward his re-election.

"In the fall of 1937 he called Congress in special session to enact a farm bill, a wage-hour bill, a reorganization bill and a seven little TVA's bill, and away he went down off the Florida coast, leaving on his doorstep a sweet little recession, as his friends name it. In reality, a Roosevelt depression."

"From the time he became a candidate for the presidency down to the beginning of 1938," Hoffman continued, "he has been like a restless irresponsible child, playing with a piece of mechanism—something he can take apart, but cannot put together against."

"Destructive Agencies."

Presenting the argument that the President would change our form of Government, he asserted that under his administration and with his aid and assistance, "three destructive agencies have been driving steadily forward toward the destruction of our Government, our freedom and our liberty." He named the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, "John L. Lewis and the Communists in the C I O," and the Wagner law through its administration by the "witch-burning" NLRB.

The La Follette Senate Civil Liberties Committee came in for severe denunciation, Hoffman asserting that, instead of protecting the liberty of the individual, it had employed spies to deprive independent workers of their economic freedom.

In conclusion, Hoffman said he would offer as constructive suggestions that the President keep his promise to be honest with the people at all times, that Social Security funds be not expended for the ordinary operations of the Government, that there be a reduction in governmental expenditures, the budget be balanced, that the Wagner labor law be amended to protect the employer and independent worker, that the Vandenberg Child Labor amendment be adopted, that business men be no longer held up to public scorn, that the President be called upon for an accounting of the two billion dollar stabilization fund, that the surplus prfits and capital gains taxes be repealed.

Speaker From Maine.

Moral and intellectual honesty, traits outstanding in Lincoln, are not so noticeable in the present administration, said Miss Marian E. Martin, State Senator and National Committeewoman from Maine and another speaker of the evening. She particularly denounced the New Deal's use of the Social Security reserves as "a gross misappropriation of funds and a flagrant disregard of the (Social Security) Act, and its failure to bring new governmental agencies under civil service. By way of contrast, she cited the merit system pledge in the 1936 Republican platform.

The only other address was a brief one by Fred W. Pape, chairman of the Republican City Central Committee, who promised "to leave no stone unturned in the next campaign to put Missouri back where she belongs—in the Republican column."

Two-Day Gathering Ends.

The banquet ended a two-day gathering of Republicans in St. Louis, starting yesterday, with sessions of the Republican Editorial Association of Missouri.

The Young Republicans Association at business sessions yesterday morning advanced William E. Buder of St. Louis from treasurer to the presidency of the association. Miss Sileen Cofer of Buffalo was chosen secretary, and Harry O. Smith of Farmington, former prosecuting attorney of St. Francois County, was elected treasurer, and next year will succeed to the presidency.

Two vice-presidents from each congressional district were chosen at district meetings. These vice-presidents constitute the voting power of the organization, electing the officers and deciding on policies. Those chosen were:

Third, Kyle Williams, Albany, and Mrs. Stella Hall Thompson, Kingston.

Eleventh, Richard Nichols and Miss Margaret Pohlman, St. Louis.

Thirteenth, Mrs. Eleanor Huber and J. L. Comerford, St. Louis.

Also in session yesterday were the Republican Service League, the members of which are war veterans, and the Federation of Republican Women's Clubs. At a luncheon of the Service League Barak T. Mattingly, chairman of the Republican State Committee, and Jesse W. Barrett, nominee for Governor in 1936, were speakers. The principal speaker at a luncheon of the Federated Republican Women's Clubs was Miss Mary E. Martin, Republican National Committeewoman, of Maine.

SPANISH REBELS PLAN NEW DRIVE NORTH OF TERUEL

By the Associated Press.

HENDAYE, France, at the Spanish Frontier, Feb. 12.—The insurgent army north of Teruel dug in today on both banks of the Alfambra River and sent cavalry patrols east from newly conquered territory in preparation for a new drive.

The offensive moved so swiftly that the bridges across the Alfambra were left undamaged by the fleeing Government forces, enabling Generalissimo Francisco Franco to move motorized forces and supplies on the heels of his advance lines.

Insurgent military dispatches placed great importance on reported capture yesterday of Zalamea Hill in the Cordoba sector of Southern Spain, calling it the most important position on the Estremadura front.

Government advices admitted the insurgents were attacking in this region, but said Zalamea still was in their possession.

The Government said three mines destroyed a part of the insurgent defenses in University City at Madrid and killed 200 soldiers.

EX-CONVICT SAYS HE SAW PAL KILL WATCHMAN IN '35

Henry Rankins Tells Police Companion Beat Peter Roach to Death When He Interrupted Robbery.

TWO HE NAMES DENY CHARGE

Both Men He Declares Took Part in Coal Yard Looting With Him Arrested and Questioned.

A murder mystery two and one-half years old was apparently cleared yesterday, when the killing of Peter Roach, night watchman, on July 20, 1935, was described to police by Henry Rankins, Negro ex-convict, who signed a statement admitting participation in the robbery which caused the murder.

Rankins said he and another Negro, with a white man who planned and directed the robbery, broke into the S. Seidel Coal & Coke Co. plant, 3915 Duncan avenue, at 2 a. m., and that they were removing tires from the coal company's trucks when the watchman appeared.

He said the white man struck Roach on the head with a cold chisel, after which the three fled. Rankins taking money from the watchman's pocket, and the other Negro taking the victim's watch. Roach's body was found by an employe of the company after daylight.

The white man and the Negro named by Rankins were arrested at their homes, and both denied his accusations. They were questioned last evening by Police Capt. F. X. McCormack at Laclede Avenue Station.

Rankins was arrested early Thursday by Probationary Patrolman James Broderick, who heard glass breaking in the rear of a tavern at Market street and Spring avenue, and pursued three men in an alley, firing in the air. He caught only Rankins, who, because of his record of penitentiary and Workhouse terms for robbery, was questioned by Capt. McCormack. Rankins, 36 years old, said he lived at 3321 Laclede avenue. After prolonged questioning, he made his first admission of complicity in the Roach murder.

The prisoner said he was approached by the white man whom he named, as to a robbery of tires at a place to which the white man would take him, and that he got the other Negro to go along. He said they were promised that they would get $15 each. He said the white man took them to the Seidel plant, and followed them inside after Rankins opened a window.

Rankins told of jacking up a truck and removing the tires, and starting work on another truck, when the watchman came up. He said the white man, directing the robbery, struck the watchman on the head once, then fled ahead of the Negroes, who stopped to search the unconscious man's pockets.

RADIUM GIVEN TO HOSPITAL ATTRACTS $19,000 REVENUE

[illegible] Patients in 3 Years Pay Room Charges and Other Fees, Getting Free Use of It in Treatments.

Radium given to St. Luke's Hospital by an anonymous donor a little more than three years ago has been used by more than 400 persons and has resulted in revenue to the hospital of $19,000, the hospital's annual report, issued Friday, disclosed.

The radium, used in treating 123 persons for cancer and other diseases last year, is used without charge, but patients entering the institution for such treatment have paid more than $19,000 in room rent and other fees.

The radium at the hospital would cost today about half what it did in 1934 when the gift was made. The decline in value is due to newly discovered sources in Canada together with a new process for getting it from sea water.

St. Luke's keeps its 100 milligrams of radium, which today would cost $35 a milligram, in a safe because of its value, in special containers because of its activity. If left in the open, it could affect persons within 10 or 15 feet. Therefore, it is sealed in rubber capsules, placed in a brass container, and the whole locked into a lead cylinder with walls three-quarters of an inch thick. Those who handle it wear rubber gloves and lead-lined rubber aprons.

DOCTOR'S GOOD WILL HELD TO DIE WITH HIM

"Gone With Wind" and Can't Be Sold to Another, Court Rules in Note Case.

A physician's practice and the good will of his patients are entities which die with him and cannot be sold, the St. Louis Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

"Where good will is based solely on professional skill, integrity and the personal ability of an individual," wrote Presiding Judge Jefferson D. Hostetter, "such qualities are not transmissible.

"So when the owner who possessed such traits dies, the qualities so possessed—the good will—is 'gone with the wind,' if we may use the title of a popular Civil War story."

The occasion for the court's ruling was a suit filed by Dr. Charles D. Magee to invalidate a promissory note for $5000 he had given to the widow of Dr. Charles H. Pope in payment for the practice and good will of her husband, who died Nov. 3, 1934.

Dr. Magee and Dr. Pope had occupied adjoining suites in the Railway Exchange Building. Before Dr. Magee discovered that Dr. Pope's practice did not come to him after Dr. Pope's death, he had paid $249 on the note. After discovering that he filed his suit to cancel the note, on the ground that it was given without consideration.

The court sustained that contention and directed Mrs. Pope to refund the $249 which had been paid. Its decision sustained the verdict originally entered in favor of Dr. Magee by Circuit Judge John W. Joynt.

PICKETING GOES ON AT ALTON; AND SO DOES TIMBER-CUTTING

Army Engineers Announce 200 Men Are at Work Clearing Area to Be Flooded by Dam.

While members of the Hodcarriers', Building Contractors and Common Laborers' Union of St. Charles County continued to picket the 2600-acre St. Charles County tract to be flooded when the gates of the Alton dam are closed next spring, work of clearing timber from the area went on briskly yesterday.

It was announced by the Army Corps of Engineers that 200 men were working on the project, begun Wednesday and scheduled to be completed within three months. Most of them are being housed and fed on quarterboats tied up across the river from Alton, to avoid the possibility of clashes with union pickets.

The union contends that only its members should be employed on the job and that the hourly wage scale should be 67½ cents an hour. The engineers' scale is 44 cents on a basis of 48 hours a week, although the laborers work only 44. Representatives of the Corps of Engineers said they were without authority to amend the wage scale or to give exclusive recognition to any union.

INSANE KILLER OF FOUR ESCAPES AT CHESTER

CHESTER, Ill., Feb. 12. — Two criminally insane patients, one of them Paul Harrison, described as a "dangerous hammer killer," escaped tonight from the Illinois Security Hospital.

Dr. James McManus, superintendent of the hospital, said Harrison, 35 years old, was adjudged insane and sentenced to the institution six years ago after he had killed four persons in Chicago.

Peter Florek, 22, also of Chicago, escaped with him. Dr. McManus said the two men were "criminally insane of the worse type."

A searching party of 150 guards and State and county officers was immediately organized.

Dr. McManus said Harrison and Florek had apparently fashioned keys to open their cell doors and two outside doors. He said they "walked out" some time after 7 p. m.

FALLING WOMACKS ASSIGNED TO PRISONS

All But Two of Convicted Accident Fakers Want to Begin Terms at Once

The prisons in which the falling Womacks, accident-faking East St. Louis family, will serve the terms imposed on them last week were designated yesterday, and all but Mrs. Joe Miller and Mrs. John Ehrman indicated a desire to begin their imprisonment at once. Their appeals are pending.

John Womack, 62-year-old head of the tumbling troupe, will serve his four-year term in Leavenworth (Kan.) prison. His wife, three daughters, and the family's friend, Miss Margaret Robertson, are to be imprisoned in the Federal Reformatory for women at Alderson, W. Va. Mrs. Womack and one of her stepdaughters, Mrs. Thomas Felis, are under sentences of three years each. The other women face terms of two years.

Two of the Womack daughters' husbands, Miller and Felis, will be committed to the Federal Industrial Reformatory at El Reno, Ok., for two years each. The third Womack son-in-law, Ehrman, will serve his two-year term in the Lewisburg (Pa.) pricon for first offenders.

The prisons were designated by the office of the United States Attorney-General. Deputy United States Marshall Jerry Baxter told a Post-Dispatch reporter seven of the nine prisoners informed him they wished to be taken to prison immediately as time spent in the St. Clair County jail at Belleville, where they are held, does not count toward the fulfillment of their sentences. Their wish would be granted early this week, Baxter said.

Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Ehrman declared they would seek to be released on $5000 bail bond tomorrow, the deputy marshal said. United States District Judge Fred L. Wham denied appeal bonds to Mr. and Mrs. Womack and Mrs. Felis and fixed bail for the others at $5000.

The defense attorney filed notice of appeal Thursday, alleging technical errors by the Court. The appeals will be heard by the United Statest District Court of Appeals at Chicago.

The Womacks and their friend were convicted Feb. 1 of mail fraud growing out of a long series of personal injury damage claims.

WOMEN IN FRANCE GIVEN CIVIL RIGHTS AS EQUALS OF MEN

Though Yet Unable to Vote, They Are Freed of Law That Kept a Wife a Legal Prisoner.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—The official transcript of the far-reaching civil rights bill for women was published today in the official journal. It has been approved by both the Senate and Chamber of Deputies.

The measure, which recognizes women as the equals of men as well as according them civil rights, now needs only the routine formalities of President Albert Lebrun's signature and final promulgation in the official journal.

The act changes the ancient Napoleonic marital law to read "The husband is the head of the family and has the choice of the family's residence," instead of "The husband owes protection to his wife and his wife obedience to her husband."

Legal Prisoners for Century.

Women are authorized to have bank accounts and sign legal documents, but they cannot engage in business without the consent of their husband.

For more than a century French wives have been the legal prisoners of their husbands under the Napoleonic principle that "nature made women our slaves."

Under the Code Napoleon, promulgated in 1803 and the law of the land until now, a married woman, like a child or an insane person, was denied civil rights.

A wife could have no home but her husband's; she could not acquire or distribute property without the authorization of her husband or of the courts. Virtually all the wife could do was make her own will.

An American woman, or one of any other nationality marrying a Frenchman, heretofore came under the same conditions.

Next Step Right to Vote.

The next step in the feminist campaign for emancipation of women is expected to be concentrated on an effort to obtain the right to vote. Four times the Chamber of Deputies has approved such a bill, but each time the Senate has killed it.

The new law providing that "the married woman has the full exercise of her civil rights" means she may inherit, earn and spend her own money, sign and witness legal documents, plead before courts in her own name and generally share with her husband in support and management of the family. The theory of common property, previously handled alone by the husband, was replaced by that of personal property for each.

WOMAN LOSES $1500 SUIT OVER RAT IN BAG OF FLOUR

Jury Returns Verdict for Luehrmann Milling Firm Which Denied Allegation as Impossible.

The attempt of Mrs. Georgia Fuller to collect $2500 from the Luehrmann Flour Co. for damages alleged to have been suffered when she found a dead rat in a sack of flour packed by the company, came to naught yesterday. A jury in Circuit Judge Eugene L. Padberg's court returned a verdict for the company.

Mrs. Fuller, who lives at 4011 West Pine boulevard, declared in her suit that when she came upon the rat, her false teeth fell out of her mouth and were broken, and also that she was made ill by the experience. The company, which has a plant at 101 Monroe street, denied her allegation and presented evidence calculated to prove that under its system of packing no foreign bodies could get into its flour.

MRS. METTA FAUNTLEROY, 84, DIES IN JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

Widow of the Rev. P. W. Fauntleroy, Who, as Lawyer, Defended Trunk Murderer Maxwell.

News of the death of Mrs. Metta Battle Fauntleroy, widow of the Rev. Philip W. Fauntleroy, former St. Louis criminal lawyer and later an Episcopal clergyman, was received from Jacksonville, Fla., last night by her brother, J. Scott Battle of 7723 Natural Bridge road.

Mrs. Fauntleroy, 84 years old, died Friday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. E. Broward, in Jacksonville. The cause of death was not stated in the message, and the place of burial was not indicated.

The Rev. Mr. Fauntleroy, as a lawyer in the '80s, defended the English murderer known as Arthur Maxwell, hanged in 1888 for the trunk murder of his traveling companion, Charles A. Preller, in the Southern Hotel in 1885. A few years later, Mr. Fauntleroy began preparation for the ministry, and in 1894 he was installed as rector of Mount Calvary Church, then at Grand and Lafayette avenues. In 1896 the church building was wrecked by the tornado, and a rebuilding campaign was halted by parish strife, which led to the minister's resignation. He later held pastorates in the East, and died seven years ago.

Besides her brother and the daughter in Florida, Mrs. Fauntleroy is survived by two daughters, Mrs. George H. Jones of Montgomery, Ala., and Mrs. Metta Boice of New York; a son, Philip W. Fauntleroy of East Orange, N. J., and a nephew, G. Kimball Battle of 13 Washington terrace, St. Louis.

JUDGE DISMISSES SUIT OVER MISSOURI STATE LIFE DEAL

Refuses to Void Sale of Assets Already Passed Upon by State Court in St. Louis.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 12. —United States District Judge J. C. Collet dismissed today a suit by George H. Holley of Memphis, Tenn., asking for a receivership for assets of the former Missouri State Life Insurance Co., which were purchased by the General American Life Insurance Co. of St. Louis. Holley's request that the sale be declared invalid was denied.

Judge Collet held that the propriety of contract under which former State Insurance Superintendent R. E. O'Malley sold the Missouri State assets to the General American in 1933 already had been passed upon by the St. Louis Circuit Court.

Judge Collet declared "the Federal Court would not interfere with the administration of State statutes when it appears that the parties have failed to assert their rights in the State court, or when the action would be contrary to the public interest."

The Judge said the receivership sought by Holley probably would cost many times the amount of his claim—slightly more than $6000 for insurance commissions. Holley, general agent for the Missouri State Life in Tennessee and Mississippi, from 1921 to 1928, had filed a similar suit in St. Louis but it was dismissed recently by United States District Judge Moore, on a jurisdictional question. Holley's attorneys then filed the case here, naming State Insurance Superintendent George A. S. Robertson a co-defendant.

DEAN F. B. MUMFORD RETIRES AT MISSOURI U.

Head of Agriculture School for 33 Years; M. F. Miller to Succeed Him.

The retirement of Frederick B. Mumford after 33 years as dean of the University of Missouri College of Agriqulture was announced yesterday by the Board of Curators following a meeting at Hotel Jefferson.

Dr. Mumford, known as an early champion of science as an ally of the farmer to leaders in agriculture throughout the United States as well as to thousands of graduates of the Missouri school, requested that he be retired from active service, it was said by President Frederick A. Middlebush. The retirement will become effective next Sept. 1 when he will be suceeded by Assistant Dean Merritt F. Miller.

After four years as assistant professor of agriculture at Michigan State Agricultural College at East Lansing, the oldest agricultural college in the United States, from which he was graduated, Dr. Mumford went to the University of Missouri in 1895 to become one of the faculty of five members.

During the World War, he was chairman of the Missouri State Council of Defense and Federal Food Administrator. He is the author of textbooks, articles for scientific journals and encyclopedias and numerous bulletins on agricultural subjects.

Prof. Miller joined the Missouri College of Agriculture faculty in 1904 and was made assistant dean in 1929.

Curators Study Protest of Union Printers.

The Board of Curators took under advisement the protests of 11 union printing trades leaders against the award by the board of a contract to the Stephens Printing Co. of Columbia, a non-union shop. Henry Porth of Jefferson City, secretary of the Missouri State Allied Printing Trades Association, conducted the protest at the meeting, which was in executive session. The contract will be between $30,000 and $40,000, depending on the volume of printing.

The board also discussed means of refinancing stadium and field house bonds. Of the $120,000 stadium bond issue, $80,000 is in default. Nothing has been paid on the principal for four years, Leslie Cowan, secretary, said.

Slate-Making Reported, But C I O Head Says He Is Not Linked "With Any Party as Such."

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—John L. Lewis, head of the C I O, said today he was "not a politician" and was "not associated with any political party as such."

"I am not a party to any understanding or agreement or commitment to any political party in Pennsylvania, or to any candidate for public office."

Pennsylvania was interested in the C I O leader said labor in Lieutenant-Governor Thomas Kennedy, who is international secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America. CREDITORS URGE SALE OF GELLER, WARD FIRM

Approval of the proposed sale of merchandise and accounts receivable of the Geller, Ward & Hasner Hardware Co., to the Shapleigh Hardware Co., for $95,823 was requested of Federal Judge George H. Moore in a report filed yesterday by the creditors' committee in corporate reorganization proceedings.

At the same time, Samuel V. Ward, president of Geller, Ward & Hasner and its trustee in the attempted reorganization, filed a protest against the price, declaring it should be $103,448. Both he and the Shapleigh company made inventories of the merchandise.

It was agreed in the deal for sale that the Shapleigh concern would pay 60 per cent of the inventoried value of merchandise and 80 per cent of the face value of accounts receivable. On this basis, the prospective purchaser proposed to give $55,798 for the merchandise and $42,955 for the accounts, but Ward asserted the allowance should be $57,272, less certain minor deductions, for the goods, and $46,438 for the accounts.

The chief difference in the case of merchandise was in the freight allowance, which Ward placed at 2 per cent but the Shapleigh concern put at 1 per cent. There were also some slight differences as to whether certain items were valueless. As to the accounts, Ward declared the proposal did not include $1369 of notes receivable and $2985 of suspense accounts receivable.

Comprising the creditors' committee were J. M. Peterson, J. N. Moylan and F. M. Lambin.

The Geller, Ward & Hasner company, which operated a retail store at 414 North Fourth street, stated its assets as $426,000 and its liabilities as $195,000, in its reorganization petition, filed in August, 1935, but admitted that it could not pay debts as they matured. It was announced last August that creditors having a majority of general claims, totaling about $180,000, had approved the proposed sale of assets. Secured claims, which would be paid first, were an $8000 mortgage on the company's warehouse at Second street and Lucas avenue and about $4500 in taxes on this property. It was indicated that holders of $487,000 in par and book value of stock probably would receive nothing.

JOBLESS WANT VOICE IN RELIEF CONFERENCE

Workers' Alliance Asks Mayor Dickmann for Invitation to Discussion.

Mayor Dickmann was asked yesterday by the Workers' Alliance, organization of the unemployed, to invited representatives of their group to the relief conference he will hold some day this week.

Means of obtaining additional relief funds are to be sought at the conference. The Mayor agreed to summon the meeting after receiving appeals from the Social Planning Council, the League of Women Voters, and other organizations concerned because of the shortage of relief funds.

Mrs. Alice W. Koken, treasurer of the Workers' Alliance, made public a telegram the organization had sent to President Roosevelt outlining the relief crises in St. Louis.

"Figures from the C I O office estimate the need for 25,000 additional jobs," the telegram said. "The figure from R. M. Bristol of the city administration, is 18,000 applicants seeking work at the Missouri Employment Agency. Only 7000 have been certified with W P A by the Social Security office within the last 60 days, 1800 of these still unassigned. The figures from the relief administration give a total of 25,000 people on relief, with an additional 12,000 applications made in the last 60 days. Of these 12,000 only 1400 have been accepted. Two hundred known evictions have occurred between Oct. 1 and Jan. 1, according to the relief office. All families on relief rolls are in danger of eviction."

The only direct relief money now available in St. Louis is the $155,000 allocated to the city by the State Social Security Commission for February. This makes possible average monthly allowances of $6.17 to the nearly 25,000 persons on the relief roll. No rents have been paid for those on relief since the city's relief fund was exhausted last September.

In addition, this W P A district, which includes the city and county, now employs about 21,800 men and women. The monthly payroll for them is about $1,329,300.

NEGRO LEADER REPORTS RACE RELATIONSHIPS ARE IMPROVING

President of Wilberforce University Speaks Over Radio in Connection With Inter-Racial Week.

Improvement of race relationship, particularly in the South, was reported by D. Ormonde Walker, president of Wilberforce University for Negroes, Wilberforce, O., in a Community Forum address last night over Radio Station KSD.

Speaking in connection with the observance of Inter-Racial Week, a national program to promote better understanding between the races, Walker said there were 12,000,000 Negroes in the country whos lives "are directly wrapped up with the social fabric out of which America is made." He said it would be impossible to separate them from the body politic of the nation.

A chorus of 12 students of the university, who will present a recital Tuesday at St. Paul's African Methodist Episcopal Church, also took part in the program.

EATON QUESTIONED ON FIRM'S COLLAPSE

Tells S E C Continental's Assets Dropped After He Lost Control to Banks.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland financier, told the Securities and Exchange Commission today that Continental Shares, Inc., was "flourishing" when he and W. R. Burwell lost control of the concern to a group of Cleveland banks in 1931. Eaton was chairman and Burwell president.

At the time the banks took over, Eaton said, Continental carried $100,000,000 of assets on its books whereas in 1933, two years later, when the corporation went into receivership, its assets had diminished to $16,000,000.

Eaton testified that the difference between the assets in 1931 and in 1933 could be traced to bank policies which, although started in good faith, failed "to perform." S E C officials sought to show, however, that the higher valuation represented "watered stock."

Eaton, appearing for the first time before the commission, presented a physician's certificate that he was ill when previously called. Burwell testified some time ago.

Bank Foreclosed Loan.

The Chase National Bank of New York foreclosed in 1933 on a loan of $30,000,000 which the corporation had made to buy securities of Foreign Utilities, Ltd., a Toronto concern in which Eaton testified he and his wife held 26 per cent of the stock.

Carlisle Boulton-Smith, S E C counsel, questioned Eaton concerning relations of Continental, Foreign Utilities and Otis & Co., of New York, investment bankers. He said Eaton owned 15 per cent of the stock of the first, 26 per cent of the second and 40 per cent of the third.

Boulton-Smith sought to show that transactions intended to "bail out" Otis & Co. in the fall of 1930 were affected through a close tie-up of authority and finances in the three firms. The New York Stock Exchange had asked Otis to post $12,000,000 of new capital, he said. He said Continental borrowed $30,000,000 from the Chase Bank and $5,000,000 from the Union Trust of Cleveland and paid the money out to Foreign Utilities which in turn paid Otis $33,000,000. Shortly after, he said, Otis retired bank loans of an equal amount. He asked Eaton if there was something "hasty" in this series of acts.

Eaton replied the three-way deal in securities had been shaping up for more than a year and that there was no "pressure."

Tells of "Indiscreet" Speech.

He said an "indiscreet" speech he made before the Cleveland Bar Association in 1931 was a main factor in his giving up control of Continental. In that speech, he said, he insisted there should be 12 financial centers in the country instead of one (Wall street) and urged that Cleveland and other municipalities retain the financial control of their own enterprises.

"Some day," Eaton remarked, "I'm going to show that speech to President Roosevelt, because he suggested the same things about local control of money in a Jackson day speech. I was seven years ahead of him."

He said it seemed "the thing to do" for him to quit Continental because of the "tussle" he was having with certain Cleveland financiers over his views.

"The banks were very powerful at that time and commanded enormous confidence," he said, adding that those who criticised him "could not find a thing on which to attack his successors."

'BUSINESS DECLINE RATHER A DOMESTIC AFFAIR'

U. S. Chamber of Commerce Contrasts Slump Here With Condition in Other Countries.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The Chamber of Commerce of the United States said today the business decline which began in September "has been rather a domestic affair." In its periodical Washington review, it said:

"While the index number for industrial production was falling in the United States from 98.3 in August to 75.6 in November, it was rising in Canada from 99.8 to 104.8. In industrial production the United Kingdom seems to have ended the year on about the level with which the year began, represented by an index number of 122. France at least held her own at the end of the year, at the index number of 72 with which the year began. Between August and October the index for Germany rose from 119 to 124, and for Italy from 93 to 107. Between August and November the index number for Sweden rose from 151 to 154, and for Norway from 132 to 142. These index numbers are based upon the average for 1929 as 100."

The chamber said there were reasons to believe that, if business conditions could be free from domestic influences outside the business field, developments would be favorable.

EAST SIDE LEVEE JOB'S PAY DISPUTE SETTLED

Mediation Board Says W P A Agrees to Union's Wage Scale of 90 Cents an Hour.

Settlement of the labor controversy that has held up work on the $200,000 Federal undertaking for improvement of flank levees in the East Side Levee and Sanitary District since Jan. 24, was announced last night by C. E. Jenks, secretary of the East St. Louis Mediation Board.

Jenks said that Charles E. Miner, Illinois W P A director, had agreed to pay W P A laborers engaged in preliminary clearance work 90 cents an hour, as demanded by the Hodcarriers, Builders and Common Laborers' Union of East St. Louis. The union, whose pickets twice prevented attempts to begin work, did not request that its members be given employment in the clearance work, but demanded that the union scale be maintained.

Specifications for the preliminary work called for a wage of 50 cents an hour, with workers to be supplied from the East St. Louis relief rolls and their wages to be paid from W P A funds. Under the agreement, the W P A maximum wage of $52 a month for each worker will be maintained by reducing working hours and hiring additional workers.

The clearance work, which must be completed to permit use of power shovels, was to have begun Jan. 10, but workers were not furnished until Jan. 24, when eight men appeared but were called off the job by the union. Those who reported for work at that time were union members on relief rolls. A second attempt to begin work Feb. 2 ended when union members prevented W P A workers from reaching the levee site.

The work is expected to begin early this week at Prairie du Pont Creek, with about 30 workers employed. The East St. Louis Mediation Board is a voluntary body.

Text of Japan's Reply to U. S. Protest at Infringement on Interests

Disrespect to Flag Denied—"Mistake" if Buildings Owned by Nationals of Third Powers Were Entered.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Feb. 12.—The following is the text of the note handed to United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew today by Foreign Minister Koki Hirota replying to a protest regarding infringements on American interests in China:

The Japanese Government steadfastly have pursued their policy as repeatedly declared on various occasions, of respecting as far as possible the rights and interests in China of the United States and other third Powers.

In view of the unfortunate incident that occurred last December (sinking of the United States gunboat Panay), they have again issued as your excellency knows by my note of Dec. 24 most strict orders to Japanese authorities in China to devote attention still more closely than before, to the matter of those rights and interests.

It is therefore with the profoundest regret that despite these steps taken by them the Japanese Government have received the above mentioned note of your excellency.

Insufficiency of Forces.

Orders were immediately sent to Japanese authorities on the spot to conduct thorough-going investigations, as a result of which the following circumstances have so far become clear:

In Nanking, various cases have been found which are considered as having occurred on account of inadequate control in the city due to unavoidable insufficiency of the force detailed to the duty of protecting the rights and interests of third Powers as well as to general police purposes, the insufficiency being caused by frequent movements of troops to the front lines, the shifting of units and the work of clearing the city of remnants of defeated Chinese forces and of lawless Chinese elements.

The Japanese Government, therefore, have once more dispatched rigorous instructions on Jan. 15 and Jan. 20 with the object of making their above-mentioned orders thoroughly understood by all the authorities concerned, and, in the meantime, the highest command of the fighting services have with extraordinary concern been doing their utmost for satisfactory settlement of the affairs in question by causing the authorities on the spot to establish the facts in every case as clearly and promptly as possibly and then deal appropriately with the responsible parties according to military law and to make restitution for damages.

As there remain certain points requiring further investigation, Foreign Office authorities and army officers on the spot now earnestly are endeavoring to establish the facts in each case.

Compensation for Loss.

As regards compensation for loss and damage, it is the intention of the Government to let such matters be settled as far as possible on the spot and for this purpose they have been maintaining intimate contact with the American authorities there.

I trust that your excellency is already aware of these matters.

Regarding Hangchow, Japanese forces which occupied the city Dec. 22, found their supplies from the rear temporarily cut and they were obliged to obtain provisions on the spot which necessarily had to be requisitioned owing to the plight of the inhabitants.

Prior to their entry into Hangchow, Japanese military authorities had given strict instructions to the commanders of all units regarding the protection of the rights and interests of third Powers and, furthermore, at the time of their entry, they sent gendarmes to post notices on buildings belonging to nationals of third Powers in order to insure their protection.

Nevertheless, in view of the fact that requisitioning provisions had to be effected at night with fighting still in progress, they might have failed to recognize such notices and flags, and, furthermore, by reason of the fact that buildings of third Powers were intermingled with those of Chinese and that there were no owners to be found in the houses in question, it is possible that some requisitioning squads made mistakes in identifying these objects.

At the same time, the fact should be noted that there were at the time numerous cases of looting and destruction committed by the Chinese rabble, taking advantage of the prevalent confusion.

The difficulty of ascertaining the facts in circumstances such as these can easily be understood.

In the circumstances stated above, if there were cases of Japanese soldiers at Hangchow entering by mistake houses owned by nationals of third Powers, the purpose of such entry was either the requisition of food or search for remnants of Chinese troops as a necessary measure incident to the conduct of military operations.

Military authorities as a result of rigid investigation have discovered no evidence to show that anything whatever other than foodstuffs had been removed from these houses.

Wants Data About Flags.

Protest is made in your excellency's note on the part of the United States Government on the ground that they had received reports alleging that there occurred improper acts on the part of Japanese soldiers toward American flags. Deeming it greatly regrettable, if indeed there have been such occurrences, the Japanese authorities on the spot are requesting American authorities in Shanghai and Nanking to submit concrete data on these cases, and have been conducting thoroughgoing investigations regarding the matter.

With reference to the report that on Dec. 13 Japanese soldiers at Wuhu pulled down and threw into the Yangtze River an American flag from a Chinese boat belonging to the American-owned General Hospital at Wuhu, investigations have been made among the troops which were in that city at the time of the reported incident and as a result it has been established that no Japanese soldiers either had been involved in or were aware of the occurrence of an incident of this sort.

Besides, an American connected with said hospital is reported to have stated that although he had, in circumstances then existing, presumed the case to be due to an act of Japanese soldiers, he had by no means actually witnessed facts such as the throwing of an American flag into the river.

Earnestly Investigating.

Of these facts, I believe, your excellency is aware since they already have been communicated to the American Consul-General in Shanghai by the Japanese Consul-General.

Authorities have been earnestly conducting further investigations in other places than Wuhu, but so far no evidence has been found. The Japanese Government, with a view especially of bringing home to the minds of all troops the importance of respecting the American national emblem, have ordered their instructions in that regard to be transmitted to very unit in China.

In view of the circumstances stated above the Japanese Government are studying how they can elaborate effective and adequate measures that can as soon as possible be put in force so as to put a definite stop to any occurrence of similar events.

Other Steps Taken.

Meanwhile, they have taken in addition to the various measures already in force, other steps including firstly, the dispatch to the spot of a higher officer from Tokio in order to insure full execution of instructions mentioned above; secondly, the stationing of special officers at important points in China to take charge of matters relating to the rights and interests of third Powers; and, thirdly, reinforcement of military police in China.

I beg your excellency to convey to your Government the earnest intention of the Japanese Government as stated above to devote their best efforts toward preventing any recurrence of these incidents in the future.

I avail myself of this opportunity to renew to your excellency the assurance of my highest consideration.

Brotherhood Officer Says Action at Turbulent Detroit Meeting Is Illegal.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Feb. 12.—The United Automobile Workers of America said the Ford Brotherhood of America, Inc., an independent union, voted today to disband and join the U A W A, but an F B A officer declared the action was illegal.

The announcement was made by Richard T. Frankensteen, assistant president of the U A W A, which is affiliated with the C I O, and director of its Ford Organizing Committee. Raymond W. Labar, Brotherhood attorney, said the vote on U A W A affiliation was illegal and could be regarded only as a resolution.

The F B A claims a membership of 21,000, but only from 200 to 300 persons were present at this afternoon's boisterous meeting, at which several persons swung fists.

John D. McDowell, Brotherhood chairman, and Labar said the meeting was called to consider relief for unemployed members, but Mike Dragan, a U A W A organizer who was present, insisted its purpose was to vote on joining his union.

Earl Milton, a representative of the International Association of Machinists, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, was explaining his organization to the F B A members, at the invitation of McDowell, when he suddenly was interrupted.

Dragan charged McDowell with advocating that F B A members join the A. F. of L., and the meeting voted to remove McDowell as chairman and elected a man who refused to reveal his identity to newsmen. He appointed Chester Mullins secretary.

McDowell protested and a dozen men surrounded him, poking him and shoving him from the platform. The new chairman then took charge.

Mullins called upon McDowell to surrender his membership lists, and said plans would be made for another meeting, at which the issue of joining the U A W A would be submitted to the entire membership. Labar contended that this would be necessary to make today's action effective.

McDowell had refused to permit the meeting to vote on a motion to disband and affiliate with the U A W A. The vote to unseat him followed.

"This meeting has no authority to vote affiliation," McDowell told newsmen. "I only notified 303 members who I had been informed were unemployed and needed relief. You could see what chance I had of opposing them. They were ready to kill me."

VANDENBERG SAYS G. O. P. CAN WIN IN 1938 AND 1940

But, He Adds, Party May Have to Alter Identity; Again Forecasts Political Realignment.

HE LAYS SLUMP TO ADMINISTRATION

Assails 'Washington Rule of Business' and Offers 8-Point Plan to Restore Confidence.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—Asserting that Lincoln himself was "a coalitionist when temporary emergency required," Senator Vandenberg (Rep.) Michigan, tonight repeated his forecast of a realignment of American political forces and said "we can win in 1938: we can win in 1940."

In a Lincoln's birthday address before the Middlesex (Republican) Club here, Vandenberg attacked the administration for what he called "this Roosevelt recession." He asked for a show-down between "collectivism and the American system," and proposed an "immediate" eight-point program.

Mentioned himself as a possible Republican presidential candidate in 1940, Vandenberg called among other things for a balanced budget, repeal of the surplus profits tax, a "decent chance" for small business, a side-stepping of entangling foreign alliances and a balance between capital and labor.

Willing to Alter Party's Identity.

He indicated plainly he would not oppose a change of identity of the Republican party if necessary. Complimenting "the patriotism of many a sound Jeffersonian Democrat," he said his own attitude toward Republicanism could be paraphrased by Lincoln's words on another subject. Then he added:

"If I could save the American system without altering the Republican identity, I would do it; if I could save it by entirely altering this identity, I would do it; if I could save it by partially altering its identity, I also would do that. But I would save the American system, and that I believe to be the uncompromising attitude of at least 51 per cent of the American people if they ever get a realistic chance to speak."

Vandenberg declared there had been too much "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde-Park" in the Government's dealing with business and asserted "occasional, dramatic gestures" of executive good will had been nullified by "demonstrations of hatred" for the American system.

"Door Locked Against Prosperity."

"We are in the ante-room to prosperity—with the door needlessly locked against this happy destiny," he said.

"What's wrong? The American system is shaking with the jitters, if not something worse. It has been intermittently set aside in favor of dubious sorties into Socialism. The Roosevelt pattern (if it can be called a pattern more than 24 consecutive hours at a time)—is the pattern of Federal paternalism.

"It is the pattern of centralized dictation—whether in business or in Government. It is disclosed in the biggest and most costly bureaucracy with which a free people was ever cursed. It is disclosed in the greatest concentration of executive authority in the life-time of the republic.

"It is disclosed in a constant effort and purpose to rule American business from Washington in general and the White House in particular. It is disclosed in a studied undertaking to wreck our precious 'checks and balances' and to make executive authority supreme. It is disclosed in persistent hymns of hate against the business world. . ."

Lays Slump to Government.

Vandenberg said that the Government itself and not business "must take the primary blame" for current business conditions. He added:

"The most ghastly of all the nonsense thrown up in this addled era is the grotesque notion, encouraged by many an administration apologist, that business itself has deliberately planned and precipitated a new depression just for the sake of embarrassing the President. If this were true, it would be the most spectacular and gigantic suicide known to man.

"In listed securities alone—I record it with no pleasure—the loss in five months has approximated $25,000,000,000 and the victims include pretty much all of the so-called 'economic royalists' in and out of hectic, heckling Harold's 60 sinister families. The idea that they would pay any such cruel price, out of their own hides, just for the doubtful joy of badgering Mr. Roosevelt makes Gulliver and Munchausen sound far more conservative even than Maine and Vermont. It insults the intelligence of little children."

Just before outlining his eight-point "immediate" program, Vandenberg emphasized in his speech that "my party for tomorrow must be rationally social-minded" in its aspect toward capitalism, which, he said, is strongest when the most people have a stake in it.

He outlined his program in part as follows:

1. An effort to "restore confidence in the public credit" by balancing the budget, which, he added, would not be easy, "particularly for those who have found perpetuated political power in using the public treasury as a campaign chest and in solidifying minority pressure groups which will too often attend elections hereafter as they would an auction sale."

2. An effort to "restore confidence in the Democratic process," to which he added that "this is not a one-man country."

3. An effort to "restore confidence that honest private business shall have a fair inducement and a decent chance—free from devastating Government competition — free from needlessly meddlesome Government regulation—free from punitive taxation—free from silly price-fixing—free from an everlasting barrage of insult and calumny."

4. Repeal of the surplus profits tax so that business could build up reserves, to which he added that, "Meanwhile, the crazy idea of trying to tax industrialists like Henry Ford out of business should be relegated to the dark ages from whence it came."

On Labor and Capital.

5. An effort "to restore confidence that neither labor nor capital shall exploit or tyrannize the other."

6. A need of "confidence that we shall not be drawn into any avoidable wars or into any entangling alliances which bind us to collective international action," adding: "We are not isolationists. But we are insulationists. We shall protect ourselves. But we shall not police the world."

7. A "need to restore confidence that the letter and spirit of the Constitution of the United States is the inviolable monitor of all our plans and purposes."

8. A "need to create confidence in the humaneness of our own aspirations," rejecting the thinking of both the "extreme right and extreme left."

SENATOR BRIDGES GIVES G. O. P. PROGRAM

Tells What Republicans Should Do to End 'Depression of 1937.'

By the Associated Press.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 12.—United States Senator H. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire outlined a 10-point Republican program tonight to end what he termed "the depression of 1937."

In an address prepared for delivery at Western Michigan's annual Lincoln day banquet, Bridges asserted that "we do not want to go back to 1932, but neither do we want to continue down the paths of New Deal destruction."

Reminding his audience that this is a year of congressional elections and asserting that it would be a "Republican year," he outlined these points which he said the Republican party should adopt to "save America":

Permanent repeal of the tax on undistributed profits and modification of the tax on capital gains.

Immediate amendment of the National Labor Relations Act.

Amendment of the Social Security Act "so that payments of both employer and employe shall be on a pay-as-you-go basis."

Adoption of a "truly liberal" Republican wage-hour law.

A constitutional amendment to eliminate child labor and interim legislation to forbid interstate commerce in products of child labor.

Repeal of the present Neutrality Act and passage of "a simple, positive neutrality act in the interests of real neutrality and peace."

Reassertion of congressional authority to control tariff rates or congressional action to define levels below which tariffs should not be reduced.

A "sound farm program containing provisions for soil conservation, development of marketing facilities and new uses for agricultural products."

Reorganization of the executive branch of the Government, along with opposition to "any tampering by the President with the independent commissions or with the office of Comptroller-General, who is solely responsible to Congress."

Balancing of the Federal budget by curtailment of expenditures, gradual return of relief to the states, reduction in Government agencies and the Government payroll.

LINCOLN CELEBRATION AT SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

Judge Evan A. Evans Tells of Emancipator's Faith in Power of Truth.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 12.—Judge Evan A. Evans of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago declared tonight that only the greed and selfishness of the people could cause a decay of the constitution.

"When our citizens are sordid and selfish, seeking soft snaps and shirking responsibilities, the constitution runs on the shoals," he said in a speech prepared for delivery at a meeting of the Abraham Lincoln Association in commemoration of the civil war president's 129th birthday anniversary.

At a ceremony erlier today, he original "A. Lincoln" door plate was placed again on the modest frame dwelling that was the only home Lincoln ever owned. Gov. Henry Horner revealed that the donor of the doorplate which was missing for several decades, was Jesse Jay Ricks, former Taylorville (Ill.) schoolboy who rose to the presidency of the Union Carbide and Carbon Corporation.

Judge Evans on Lincoln.

Judge Evans, in his address declared that there always "are those who would undermine the constitution and still others who would use it for selfish purposes." He assailed as "the cheapest thing in history" the individual who "wraps himself in the flag or in the Constitution and proclaims himself a Class A patriot."

"Genuine respect for the Constitution can never be created by lip tributes or meaningless ceremonials," he said. "The test of belief in and support of it can be found in service by the citizens. It is an instrument of man, depending on the sincerity and integrity of the citizens for its growth and strength."

Judge Evans told of Lincoln's efforts to mould public opinion on the slavery question, asserting that the Emancipator's political philosophy was that the weight of righteous argument ultimately would prevail.

"Yet in contemporaneous political questions of the day, we fail entirely to visualize public opinion and its value and power in an intelligent democracy," he said.

He described Lincoln as the type of leader who urged others to adopt his convictions. "Unfortunately there is the other kind," he added, "who inquires of voters which way they want to go and then offers himself to lead them thither."

Lincoln was a dreamer, he said, who had the capacity for making his dreams come true.

Memorial Services at Tomb.

Memorial services also were held today at Lincoln's tomb, during which wreaths were placed in behalf of President Roosevelt and the American Legion.

Daniel J. Doherty, National Commander of the Legion, who led a pilgrimage to the shrine, called for a "return to the principles of Lincoln and those of our forebears."

Urging "eteral vigilance," Doherty declared that the "sivae philosophies" of foreign dictators were "infiltering our nation, finding ready soil in ignorance and indifference."

Walter R. Prosser, Commandant of the Sixth Field Artillery Brigade at Chicago, placed the wreath in behalf of President Roosevelt, "as a symbol of gratefol affection, enduring reverence and abiding memory." Other wreaths were placed by the Legion, the Auxiliary, Forty and Eight and Eight and Forty.

NEW RUMANIAN CABINET DECIDES ON DRASTIC STEPS

Acts to Silence Opposition, Reorganize Government and Rehabilitate Economic System.

KING PRESIDES AT MEETING

Easing of Anti-Jewish Restrictions Indicated—14-Point Program of Proposed Changes Outlined.

By the Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Feb. 12.—King Carol tonight presided at a meeting of Rumania's new cabinet which decided on drastic steps to silence opposition, reorganize the government and rehabilitate the nation's economic system.

The cabinet's decision elaborated a 14-point program promulgated earlier in the day promising the people justice, and prosperity under the government of Premier Miron Cristea, Patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox Church.

The successors of the anti-Semitic Government of Ex-Premier Octavian Goga disclosed three important policies:

A commission will be appointed to study administrative reorganization of the government.

A commission will be appointed to draft a new constitution replacing the document voided by Carol when Goga was removed from office.

"Harmful or useless" newspapers and periodicals will be suppressed as well as all political party activity.

Economic Reorganization.

Meanwhile studies were started to outline an economic reorganization affecting all branches of Rumanian industry, commerce and agriculture.

The economic program of the new cabinet, including seven former premiers of Centrist and Liberal beliefs, called for raising the standard of living for farmers, laborers, and traders, increased taxation of the wealthy, stabilization of the currency and a balanced budget.

These points were incorporated in the 14 points made public during the day which also pledged continuation of traditional friendship with Great Britain and France which had slackened during Goga's Italo-German regime.

A controlled emigration of Rumania's surplus Jewish population also was part of the Government's plans though there was evidence the bitter anti-Jewish restrictions imposed by Goga would be eased. There are about 900,000 Jews in Rumania.

It was announced "Rumania will attempt to make international agreements with other countries which claim a surplus Jewish population, to provide a new fatherland in which Jews would like to live, and that investigation of 'illegal citizenships acquired since the World War would be continued.

Charges Murder Plot.

While the Cabinet was formulating its new program a priest, Gregori Kristesku, member of Buchar-

Charges Murder Plot.

While the Cabinet was formulating its new program a priest, Gregori Kristesku, member of Bucharest University's theology faculty, publicly charged that Goga's Foreign Minister, Istrate Micescu, had tried to arrange for the murder of Fascist leader Cornelius Codreanu, head of Rumania's Iron guard.

He filed his charge with the public prosecutor, alleging Micescu promised a prefect a "remunerative career" if the prefect would kill Codreanu in the "high interests of the state."

The priest's allegations could not be checked immediately, but it was learned the Fascist leader was in hiding at the home of trusted friends.

Dr. Cristea's Cabinet tonight ruled that the Iron guard oath of loyalty to Codreanu henceforth would be illegal.

Other Decisions Reached.

New decisions reached at tonight's cabinet session in addition to those named above are:

Abolition of regulations which made it impossible for judges and state officials to be removed from office.

Military police may enter university property without permission of rectors.

Political party activity will be punished.

Government functionaries will be forbidden to have "unattached posts."

Government officials and priests will not be allowed to participate in political demonstrations.

Train Wreck in Which Engineer Was Killed

ENGINEER IS KILLED IN M & O TRAIN WRECK

Leaving St. Louis 35 minutes late Friday night, the Mobile & Ohio passenger train No. 15, known as the Gulf Coast Special, was wrecked at 1:15 a. m. yesterday at Murphysboro, Ill. The engineer was killed and the fireman hurt.

Robert Minton of Murphysboro, the engineer, died at a hospital there, seven hours after the accident, of burns and other injuries. He was 61 years old.

The fireman, Ernest Jones, also of Murphysboro, was scalded and bruised. The locomotive, tender and three baggage and mail cars left the rails and turned over. No passenger car was upset and no passengers were injured.

Derailment was attributed to an open switch. Murphysboro is about 75 miles southeast of St. Louis. Mobile, Ala., was the train's destination.

SCIENTISTS END STUDY OF SUN IN EGYPT

Smithsonian Institution Party Back After 5 Years on Mountain in Desert.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—An expedition of the Smithsonian Institution has returned from a five-year stay in the desert of Egypt.

The expedition, composed of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred F. Moore and Alfred G. Frieland, spent five years on the peak of the highest mountain on the Mount Sinai Peninsula, making daily observations of the sun's heat.

The group conducted its observations at Mount St. Katherine because it was the highest and dryest habitable spot in the Eastern Hemisphere. It was also less dusty than other desert areas, thus assuring better observation.

The scientists worked with priests and monks of the Greek Orthodox Church. Near the buildings of the solar observatory is a monastery, the history of which runs back almost to Biblical times. It is part of the shrine of St. Katherine of Alexandria, an early martyr.

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the institution, says one of the reasons for abandoning the observatory was the difficulty of maintaining it during winter months. Even though it is in the heart of the desert, it is covered with snow and ice for many months and supplies can be transported only on the backs of the observatory's employes.

Studies of the data gathered will, Smithsonian scientists hope, greatly correlate changes in solar radiation with variations in the earth's weather and thus provide a new method of weather forecasting.

COMMITTEE APPROVES AUDITOR GENERAL PLAN

Favors Abolishing Civil Service Commission in Reorganization Bill.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Congress would keep a hand in the appointment of budgetary and accounting officers under a Government re-organization bill approved by a Senate Committee today. A special committee recommended the abolition of the office of Comptroller General, to be replaced by an Auditor General. The Auditor General would be chosen by a joint Congressional Committee.

Another proposal for changing the existing set-up would subject Presidential appointment of the Budget Director to Senate confirmation. At present the Budget Director is an officer of the Treasury Department, whose appointment does not require confirmation. The re-organization measure would establish that office as an independent agency.

President Roosevelt, in his re-organization message to congress a year ago, urged Congress to provide a "genuine independent post-audit of all fiscal transactions by an Auditor General and restore to the executive department complete responsibility" for accounts.

Senator Byrnes (Dm.), South Carolina, chairman of the special committee, said the new re-organization bill would provide for "current" audits of accounts by the Auditor General.

The bill would abolish the present Civil Service Commission and provide for appointment by the President of a Civil Service Administrator for a 15-year term, subject to Senate confirmation. A Civil Service advisory board, which would consult with the Administrator and advise both the President and Congress on policy matters, also would be provided.

WHAT'S ALL THIS about the NEW FHA?

ANSWER: FEDERAL HOUSING ACT—which is an effort on the part of the government to make it easy for owners to improve their properties. This really means that an organization such as SEARS, ROEBUCK sells you what you need to make your improvements. Actually you do not do any business with the government at all—Uncle Sam simply makes this low-cost credit possible instead of your using your ready cash.

QUESTION: What improvements can an owner make on his property?
ANSWER: He can add a new bathroom; put in new floors; modernize his plumbing add a porch; put on a new roof; put on new siding; repair his house inside and out; install a stoker, or a furnace; or an oil burner; build a garage. In fact, money can be loaned to an owner to do anything that will permanently improve his home or business property.

QUESTION: Who are eligible to improve their properties under F H A?
ANSWER: Anyone who owns property and has a regular income and a good credit record.

QUESTION: How long can an owner have to pay under F H A?
ANSWER: Dependent on the size of the improvement, he can be allowed as long as five years, making payments on a monthly basis.

QUESTION: What does an F H A loan really cost?
ANSWER: Never over $5 a hundred dollars ($100) for each year during the period of the loan.

QUESTION: How much cash do you have to have available to get an F H A loan?
ANSWER: Although you do not have to make any down payments, it is advisable to pay as much money as you can at the beginning so that your monthly payments and interest will be reduced accordingly.

QUESTION: Are F H A loans limited to certain amounts?
ANSWER: You can borrow as little as $60.00 or as much as $2500.00.

QUESTION: Where should I go to make arrangements for an F H A loan?
ANSWER: Naturally, (pardon our modesty) we suggest that you go to one of the Sears, Roebuck stores in St. Louis—or across the river in East St. Louis We take for granted that you know that you get MORE FOR YOUR MONEY at SEARS.

If there are any additional questions that you would like to ask, see our Mr. Daut at our Kingshighway Store, our Mr. De Greeff at our Grand Avenue Store, or Mr. Herchenroeder at East St. Louis—they are our F H A representatives in the St. Louis area.

FORD EMPLOYE SAYS C I O DELAYED VOTE ON STRIKE

Testifies in Company's Attempt to Prove Ballot Was Taken at Surprise Meeting.

An attempt to prove that a strike at the St. Louis assembly plant of the Ford Motor Co. was voted at an unannounced meeting on Nov. 7 of the C I O's United Automobile Workers after union officers had refused to permit balloting on the strike question at two earlier meetings, was made yesterday at a National Labor Relations Board hearing.

Ford counsel declared the testimony of Dewey S. Miller, a welder at the plant and a former member of the C I O local, who asserted that he attended the earlier meetings but received no notice of the one on Nov. 7, would be corroborated by many other employes.

Miller, the company's thirty-seventh witness, was the first to give testimony supporting assertions of Daniel Bartlett, Ford attorney, that the Nov. 7 meeting was "packed" with General Motors employes. Bartlett has declared that fewer than 150 Ford employes attended the meeting, which was followed by an announcment that only 16 of the more than 600 persons voting were against the strike.

Says Vote Was Delayed.

At the close of the second meeting, on Oct. 26, Miller testified, William Kimberling, president of the local, announced abruptly that no vote would be taken, although the meeting was called for that purpose. More than 400 men, most of them Ford men, were in the union's hall, the witness said.

Miller was unable to say that the first meeting, held Oct. 19, was called for the specific purpose of a strike ballot, but company attorneys declared that the facts would be established by other witnesses. At both meetings, Miller testified that Kimberling declared Ford workers who had signed statements expressing satisfaction with Ford labor policies were a "bunch of rats for signing those loyalty pledges."

On cross-examination, Miller asserted that there was "not even a rumor" of the Nov. 7 meeting at the Ford assembly plant. He added: "They (the union officers) didn't want anyone to come who would vote against their strike."

Says Miners' Aid Was Promised.

Continuing, Miller quoted Kimberling as remarking that, in event of a strike, "if Ford workers can't handle it, men from General Motors and miners from Illinois will help." He said also that Kimberling declared the strike, when voted, would not be called until after stock for the 1938 models had arrived, when a "sit-down" would go into effect. The strike, still in effect, was called Nov. 24. None of the 50 or more strikers made an attempt to stay in the plant, which now employs 660 men.

At the first meeting, the witness said, three members of Local 249 at Kansas City and a preacher spoke, urging St. Louis Ford men to strike in sympathy with Kansas City employes of the company. He declared that Delmond Garst, regional C I O director, in addressing the first meeting, said, "It will be dangerous even to ride around in a Ford car if a strike is called in St. Louis." About 600 attended the first meeting, Miller said.

The question of the strike vote meeting was raised over the objections of Gerhard Van Arkel, N L R B attorney. Trial Examiner Tilford E. Dudley previously had ruled that the company would not be allowed to question witnesses on that point. After Thomas Muldoon, associated with Bartlett in the defense, had read a lengthy offer of proof into the record, Van Arkel withdrew objections to testimony on the October meeting.

Dudley asserted he would sustain objections to questions relating only to the Nov. 7 meeting. Muldoon said the company would establish the fact that few Ford workers attended the meeting at which the strike actually was voted by reading offers of proof for each witness.

The witness declared he joined Local 325 of the C I O union last summer, after it had become a question of "join or take a hell of a good beating." He said he was influenced in signing an application by having witnessed a Ford worker chased up an alley by 35 or 40 union members, and by having heard that an inspector had been stripped and left nude on the street outside the plant.

Early in January, Miller testified, his automobile was stopped by a group of men, three of whom he recognized as C I O union members. A window in his car was smashed and he and two companions were struck by stones, he declared.

Miller said he voluntarily gave a resume of his testimony about two weeks ago to S. H. Kleekamp, chief clerk at the Ford plant. He admitted on cross-examination that Kleekamp had asked him whether he preferred the C I O union or the Liberty Legion of America, or whether he preferred having no union rather than the C I O organization.

When Muldoon objected, Van Arkel declared that an executive's interest in the type of labor organization desired by workers could be regarded as a violation of the Wagner Act. The Liberty Legion, which claims to represent all production employes at the St. Louis plant, is alleged by the Labor Board to be a Ford "company union."

Miller said he wanted to be "neutral," adding: "But I am not neutral when it comes to the C I O. It's no good and I don't want any part of it." He will return to the stand tomorrow for further cross-examination.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 12.— Charles Harris of West Palm Beach fought a two-hour and 42-minute semifinal match with Elwood Cooke of Portland, Ore., today, finally winning the right to meet Bobby Riggs in the Everglades Club final tomorrow.

Harris simply outlasted the West Coast player in a match that lacked spectacular play. The score ran up to 4-6, 7-5, 7-5, 6-2 as the ball methodically passed back and forth over the net.

Earlier Riggs, the Chicago youngster, ran Gardnar Mulloy of Miami back and forth over the court at will and won out with an easy 6-0, 6-1, 6-2. The victor, seeded first here and No. 2 nationally, handled the game just about as he wanted.

Cunningham Wins Boston Mile in 4:10; Tolmich Ties Record

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—After being prevailed upon to make his own race against an unimpressive field, peerless Glenn Cunningham tonight thrilled an overflow crowd of 12,000 at the Boston Garden by stepping out early and driving for a 4:10 victory in the Hunter mile, famous feature of the forty-ninth Boston A. A. games.

By doing so, the owner of the world's 4:08.4 indoor record ran the fastest mile of the current season as he led Gene Venzke, of the New York A. C., to the tape by 10 yards. The previous best 1938 performance was Glenn's winning 4:11 effort in last week's Millrose meet.

With Archie San Romani, his arch rival, out with a leg injury, leaving only Venzke, Ray Hahannah, of Drake University, and Harvard's Alex Northtrop in the running, B. A. A. officials pleaded with Cunningham to put on a show for the splendid crowd.

3:08 for Three Quarters.

He promised to attempt to wipe out his own Boston record of 4:11.9, which he set last year, and to do so he took over the lead from Mahannah, the junior 1500-meter champion, on the seventh lap and stepped up the pace to such an extent that he was clocked in 3:08 flat at the three-quarters mark.

Don Lash of Indiana, who set his 8:58 world mark in this meet's 1937 Billings' two-mile race, turned in the fastest time of the year, while nipping Norman Bright of San Francisco by a yard in 9:03.6. The veteran Joe McCluskey of the New York A. C. was third, a half-lap in the rear, with Floyd Lochner of St. Louis pounding at that former Fordhamite's heels. All the other starters were lapped.

Lou Burns of Manhattan, last year's Lapham "1000" winner, was forced to trail Charlie Beethan of the New York Curb Exchange, by three yards as that former Ohio State star breasted the string in 2:17.6. As a result, the trophy was presented to the 1936 victor, Chuck Hornbostel, whose 2:13.8 was the best performance given in this event in three years.

As is customary in Boston track meets, the 45-yard high hurdle indoor record was equalled. This odd-distance timber event is strictly a Boston institution and when Allan Tolmich, of Detroit Wayne's University, won the final in 5.7 seconds, with an inch or so to spare on Olympic Champion Forrest (Specs) Towns of Georgia, he equalled the mark made by Sam Allen of Bristow, Ok., in last year's Prout meet. Allen was shut out in one of tonight's trial heats.

The Briggs' 50-yard dash honors went to the apparently invincible Ben Johnson, of Columbia, who nosed out Perrin Walker, of the New York A. C., and Larry Scanlon, of Holy Cross, with a 5.5-seconds effort.

Fails at Record Attempt.

After Olympic Champion Earle Meadows of Los Angeles clinched the pole vault by clearing 14 feet, six inches higher than Ed Singsen, of Rhode Island State, and Yale's Bill Harding cleared, he had three failures as he attempted to set a new world indoor of 14 feet, five and five-eighths inches.

Mel Walker, of Ohio State, captured the high jump by clearing six feet seven inches.

The lengthy relay program, replete with thrilling encounters, was featured by Fordham's 3:24.8 victory over the Manhattan mile team. The Jaspers' two-mile team, however, was the fastest in the meet and it was clocked in 7:55 flat while out-distancing New York University, Yale, Boston College and North Texas State Teachers' College in that order.

South African Ties World Hurdles Mark.

SYDNEY, Australia, Feb. 12.—A total of 21 Empire records were smashed in 30 track and field events on the British Empire games program here today. In addition, contenders from England, Australia and Canada divided the swimming championships exclusively and wrote a complete new set of 13 water marks into the books.

Heading the list of the final day's performances, and probably the best comparative time for any event in the meet, was a 14-second flat time by Tom Lavery of South Africa, in winning the 120-yard hurdles. He beat out Canada's Larry O'Connor by inches for the new Empire record and a time which betters by one-tenth second the listed world mark of Spec Towns of the University of Georgia.

The 14-flat also equals the accepted American record set by Bob Osgood of the University of Michigan last year. However, Towns has been credited with 13.7 for the distance in a meet at Oslo in 1936. Although Meet Referee Langord said Lavery was favored with an assisting wind, several visiting team managers maintained it was a cross breeze.

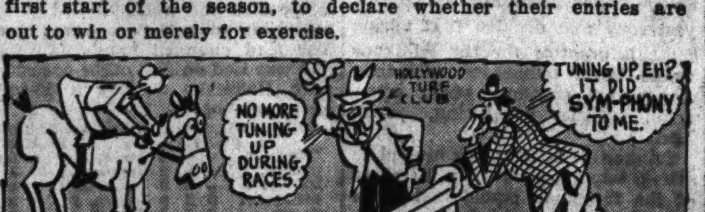
Out Go the "Sweeneys."

HORSES that "run for Sweeney," in the language of the turf, will be reduced considerably at the new Hollywood Racing Club's summer meeting. That organization liked young A. G. Vanderbilt's proposal to force owners of horses making their first start of the season, to declare whether their entries are out to win or merely for exercise.



NO MORE TUNING-UP DURING RACES.
HOLLYWOOD TURF CLUB
TUNING UP, EH? IT DID SYM-PHONY TO ME.

Many owners, endeavoring to tune up their racers, start them merely to help condition them. The horses may not be up to a race; they may not be ridden out; the jockey may have been instructed to take no chances.

Unfortunately the public is the victim. Bettors don't know what the owner means to do. If they wager on these first-starters they bet not only on the merit of the horses, but also on his condition and on the owner's intentions. Too much guesswork.

BETTING ON "DEAD ONES" of this sort costs the bettors of the nation a good-sized fortune each year. Under cover of existing rules, a lot of "laying up" of racers is accomplished, with the idea of winning later at a big price.

By forcing an owner to declare his horse's fitness and the stable's intentions, the betting public can be protected to some extent.

Young Mr. Vanderbilt has shown on several occasions that he is not only a sportsman of high quality, but has a nimble mind. The plan he has devised provides that, when an owner declares his horse is just in a race for a "prep," there shall be no betting on this entry. Should he unexpectedly win, his owner would get the purse, but the "straight" mutuels would be paid on the second horse and the place and show mutuels to the third and fourth finishers.

The rule, generally adopted,

Forty Players, 19 of Them Pitchers, on Browns' Roster

Forty players, including 19 described as pitchers, are on the 1938 roster of Gabby Street's Browns, as announced last night by Charley Casper, publicity director of the St. Louis American League club. The squad which the Old Sergeant will take to training camp at San Antonio also includes six catchers, six outfielders and nine infielders.

To make room for the younger players who will be tested at the training camp, Oscar Melillo, veteran second baseman, has been removed from the active list and described as a coach. Casper announced, however, that Melillo would go through spring training as though on the active list, so that when or if younger players fall by the minor league wayside, he will be ready to step in as a utility second baseman.

Only 15 members of the 1937 Browns are listed on the 1938 roster. The holdovers include six pitchers, two catchers, three infielders and four outfielders. That means that 13 new hurlers, four new catchers, six infielders and two outfielders who were not aboard at last spring's sailing of the good ship Brownie, will report to Skipper Street. As has been told, the pitchers and catchers will be due at San Antonio March 7 and the infielders and outfielders one week later.

Two-Man Bobsled Records Broken At Lake Placid

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Ivan Brown, Keene Valley, N. Y., machinist, cracked all existing records for two-man bobsleds at Mount Van Hovenberg today in winning the fifth running of the National A. A. U. senior championships.

Brown drove the four one-mile heats in a total time of four minutes 52.63 seconds, cutting nearly 18 seconds off the old mark. He clipped the course record of 1:16.51 held by himself, in each heat, setting a new mark of 1:12.97. Riding with him was A. M. Washbond, his partner in winning the 1936 Olympic two-man title in Germany.

Brown and Washbond have been undefeated in competition since 1935. The run was lightning fast and old speed marks went by the boards 10 times during the running of the title event.

U. S. Team Wins In World Title Hockey Tourney

By the Associated Press.

PRAHA, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 12.—The United States today opened its bid for the world amateur ice hockey championship by defeating Latvia, 1-0. Hugh Young of New Haven, Conn., scored winning goal in the ninth minute of the second period.

The Americans' poor start disappointed a large crowd of spectators gathered in the Hockey Stadium. Latvia, which had won from Norway 3-1, in overtime yesterday, fought the United States team on even terms throughout the game and, like the victors, missed many scoring chances.

CHICAGO SKATER CAPTURES THREE FIRSTS IN MEET

By the Associated Press.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Vic Ronchetti of Chicago captured three first places today to assure himself of the North American speed skating title.

Piling up 90 points in the three races—the 440, three-quarters mile and two-mile—plus the 20 he secured for a second place in Friday's mile event, Ronchetti, was far in front of his competitors in the men's senior division.

In second place was Eddie Schroeder of Chicago with 50 points, while Tommy Smith, the 19-year-old Utica, N. Y., speedster was third with 40.

Schroeder fell in the qualifying heat of the 440, tripped over Dick Werner of Haledon, N. J., in the three-quarters mile final, but almost beat out Ronchetti in the two-mile.

NEW LEADER IN BOWLING MEET

The Abelns Budweiser team took over the lead in the Greater St. Louis Bowling Association handicap tournament last night at the Gravois Recreation, when it scored 3097 to top the previous leader, A. R. T., which scored 3047 a week ago.

A. R. T. dropped to second place, and the Mystery Men were third with 3040. Bill's Taproom was fourth with 3027 and the Melene Hermanns were fifth with 3021.

The tournament continues this afternoon with squads bowling at 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9 o'clock.

MEDWICK AND DIZZY DEAN STILL AMONG THE UNSIGNED

By J. Roy Stockton

Johnny Mize, Cardinal first baseman who qualified for the high salary class by pounding baseballs for a .364 average last season, signed his contract for 1938 at the Redbird office yesterday and as the ink was drying, Branch Rickey announced that he expected to have only one man out of the fold when spring training opened. Rickey didn't wait for anybody to ask who that person might be.

"Joe always has been a holdout," Rickey continued, peering over his glasses in his best academic manner. "He wouldn't know what to do in a training camp on the first day I dare say. He's always been a holdout. I don't know whether he knows it, but he's going to be our only holdout this spring."

Rickey, of course, was referring to Joe Stripp, infielder, who on receipt of his 1938 Cardinal contract reached among the moth balls for that old one about the club apparently getting him mixed up with the bat-boy.

Details Not Disclosed.

Details of Mize's contract were not disclosed, except that it was for one year. Mize, who had sent back two contracts from his home at Demorest, Ga., signed at his third conference. He talked to Sam Breadon two weeks ago, and although the Cardinal office announced at that time that Breadon had not talked to Mize about his contract, Rickey said yesterday that he had been hesitant about seeing Mize, because Breadon had started negotiations with the player. Mize talked to Rickey at the latter's St. Louis home Friday and Rickey submitted a compromise proposition, with the stipulation that he would have to get Breadon's approval. Sam approved and so the conference yesterday was routine.

As last year was Mize's first full year as a regular, he probably did not receive more than $5000 for his services, and it is assumed that he compromised for about $10,000 as his emolument for 1938. He had ground for argument, as the only two major leaguers who finished 1937 with better batting averages were voted the big leagues' most valuable players.

Cards Drop Rookie.

Rickey's statement that there would be no holdout except Joe Stripp indicates that he expects no difficulty in talking Joe Medwick and Dizzy Dean, his other unsigned stars, into an agreement over 1938 contracts. Medwick has been demanding $25,000, and the club is said to have climbed to an offer of $18,000. A compromise for about $20,000 is likely. Dean, who was paid $25,500 last year, has been offered $10,000 for 1938, but the club merely sent that along as a feeler, or to "soften up" their star pitcher. He probably will be signed for about $17,500.

With Mize in the fold, the club announced that a recruit first baseman, Bernard J. Cobb, obtained from the Pirates in the deal for Johnny Rizzo, had been released to the Rochester club of the International League, a Redbird farm.

Assignment of Al Sherer to Rochester Canceled.

The assignment of Al Sherer, 23-year-old right-handed pitcher, to the Rochester club has been canceled by the Cardinals, Director Ed Staples announced last night. Sherer, who won 23 games and lost seven with Asheville, N. C., last season will go to training camp with the Cardinals, Staples said.

Cardinals Will Oppose Reds in Two Night Games

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 12.—Two of the Cincinnati club's seven night games during the 1938 campaign will be with the St. Louis Cardinals, officials announced here today. The Redbirds will oppose the Reds in the first night game of the campaign here, May 27 and also will play the men of Bill McKechnie under the lights, Aug. 12.

The other night games for the Reds are as follows: June 8 vs. Phillies, July 1 vs. Cubs, July 20 vs. Bees, Aug. 31 vs. Dodgers and Sept. 8 vs. Pirates.

DES MOINES, Ia., Feb. 12. — Washington University made a desperate effort to win a Missouri Valley basketball game from Drake here tonight but lost out, 41 to 40.

The Bears showed their usual second half spurt, but they failed to maintain their pace. The lead changed hands five times in the second half.

Washington trailed at the half, 19 to 14, but then the Bears spurted after four minutes of play in the second session to go ahead, 27 to 23. The Bulldogs managed to overhaul their opponents and win their seventh victory in nine conference games. They trail the leading Oklahoma Aggies by half a game.

Desmond Lee's 13 points topped the Bears' attack, while Nick Miletich counted 14 points for Drake. Washington made eight of its 15 free throws and Drake scored seven of its 20 tries.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 12. — The timekeeper's gun ended a last-stand drive by Creighton here tonight and enabled Washburn to win their Missouri Valley Conference basketball game, 36 to 32.

Trailing, 21 to 35, with only about five minutes to play, the Nebraskans began sinking shots from all angles and appeared to be on the way to taking the lead when the game ended. Washburn led all the way by a narrow margin.

NORTHWESTERN TAKES LEAD IN BIG TEN RACE

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 12.—Northwestern clung to first place in the Big Ten Conference basketball standing tonight by defeating Wisconsin, 27 to 23, with a second half-spurt before a crowd of 10,800.

Both teams played methodically in the first half and Wisconsin had a lead of 12 to 9 at the intermission. The Wildcats made their first field goal after 15 minutes of play, but picked up five points on free throws.

Jean Smith, forward, who was high scorer for Northwestern with 10 points, led a rally in which the Wildcats forged into a 16-16 tie. Mike McMichael, forward, then took over the scoring, dropping in two long goals to put Northwestern ahead.

Take It or Leave It.

BASEBALL offers many advantages to a young man to compensate for the 10-day clause, the reserve clause, and other contract specifications which occasionally cause him to be described as a serf or a chattel, a pawn to be shifted around at the will of his "owner" or employer. There is no other business that takes a workman to Florida or California each spring and gives him six weeks in the sunshine, to make sure that he is in the best possible condition to go through the season of five and one-half months.

It is pleasant to know that after the short stretch of play which constitutes his work he will have five months for hunting, fishing or plain and fancy loafing. During half the season, or while the club is on the road, his transportation and living expenses are paid. He stops at the best hotels, gets all the food he wants, travels in lower berths on all overnight jumps. If he has put all his money into a house or even in the bank, he usually can draw advance checks to take care of his needs during the training season.

The best medical and surgical attention are available, and in the event of any injuries suffered in line of duty, the club foots all bills. Or if the club thinks the loss of a pair of tonsils would help, it even pays for the operation.

The Case of John Mize.

HOWEVER, occasionally, as in the case of Johnny Mize, a ball player seems to have a legitimate complaint against the business office methods of the national game.

Mize, who signed his 1938 contract yesterday, was one of the mainstays of the 1937 Cardinal team. Though playing his first year as a regular and his second in a St. Louis uniform, he batted .364. Joe Medwick was the only National League regular who out-batted Mize. Charley Gehringer was the only other major leaguer who had a better batting average than Georgia Johnny. Medwick was voted the National League's most valuable player of 1937 and Gehringer was honored as the outstanding player in the American. Medwick and Gehringer had something there, when they finished ahead of Mize.

Had Johnny Mize been in the business world, with a similar record for selling corn flakes, automobiles, razor blades, Siberian accordions, or automobiles, he would have had the world by the tail. His automobile company would have realized that it was necessary to take steps to prevent a competitor from grabbing Johnny's services.

The sales manager would not say to Johnny: "You are a young man. You must advance as our other salesmen have advanced, slowly. We'll give you a 10 or 20 per cent increase and you can take it or leave it." And the sales manager could not say to Johnny that if he didn't take it, he'd be suspended and wouldn't be allowed to sell anybody's automobiles.

Rivals in the business world would not care about Johnny's youth. If he could sell that many automobiles, razor blades or accordions, they'd be glad to have him, 18 or 88 years old. Unusual ability to produce, in other words, would immediately butter great scads of additional parsnips for Johnny of the Georgia Mizes.

That's Africa.

IN BASEBALL, however, the outstanding salesman is shackled by the peculiar laws of the business. Rivals can't step in and offer Johnny Mize a job selling home runs. The club can tell him that he is a young man and that he must advance slowly. The club can tell him that it will give him a 10 or 20 per cent increase and he has to take it or leave it. And of course it is a specialized business. Mize can't turn to razor blades or accordions or automobiles. He knows only how to sell baseball to the public. He does it with base hits and home runs. They avail nothing in any other business.

The reserve clause, of course, is necessary in baseball. And of course there are compensations. But a young man like Mize, who would be free to sell his unusual abilities to the highest bidder, if they were talents in any other field of business, must be even-tempered and gentle, if he doesn't burn up over the take-it-or-leave-it ultimatums that are so frequently the answer to a ball player's efforts to get what he thinks he is worth.

There are two sides to everything, of course. A ball club invests thousands of dollars trying out young athletes. The reserve clause is a protection they must have if they are to feel free to make the investment. And perhaps the fact that Johnny Mize, a free agent, could sell his services for an immediate sum that would make his future secure, is beside the point. Perhaps.

FLYERS TO TRY TO EVEN SCORE WITH WICHITA

By W. J. McGoogan.

All of the clubs in the American Hockey Association—six of them—will be in action tonight and the Flyers will be trying to protect their two-game lead in a contest with Wichita at the Arena, while Minneapolis plays at Kansas City and Tulsa plays at St. Paul.

Minneapolis and Kansas City are tied for second place, four points behind the Flyers, so a victory for the Flyers would help them with one of their closets rivals at least.

The Flyers have played Wichita eight games thus far and tonight's contest is the final of the regular schedule between the clubs. In three games here with Wichita, the Flyers have won one, lost one and tied one, and at Wichita the Flyers have lost three games while winning two.

Thus on the season Shrimp McPherson and his mates have won four games from, tied one with and lost three to the Flyers.

The Flyer office announced yesterday that the game with St. Paul, postponed from December, would be played at the Arena Friday, Feb. 25, which will be "Ladies' Night."

Captains Tigers' Co-Ed Rifle Squad

ORTRUDE SCHNAEDELBACH OF ST. LOUIS.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Feb. 12.—The University of Missouri's co-ed rifle team expects to equal the 1937 record of no defeats in 32 matches in the series of telegraphic contests which opened this week.

Sergt. Eugene C. Viera, who directs the team's activities, has presented an undefeated team since 1930 and pointed to fine prospects as three girls fired perfect scores in the first match of the season.

The team is built around Ortrude Schnaedelbach, 4227 Flad, St. Louis, who was recently named captain. She had perfect scores in all but one match last year, and started off this season with a perfect score. Another unexpected possible was made by Jane Weaver, Webster Groves, as she competed in her first collegiate contest, but not as unexpected was the perfect score of Ruth Hope, Doniphan letter-winner from last year. The team posted a score of 498 of a possible 500 in the opening match.

Among other co-eds on the team are: Joan Campbell, Kirksville; Joan Johnson, Mount Vernon; Jeanne Tyler, Kansas City; Betty Ellfeldt, Kansas City; Jane Espy, St. Louis; Mary Estill, Estill; Helen Mingle, University City; Katherine Cowing, Homewood, Ill.; Anne Simrall, Boonville; Betty Brownlee, Brookfield; Virginia Lee Wade, Kansas City; Merle Houston, Grain Valley, and Virginia Roberts, Denver, Colo.

In the recent opening of the telegraphic season the co-eds defeated Ohio U., 498-479, and Rhode Island State by forfeit.

The Missouri freshmen won from Tennessee, 1764 to 1763 and from North Carolina with 1720. The varsity men defeated Davidson and Brooklyn Poly, which forfeited the matches; lost to Coe College, 1397 to 1364, and defeated Boston College, 3644 to 3565, Ohio University, 1844 to 1755, and Culver Military School, 1364 to 1349.

might prove to be a real forward step in the protection of the racing public.

Such Confidence.

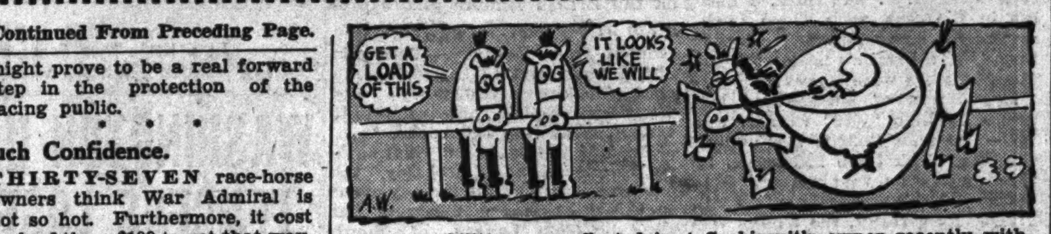
THIRTY-SEVEN race-horse owners think War Admiral is not so hot. Furthermore, it cost each of them $100 to get that way. On Jan. 31 thirty-eight stables put up a century note each to keep their nominees in the Widener Handicap, to be run March 5 at Hialeah, Fla., and for which War Admiral is considered almost sure to be the choice at prohibitive odds.

Among the nominees are some fair horses but none able to extend him in a race at anything like equal weights. The contention will have to come from such horses as War Minstrel, Burning Star, Corinto, Dellor, Thorson, Brush Hook, Caballero II, Colombiana, Maerial, Maedic and that sort. Not much there to frighten Owner Samuel Riddle.

Pompoon and Seabiscuit will be 3000 miles away on the day of the race. However, too much weight and too little condition can equalize matters even with a son of Man O'War in the race.

New Hope for Jockeys

THE PLAN TO RAISE the scale of weights for American jockeys ought to get the glad hand from all United States riders. It should prolong the careers and the earning power of many jockeys to whom years bring added weight.



GET A LOAD OF THIS
IT LOOKS LIKE WE WILL
A.W.

Its possibilities are reflected in the records of English jockeys Fred Archer, George Fordham, Steve Donoghue and Samuel Heapy. The last named rider last November piloted his 3000th winner to victory at the age of 55!

Low weight scales have made such a career impossible for our American boys.

Mack Garner lasted longer than most American riders. He was active in the saddle for 22 years. However, his record shows only 1317 winners, as compared to Heapy's 3000 and Archer's 2747, both made abroad.

Jockeys, like ball players, have to make their stakes early or never, in this country.

Speaking of Weight!

THE HARDER THE RACE the tougher they make it. You might deduce that after reading the weight assignment to the 79 steeplechasers—now cut to 56—for the Grand National Steeplechase, which will be run at Aintree, England, March 25.

Racing on the flat, owners think 130 pounds too much for any horse except Man O' War. Seabiscuit's owner recently withdrew from a race in which the son of Hard Tack was asked to carry 132.

Yet in the Grand National, Royal Mail, winner last year and present favorite for the coming renewal, has been assigned 175 pounds. Last year he won with 167 up.

These figures become almost appalling when it is considered that the winner has to carry this huge impost four miles and 856 yards over 31 jumps ranging from 4 to 5 feet high, many of them with water handicaps in addition.

For an event so trying, distance and hurdles considered, you'd think they'd put up the lightest boys capable of handling the jumpers.

If Royal Mail wins the race he will be the fifth horse ever to score successive victories in the event and the first to do it under such high weight.

Because of the disasters to horses and injuries to boys they call steeplechases "hospital races." But the Grand National is second in glamor and public interest only to the English Derby.

Novices to Play In Table Tennis Meet This Week

The St. Louis District Table Tennis Association will hold a novice tournament next Wednesday, according to an announcement made by Elmer Cinnater, president of the organization. The event will be a part of the celebration commemorating "table tennis week."

Only men's and women's singles events will be played. The entry fee is 35 cents and players may enter through Lewis Brand, 1285 Delaware, PArkview 5138.

Industrial Tourney.

A tournament for players employed by industrial firms will be held at the St. Louis Table Tennis Club, 4525A Olive st., March 3. The events will be men's singles and doubles. Players may enter through Elmer Cinnater, 3658 West Pine boulevard.

National Event.

The eighth annual table tennis championships of the United States will be held in Philadelphia, beginning March 24. The championships will be sponsored by the Pennsylvania Table Tennis Association.

League Results.

BILLIKENS OPEN FOOTBALL WORK TOMORROW

Coach Cecil E. Muellerleile of St. Louis University inspected the turf on the Walsh Stadium practice field yesterday and decided that spring football practice for the Billikens would begin tomorrow afternoon and would continue every afternoon, weather permitting, until April 1.

Billiken S. L. men are invited to attend tomorrow but only members of the freshman squad and those varsity gridders who did not earn letters last season are required to report.

"We're going to celebrate our golden jubilee of intercollegiate football competition next fall," said Muellerleile, "and if we get in the necessary licks now we may be still able to celebrate after the season is over."

The St. Louis U. coaching staff is a bit apprehensive over the outcome of the 1938 schedule for graduation will cut a large piece from the Billiken forward wall. Senior Tackles Beno Best and Les Cagle, all-Missouri Valley last fall; Guards Joe "Ike" Vollmer and Carl Yates, all regulars last season, will graduate in June.

The Billiken varsity men are to report March 1 and by that time Coach Muellerleile and his assistants "expect to have drilled the necessary fundamentals of the Notre Dame system into the freshman aspirants."

Missouri Rallies To Beat Nebraska

COLUMBIA, Mo., Feb. 12.—Rallying in the last half, the University of Missouri basketball team defeated Nebraska, 38 to 30, here tonight to climb into third place in the Big Six Conference race.

It was a one-man rally staged by Missouri's Bill Harvey which turned the tide for the Tigers, with the diminutive forward scoring 15 points, 12 of them coming in the last period and well bunched at the beginning when the score was close. The lead changed hands 14 times and was tied on five other occasions with Nebraska holding a 15-to-14 advantage at the half.

GRINNELL, Ia., Feb. 12.—The hapless St. Louis University Billikens went down to their eighth consecutive defeat in Missouri Valley basketball competition when they bowed to the Grinnell Pioneers, 51 to 44, here tonight.

St. Louis, however, put up a stubborn resistance tonight, until the last eight minutes of the game when Grinnell began hitting a hot pace and pulled ahead steadily.

The Blue and White team got off to an 8 to 3 lead after three minutes of play. They held an advantage until the last five minutes of the half when Luick tipped in a jump ball to put the Pioneers out in front, 16 to 14. Then, with five seconds remaining in the period, Fred Luther took the ball away from a St. Louis guard, dribbled half the length of the floor and scored a basket which put Grinnell out in front at half time, 26 to 22.

Denny Cochran and Tom Fleming combined to put the Billikens out in front early in the second half, 29 to 28, but then Bill Conwill began clicking and regained the lead for Grinnell. Before Conwill was finished for the night he collected 17 points on eight field goals and a free throw.

Fleming and Danny O'Sullivan both were removed in the second half because of four personal fouls, a fact which did not help the Billiken cause. A total of 17 fouls were called against St. Louis and 16 against Grinnell. The Pioneers, though, missed 17 of 22 free shots, while the Billikens counted 10 of their 20 chances.

WISE P

SWEET PATRICE RUNS SECOND IN NURSERY STAKES

Sun Power Breaks Track Record in Taking Final Event—$633,979 Handle New High for Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 12. — Felix Spatola's six-year-old Wise Prince and Elwood Sachsenmaier's unbeaten brown filly, Charlotte Girl, stretched their winning streaks to three straight today in capturing the feature events on the Hialeah Park program.

Wise Prince, backed down to the favorite's position at $3.60 for $2, after Rollin' Home was scratched, came from behind in a stretch drive to take the six-furlong Springfield Handicap. Charlotte Girl displayed admirable speed and gameness in winning the Nursery Stakes (fillies division) despite a poor start.

Eddie Arcaro rated Wise Prince back in third place until the field rounded into the stretch, with Maetall in front. As they headed home, Arcaro shot Wise Prince between Maetall and Preeminent and spurted to the front, finishing in 1:11. Wise Prince hit the tape three-quarters of a length ahead of DeWitt Page's Maetall, which was an impressive second by half a length over Preeminent.

A crowd estimated at 15,000 saw Charlotte Girl, running under top weight of 119 pounds, complete the three furlongs of the Nursery Stakes straightaway in :34 1-5 to pay favorite players $4.60 for $2. Her share of the purse was $2730.

Sweet Patrice was second and Townsend B. Martin's Throttle Wide third.

H. R. Bain's Sun Power, a four-year-old class "C" colt, won the mile and a half finale in new track record time of 2:31 flat. Carrying 111 pounds, he knocked three-fifths of a second off the old mark established by Fetish six years ago and won by a length and a half to pay [illegible] for $2. Stocks was second and Knight Warrior third.

A new high handle for the meeting was recorded, the crowd pouring $633,979 through the "tote" machine.

Pompoon Out of One Book, Second Choice in Other

Both the leading local betting commissioners are wary of Pompoon in the Santa Anita Handicap, to be run on March 5. James J. Carroll has taken the one-time favorite out of his future book but Marley Burke is still quoting him at 3½ to 1.

Both have Seabiscuit at 3 to 1 and both report heavy play on Sceneshifter which is down to 12 in Carroll's book. Burke has dropped him to 8.

Carroll's odds:

GRINNELL, Ia., Feb. 12.—The hapless St. Louis University Billikens went down to their eighth consecutive defeat in Missouri Valley basketball competition when they bowed to the Grinnell Pioneers, 51 to 44, here tonight.

The Billikens have yet to reco a victory in the conference basketball race.

St. Louis, however, put up a stubborn resistance tonight, until the last eight minutes of the game when Grinnell began hitting a hot pace and pulled ahead steadily.

The Blue and White team got off to an 8 to 3 lead after three minutes of play. They held an advantage until the last five minutes of the half when Luick tipped in a jump ball to put the Pioneers out in front, 16 to 14. Then, with five seconds remaining in the p riod, Fred Luther took the ball away from a St. Louis guard, dribbled half the length of the floor and scored a basket which put Grinnell out in front at half time, 26 to 22.

Denny Cochran and Tom Fleming combined to put the Billikens out in front early in the second half, 29 to 28, but then Bill Conwill began clicking and regained the lead for Grinnell. Before Conwill was finished for the night he collected 17 points on eight field goals and a free throw.

Fleming and Danny O'Sullivan both were removed in the second half because of four personal fouls, a fact which did not help the Billiken cause. A total of 17 fouls were called against St. Louis and 16 against Grinnell. The Pioneers, though, missed 17 of 22 free shots, while the Billikens counted 10 of their 20 chances.

ALL-STAR MUNY SOCCER SQUADS TO PLAY TODAY

Two of the strongest all-star teams ever picked from the ranks of Municipal Soccer League players will meet at Fairground Park this afternoon in the featured game of a benefit program. Funds raised through the 25-cent gate will be turned into the treasury of the Soccer Players' Benevolent Association. The preliminary attraction will bring together the Nebcos of Carondelet Park and the Plaza A. C. of the Intermediate Division.

Play starts at 2 p. m. The second game should get under way at 3:30.

The North Siders, a team picked from players engaged with clubs playing at Fairground or Sherman Park, would appear to have the edge in the all-star game despite the fact that they will have to get along without Billy Gonsalves who was to have lined up at center halfback. Gonsalves decided yesterday to rejoin his professional teammates in a game at Sportsman's Park. It is understood that Gonsalves has thereby severed his connection with the Beltmar club of the Municipal League with which club he played for the past two months, helping materially to clinch the group championship.

In the South Side all-star team lineup, Schumacher club players have a majority of the places, topped by Bill Schuler at center forward. Schuler has been an outstanding star this season at Carondelet Park and is expected to get results this afternoon even though he is a marked man.

The Municipal League inter-park playoff games start next Sunday.

The program and all-star lineups:

Gonsalves and Watson Back In Pro Soccer Lineup Today

By Dent McSkimming.

Billy Gonsalves and Bill Watson, storm center of local soccer since last October, return to the professional fold this afternoon when they line up with the South Side club against the Bartunek club of Cleveland in an exhibition match at Sportsman's Park.

In refusing to play this season with the Shamrock club, Gonsalves and Watson forced the dissolution of that team. Gonsalves has played for the past two months with the Beltmar club of the Municipal League, but Watson has been idle.

Neither of these players is eligible for the Western semifinal cup match between South Sides and Castle Shannon of Pittsburgh, to be played here next Sunday, but both will be in the lineup in subsequent games if the St. Louis team defeats the Pittsburghers. Others who will play for the South Sides today, but not against Castle Shannon, are Joe Strattman, left winger, and Tom Chartrand, center forward.

Wants Backfield Intact.

Manager Oscar Mossmann said last night that he wishes to keep his backfield intact for the cup match and Watson will therefore be used today either as a replacement for Begley or as a forward. Chartrand, who played very well earlier in the season, but suffered a severe shoulder injury, will probably play half the game at center. Gonsalves, normally an inside right, may be shifted to the other side of the line. There is nothing definite about the forward line except that McNab will start at outside right.

Gonsalves reached a decision Friday to drop his Municipal League affiliation and line up with his old teammates under their new leadership. He and Watson and Strattman had received their releases from Shamrock club officials Feb. 6.

The net result of the prolonged struggle is that the Shamrock club organization has disappeared, but the players remain together under new management on a team which is a member of the St. Louis Soccer League. Phil A. Riley, president, and Bill Lehman, secretary of the inoperative Shamrock club, have been completely frozen out of the picture. Jimmy Roe, Harry Hebberger, Johnny Hamm and Bill Lehman, players in the Shamrock club of last season, are not with the South Sides, but McNab, Nilsen, Gonsalves, Strattman, Egan, Watson, Begley, Erbe, Kane and Rodriguez are all on the roster.

Good Defensive Club.

The Bartunek club, which has played a half dozen good games here in recent years under the name "Slavia-Bartunek," is one of the best defensive teams in the West. This club was eliminated from cup competition recently by Castle Shannon, but remains in the Western semifinal of the amateur cup competition.

Goaltender Charley Tengler, Fullback Jack Thompson, Outside Right Elmer Schempp, Center Forward Davies and the brothers Caraffi are among the team's stars.

Holy Rosary and St. Teresa Win Soccer Games

Opening games of the playoff series for the Community Center Soccer League championships resulted in victories for Holy Rosary in the Midget Division and St. Teresas in the Junior Division. First round games were played at Fairground Park yesterday afternoon with several hundred fans present. The P. Garcia club, which drew a bye in the Midget Division, will oppose the Holy Rosary eleven next Saturday while the Caballeros, who also drew a bye, meet the St. Teresas in the Junior Division.

J. McFarland's well-earned goal late in the second half broke a tie score to win for St. Teresas. At half time, the Teresas led, 1-0, on D. Lodderhose's goal but C. Jamieson tied it up early in the second half.

East Side Soccer Title Game.

The first game of a three-game championship series between the Kassly Soccer Club and the Polish National Alliance team will be held at Jones Park, East St. Louis, at 2:30 today.

The Polish team won the first half-season schedule and the Kassly's took the second half, concluded last Sunday. Ray Suarez and Joe Yglesias will referee the game.

COR. 8th & WASHINGTON

HULL SAYS U. S. FOREIGN POLICY AVOIDS EXTREMES

PREPARDNESS WAY TO AVOID TROUBLE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Secretary of State Hull, in a letter to Representative Ludlow (Dem.), Indiana, author of a constitutional amendment to require a popular vote on war, declared today that the United States' foreign policy consists of avoiding "extreme internationalism with its political entanglements" and also "extreme isolation" which makes other nations believe this nation is "more or less afraid."

Hull called the policy "a matter of simple common sense."

Hull replied to a letter from Ludlow asking specifically whether all ships of the proposed expanded navy program were necessary for home defense or whether they were to be used in co-operation with some other nation.

Ludlow, in his letter, asserted he was "perplexed and beclouded by a maze of contradictions and uncertainties" with regard to the armed forces expansion program.

Text of Hull's Letter.

The text of Hull's letter follows:

"I have your letter of Feb. 9 in which you express yourself as perplexed by 'the maze of contradictions and uncertainties' with respect to the problems relating to national defense and peace, and conclude by requesting certain specific information.

"I may say that being in possession, as you doubtless are, of the texts of my public statements and published communications which I have made on the subject of our foreign policy and our foreign relations, you should not permit yourself to be disturbed by affirmations from other sources which are contradictory to statements of fact which, as a responsible official, I have repeatedly made. I have in mind especially my statement of principles underlying all international law and order and normal relations between nations, on July 16, 1937; my statement of Aug. 23, 1937; my letter to Senator Smathers of Dec. 13, 1937; my letter to the Vice-President on Jan. 8, 1938, and numerous statements to the press in addition during the past seven months, setting forth in almost every detail our foreign policy.

Glad of Opportunity.

"You will recall that in addition I addressed an executive meeting of some 150 Congressmen one evening at the House office building on all phases of our foreign policy and invited questions at the conclusion. If you were not present, I am sorry. I have in addition conferred with many Congressmen, as I have with numerous Senators, touching any and every phase of foreign policy in which they expressed the least interest.

Your specific inquiry reads as follows:

"1. Whether all of the ships and auxiliary services provided for in the proposed program are regarded as necessary for defense of our homeland and our possessions, or

"2. Whether the program contemplates the use of some of the units in co-operation with any other nation in any part of the world."

"I am glad to have the opportunity to make categorical statements in regard to this matter. First, in my opinion all of the ships and auxiliary services provided for in the proposed program are needed for the national defense of the United States and its possessions. It is the desire of the people and of the government of the United States that this country be not drawn into or forced into war. It is the duty and the intention of the administration to make effective so far as lies within its power the desire of the country in this as in other respects. It is the belief of those of us who, with full sense of responsibility, advocate these increases in our naval strength, that the making of these increases will contribute toward attainment of that objective.

"It It Is Prepared."

"As you know, in the opinion of the expert technical authorities, our navy, even with these increases, would not be able to embark upon offensive or aggressive operations overseas. In our foreign policy there is not any disposition or intent to engage in warfare.

"We believe, however, that the people of this country desire that the country be respected, that our nationals and our interests abroad be given fair treatment, and that there should prevail in the world conditions of peace, order and security. This country always has exerted its influence in support of such objectives. We believe that within the limitations of its traditional policies it should continue to do so. If it is prepared and known to be prepared, the likelihood of its being drawn into trouble will either be absent or greatly diminished.

"With regard to your second question, I might refer to the letter which I wrote to Senator Pittman under date of Feb. 7, which was read by Senator Pittman in the Senate on Feb. 8. I am glad to repeat or to amplify or in any other possible way to restate any of the statements which I have heretofore made public, if by so doing I can be to the least extent helpful to you. For present purposes and in express reply to your question, I may say, the proposed program does not contemplate the use of any of the units in co-operation with any other nation in any part of the world.

Exchange of Information.

"To be still more specific, I may say that the policy I announced during last August is still being strictly observed; that is that this Government carefully avoids, on the one hand, extreme internationalism with its political entanglements, and, on the other hand, extreme isolation, with its tendency to cause other nations to believe that this nation is more or less afraid; that while avoiding any alliances or entangling commitments, it is appropriate and advisable, when this and other countries have common interests and common objectives, for this Government to exchange information with governments of such other countries, to confer with those governments, and, where practicable, to proceed on parallel lines, but reserving always the fullest freedom of judgment and right of independence of action.

"Naturally, we believe that it is a matter of simple common sense for nations which desire peace to co-operate in every satisfactory and practical way toward maintaining peace. If every peaceful nation were to insist on remaining entirely aloof from every other peaceful nation and on pursuing a policy of armament limitation without reference to relative armaments, the inevitable consequence would be that other nations inclined to play lawless roles would thereby be given great encouragement and even assistance toward so doing."

A Negro captured by police early yesterday in front of a gasoline station at 3020 Delmar boulevard, after a Negro taxicab driver telephoned the police radio dispatcher he had been robbed and had overheard the robber and a companion discussing plans to hold up a filling station. The prisoner gave his name as Bloomfield Benson. He was alone when caught.

The cab driver, Louis Fortier, was robbed of $3 and his cab. Freeing himself from ropes with which he was bound by the robbers, one of whom he identified as Benson, he telephoned police. Lieut. Robert Angram of the Lucas Avenue Station d Special Officers Percy McAllister and James Faherty heard the broadcast and caught Benson. Police said he admitted stealing the cab and robbing Fortier, but denied he intended to hold up the filling station.

IGOE ENTERS ILLINOIS RACE FOR U. S. SENATE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—U. S. District Attorney Michael L. Igoe announced tonight his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator and said he "confidently hoped" to have the Kelly-Nash Chicago organization support in the April 12 primary campaign.

He said petitions would be filed Monday at Springfield to put him in the fight against Congressman Scott W. Lucas of Havana, the Horner administration entry, and the two other avowed candidates, Senator William H. Dieterich of Beardstown and Attorney Newton Jenkins of Chicago.

Igoe said he did not have flat assurance of Chicago organization support but expected it. He said he had been informed Bruce A. Campbell of Belleville, Democratic State chairman, and John C. Martin of Salem, had definitely decided to run for treasurer and congressman-at-large respectively. Martin, present State Treasurer, is ineligible to succeed himself in that office.

Igoe, a State Representative for eight terms, five as House minority leader, was Congressman-at-large when he was appointed by President Roosevelt, in May, 1935, as District Attorney for Northern Illinois. He said he did not intend to take a leave of absence from the Federal post during the campaign.

Final indorsement of a State ticket by the Kelly-Nash organization is expected to await the return next week of National Committeeman P. A. Nash, now in Florida. Gov. Horner is due in Chicago tomorrow to confer with his Cook County leaders on whether to support a full county ticket of anti-Kelly-Nash candidates or concentrate on County Judge Edward K. Jarecki, who has been shelved by the City Hall organization.

Edmundson, State president of the United Mine Workers of America and Illinois Regional C I O director, has declared for Igoe.

Senator Dieterich has not filed his candidacy but has until Feb. 21 to do so.

MAN KILLED, 3 OTHERS BURIED IN COAL MINE EXPLOSION

Woman Whose Husband and Son Were Caught in Pit Gets Help at Young Ranch, Wyo.

YOUNG RANCH, Wyo., Feb. 12.—Word of a coal mine explosion in which one man was killed and four others buried was brought here today by Mrs. John Baker, wife of one victim, and mother of another.

Mrs. Baker, the only other person at the mine, said the body of Henry Ash, 28 years old, was blown 300 feet from the mouth of the tunnel. She doubted that any of the four other men had survived.

The other miners were John Baker, 45, his son William, 18; Rulon Ivy, 30, and Denver Holdbrook, 25.

Among prohibition leaders who will attend the Anti-Saloon League conference are Bishop James Cannon, chairman of the League's legislative committee; Dr. A. J. Barton, head of the prohibition activities of Southern Baptists; Dr. F. Scott McBride, former general superintendent of the League and Dr. E. H. EDUCATION

SCHOOL OF ACCOUNTANCY

A PLAN OF SUCCESS

Would you like to quickly enter the most profitable and least crowded profession in America today? Which would you prefer—actually being a success in the business world and enjoying the comforts and luxuries of life—or just going on wishing and longing for them?

New legislation enacted in the past few years and business operating on a small margin of profit, in order to cope with rapidly increasing competition, has created such a demand for full and adequate records, that business large and small is paying, and is willing to pay, handsomely for trained accountants.

If you feel your ambition and ability justifies a larger income and the progress you are now making is not satisfactory, then the AMERICAN ACADEMY OF ACCOUNTANCY can and will help you quickly prepare for a high salaried position in the growing field of accountancy.

PLEASE NOTE:—The AMERICAN ACADEMY OF ACCOUNTANCY is not a correspondence school. It is not necessary for you to attend classes. You are brought face to face with a certified public accountant who gives you the benefit of his personal and individual instruction, unlimited advise and consultation throughout your training.

The AMERICAN ACADEMY OF ACCOUNTANCY'S modern plan of training will not interfere with your employment or social schedules. Previous experience is not necessary—whether you are in an office or a factory, if you wish to provide the better things of life for yourself and your loved ones, then the AMERICAN ACADEMY OF ACCOUNTANCY, can and will help you quickly qualify for one of the many waiting opportunities in the uncrowded field of accountancy, regardless of your present finances. The best assurance regarding what this training will do for you is to judge what it has done for others.

For FREE catalog and FULL information, write, phone or visit the AMERICAN ACADEMY OF ACCOUNTANCY, 468 Paul Brown Building, St. Louis. Phone CHestnut 1568. No obligations.

Inquest Tomorrow in Death of Earl Lesperance, Who Worked for J. R. Shepley.

Earl Lesperance, a chauffeur, died yesterday at St. Louis County Hospital of injuries suffered Thursday night when he was crushed between his automobile and another car, which struck him as he stood on Marshall road, west of Big Bend road, examining the gasoline tank after his car had stalled.

He suffered brain and skull injuries, and as a result of the accident both legs were amputated above the knees at the hospital Friday night. He had been given four blood transfusions.

The driver of the other car, William O'Brien, Valley Park machinist, told deputy sheriffs that he did not see the stalled automobile nor Lesperance, who apparently had been standing in front of the rear light of his car. Lesperance, 29 years old, was employed by John R. Shepley, vice-president of the St. Louis Union Trust Co., who resides in the St. Louis Country Club grounds.

An inquest will be held tomorrow.

Mrs. Mae Schultz, 3815 Westminster place, suffered skull and internal injuries when struck by an automobile at Channing avenue and Lindell boulevard last night.

The driver of the car, John M. Readey, a consulting engineer, 4400 Westminster place, told police Mrs. Schultz walked into the path of his westbound machine as he pulled away on an automatic signal change. Readey drove Mrs. Schultz to City Hospital.

Emil Heitgerd of St. Charles, a shoe factory inspector, suffered a skull injury and lacerations of the face and back when hit by an automobile in the 600 block of South Skinker boulevard last night. Samuel Esstman, 4548 Forest Park avenue, driver of the car, said Heitgerd walked into the side of the machine. A door handle was broken. Heitgerd was taken to City Hospital.

Hollis Davenport and his two small daughters, Nina Lee, 6, and Wilma Ruth, 5, were injured last night when struck by an automobile while attempting to cross Missouri avenue at Fourteenth street, East St. Louis.

The driver, who said he was Albert Massey, salesman, 429 North Twenty-first street, East St. Louis, told police he did not see the three until it was too late to avoid striking them. The intersection is unlighted. Davenport and his daughters, who reside at 1139 Missouri avenue, were taken to St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 12.—Appointment of 13 field officers to carry on the work of the new State Probation and Parole Board in districts throughout the State was announced today by Robert C. Henry A. Eichman, Unionville; Howard N. Doswell, Liberty; Charles N. Little, Hannibal; Howard C. Hill and Ralph D. Johnson, Kansas City; Druey Emerson, Bowling Green; Walter D. Achuff and John H. Kniest, St. Louis; George Reeves, Kirkwood; Harry R. Studer, Nevada; Orla J. Creach, Macks Creek; Richard H. Johnson, Fredericktown, and Joseph H. Stokes, Columbia.

Each will be assigned to a district yet to be designated, Edson said, after a week's training period beginning here Feb. 21.

Edson and the Parole Board will be assisted in conducting the training school by Francis Miller, special analyst of the Prison Industries Reorganization Administration functioning under an executive order of President Roosevelt; L. F. Murphy, supervisor of probation and parole for Wisconsin, and Harry Shulman, Washington (D. C.) psychologist.

C. T. Pihlblad, professor of sociology at the University of Missouri, Judge Paul Van Osdol, president of the Circuit Judges' Association of Missouri, and Gov. Stark will also be among speakers.

VERMONT GOVERNOR WARNS OF THIRD PARTY

Declares It Will Come If Republicans Fail to Provide Leadership.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Republicans were counseled by Gov. George D. Aiken of Vermont tonight to look to the hundreds of thousands of laborers, white collar workers and farmers who are "hungry for leadership." These people, he said, who will "stand for neither the erratic wanderings of the New Deal nor the self-satisfied smugness of Old Guard Republicanism," will form a third party unless the Republicans give them "Republican leadership."

"And this time it will last," he predicted. "A party or ordinary folks, factory workers, farmers, office workers, business men, school teachers, lawyers, doctors."

Gov. Aiken, whose state was one of the two to vote Republican in the 1936 election, spoke on the radio at the Lincoln day dinner of the National Republican Club.

Criticises Program Committee.

He declared more than half of the party's recently formed program committee represented banking, insurance, stock and bond selling and the law.

"Our millions of organized and unorganized workers are represented by just four labor men," he said. "In spite of the fact that 40 per cent of the population of our country is in rural areas, and with one-quarter actually living on farms, they are represented on the program committee by a total of 21 who are engaged in agriculture—and I am afraid few of these are dirt farmers. Can such a committee as this, sincere as they may be individually, write a convincing statement of principles for the party of Lincoln? I think not."

Defines the Issue.

Gov. Aiken defined the issue of today as the "difference between federal leadership and federal domination."

"Of late years the Republican party has not been successful in federal leadership," he said. "The New Deal seeks to be too successful in Federal domination. Both these attitudes are wrong."

He urged his listeners to "forget your hatred for the President and stop worrying about reds in the White House," saying that because of the hatred, "the minds of many American men and women are shut against your honest criticisms."

The President displayed leadership in 1932 and 1933, he declared, but since then "inspiring leadership has given way to fumbling futility."

"The greatest praise I can give to Lincoln on this, his anniversary, is to say that he would be ashamed of his party's leadership today. "Would not Lincoln have been ashamed of us when Frank Hague the Democratic boss of Jersey City, forbade free speech and free assemblage and no responsible voice in the Republican national leadership was raised in protest against his high-handed procedure? The reason was that free speech and free assemblage were being denied the CIO, and the Tom Girdlers of the Republican party want the CIO crushed, even if a corrupt political boss of the opposing party has to tear up the Bill of Rights to crush them."

COMMITTEE NAMED TO DRAFT MISSOURI ROAD PROGRAM

Citizens' Association Chooses 145; Asks for Report as Close as Possible to March 15.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 12. — A committee of 145 men was named today to draw up a future highway program on behalf of the Citizens' Road Association of Missouri. R. S. Brownlee of Brookfield, president of the Association, and Hugh Stephens, Jefferson City, who retired as president Jan. 18, made the appointments.

George W. Catts of Kansas City was named chairman. The committee, authorized by the association at the January meeting, was instructed to present its report to a general meeting "as close to March 15 as possible."

Among the topics to be considered by the group is an increase in the State gas tax to 4 cents. The present tax of 2 cents was increased to 3 cents by the last Legislature, effective Dec. 7, 1938, but this will be subject to a popular referendum in November.

The St. Louis members of the committee are: Former Gov. Henry S. Caulfield, J. Lionberger Davis, Hord Hardin, Leslie A. Pettus, T. K. Smith and W. D. Waugh. Carter W. Adkins of University City is also on the committee.

In addition to these, special representatives were named including the following from St. Louis:

L. J. Sverdrup, Missouri Construction League; Carl Barker, Missouri Petroleum Co., Michael Kinney, chairman of the State Senate Roads Committee; Roy F. Britton, president Missouri Automobile Club; Dan A. Tarantola, Veterans of Foreign Wars; S. B. McPheeters and Judge Jesse McDonald, former Highway Commissioner.

Fred T. Klohr of Belleville Dies.

Fred T. Klohr, a sandblaster, died suddenly yesterday, apparently of a heart attack, at his home, 30 Florida avenue, Belleville. Physicians said the stroke presumably followed a blood clot from a leg fracture in a fall last December. An inquest will be held. Klohr, 31 years old, is survived by his wife.

MORE POWER SOUGHT FOR SUPREME COURT

Institute Would Grant Missouri Bench Larger Rule-Making Authority.

Directors of the newly-formed Missouri Institute for the Administration of Justice, meeting yesterday at Hotel Mayfair, voted to sponsor a campaign for an amendment to the State Constitution to give rule-making power to the Missouri Supreme Court in procedural matters in both civil and criminal cases.

The proposed amendment would be in form approved by the executive committee of the institute and would be presented through initiative petition at the November general election. Authority to raise funds was given to the executive committee. There was considerable discussion as to whether the rule-making power should be conferred through the Constitution or by statute, the directors leaving the latter alternative open.

It was decided to submit the two proposals to membership of the institute, which was formed last summer at the suggestion of the Missouri Bar Association, with a membership of about 150 persons, the majority of them laymen.

Although simplification of legal procedure is the immediate objective of the group, its long-term program includes also plans for improving methods of selecting judges. This objective was discussed at the meeting but no decision on carrying it out was reached.

The executive committee was authorized to incorporate the institute as a voluntary, non-profit organization.

Directors at the meeting were J. Lionberger Davis of St. Louis, president of the institute; Kenneth Teasdale, St. Louis, who was president of the Missouri Bar Association when the institute was formed; W. Wallace Fry, Mexico, now president of the State Bar Association; George L. Stemmler, president of the St. Louis Bar Association; Jesse W. Barrett, Ronald J. Foulis, Samuel H. Liberman, Luther Ely Smith, William F. Fahey and Israel Treiman, all of St. Louis; Leland Hazard, J. Francis O'Sullivan and J. F. Porter, all of Kansas City; Grover James, Joplin; M. Richards, Hannibal; H. I. Himmelberger, Cape Girardeau; Lee Montgomery, Sedalia. Hazard was elected vice-president.

HAMILTON URGES NEW 'BIRTH OF FREEDOM' FOR NATION

Republican Chairman Offers Toast to Jefferson and Lincoln at Michigan Dinner.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 12. —John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, bid for an alliance between Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats tonight with a toast to Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln.

"May their spirits walk together in the future of our party 'that this nation under God shall have a new birth of freedom'," he said in a speech at a Lincoln birthday dinner here. Jefferson is regarded by Democrats as the founder of their party.

Declaring Republicans will never surrender to governmental domination in economic and other fields, Hamilton said:

"We know that many members of the true Democratic faith are equally opposed to any such surrender. The Republican party in its first national platform asked Americans to recur to the principles of Thomas Jefferson. Lincoln and his friends adopted the name Republican precisely because it was Jefferson's own name for the party which he himself launched in defense of the liberties of man.

"Jefferson was the hero of the Lincolnian Republicans. The Republican party is more Jeffersonian today than those who pay mere lip service to his name. It stands for local liberty, civil liberty, political liberty, religious liberty, racial liberty, economic liberty, without all of which no man can be free.

POLITICIAN'S PAPER CAUSES GRAND JURY INVESTIGATION

Judge Orders Inquiry Into Beloit Fuel Dealer's Activities and Stories He Published.

JANESVILLE, Wis., Feb. 12.—Circuit Judge Jesse Earle today ordered a grand jury investigation into activities of E. R. Branigan, Beloit fuel dealer and politician, and of stories contained in his weekly publication, the Spectator.

Judge Earle acted at the request of special Prosecutor Lynn Smith of Jefferson, who said he was withdrawing a charge of criminal libel against the county supervisor in order to broaden the investigation.

Smith in his statement to the Court today said he found The Spectator was filled almost wholly with violent attacks upon public officials and others, in articles of a "highly scandalous and libelous nature" which held the persons up to "ridicule, hatred and contempt."

Judge Earle said the grand jury would not only investigate the publication, Branigan and his associates, but also "the possibility of truth" in allegations Branigan made against public officials and others "over a period of years."

WESTMINSTER PLACE RESIDENCE SOLD

McCreery Residence Sold to J. B. Schirgel—Lindell Lot to Be Improved.

One of the outstanding old aristocratic family homes on Westminster place went under new ownership last week when the McCreery residence at 3841 Westminster was sold by Cornet & Zeibig, Inc., to John B. Schir and wife. It consists of 12 rooms and two baths, is located on a large lot, and was built for Wayman McCreery, father of the present family, who promoted several St. Louis institutions, notably the Glen Echo Country Club. The new owners plan to spend a considerable sum in modernizing the fine old residence. Purchaser and seller were represented by Cornet & Zeibig.

The same agency concluded a transaction involving three residences at 7374 and 7376 Arlington and 1609 Hunter av. in Richmond Heights. These six-room brick residences were transferred to Clyde Espenchied by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. as trustee for various estates owning them.

An unimproved lot on the north side of Lindell boulevard west of Vandeventer avenue, was sold last week to E. L. King and wife and E. L. King Jr., owners of a Winona, Minn., manufacturing company. They plan to improve the lot with a modern structure as a home for the St. Louis agency. The sale was through Cornet & Zeibig, as agents for the Celia M. Stuever estate, the buyers being represented by the real estate department of Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co.

Sale of a double flat at 4323-25 Page boulevard was announced by the same agency to Mrs. Esther Davis, represented by Samuel Floun, for the Celia M. Stuever estate, represented by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.

Puffed Cereals Co. of Missouri has leased the building at the northeast corner of First and Spruce streets. It is a new company, a subsidiary of the parent corporation at Minneapolis, Minn. Several directors of the latter company made a trip to St. Louis to oversee location of the branch house. The John Ramming Realty Co. was the lessor, and both parties were represted by Cornet & Zeibig.

COUNT OF BIG GAME NOSES CAUSES PURCHASE OF FARM

Taking a census of the deer and bear population on his recently acquired 3000 acres of unimproved land in Arkansas reduced Frank J. W. Masek to the "woe is me" state of mind. He found it heavily overcrowded, the animals clamoring raucously for relief, and on the point of declaring a runout strike. The situation called for quick action of a preventive nature. He promptly rose to it by providing land for transplanting a sufficient number of them, and at the same time taking account of his convenience in obtaining satisfaction for his frequent craving of venison and bear meat. That is why Mr. Masek last week bought 100 acres in Franklin County, near the town of St. Clair, Mo. It is a fairly improved farm, but with enough timbered land on which to grow those tasty large game food animals. He admits that thought of his wife's objection to his going so far away from home for the favored meats enabled him to reach quick decision on the problem confronting him as a result of the count of animal noses on his Arkansas holdings.

Cooper, Cincinnati, heads the committe on real estate taxation. This body, now being appointed, will include one representative from each state, one from each of the 442 local boards of the association, and one from each of the eight geographical regions of the country, the latter to be vice-chairmen of the committee for their respective regions.

HOUSING SUCCESS DEPENDENT UPON LARGE LENDERS

Insurance Companies and Banks Can Put It Over by Putting Surplus in Insured Mortgages.

Knowledge of the amended housing bill passed by Congress and recently approved by President Roosevelt, as disclosed in reports sent out from Washington, is not lacking, but how far it will go in stimulating construction has yet to be revealed through the scope of its operation. This was the view expressed by John C. Hall, president of the St. Louis Federal Savings & Loan Association, prior to his departure for Chicago Wednesday night, to attend the North Central regional conference of Real Estate Boards Thursday, and to address the sixth annual meeting of the District 7, United States Building & Loan League yesterday afternoon. The subject of this address was, "What About the F H A Now?"

"The topic of the address about states my state of mind on that subject," Mr. Hall said. "I chose it because I wanted to have the directors of the League give expression to their views, in an endeavor to clarify the situation, if that be possible in advance of the measure's actual working, and, if not, to emphasize the uncertainty I feel.

Depends Upon Lending Volume.

"It is my belief that everything depends upon how generally large lenders of funds will respond to the Government's proposal, on the basis of interest authorized by the bill and elimination of the service charge. Should the life insurance companies, with their heavy holdings of cash for investment, and the large banks, with their accumulations of funds, put these resources into housing as provided, the plan will go over. The attitude of these powerful institutions is the determining factor, and I cannot undertake to say what that attitude will be, under the circumstances defined by the Government. It is a question involving returns on the loans."

According to Stewart McDonald, housing administrator, the one-half of 1 per cent charge made by lenders for servicing theloan is definitely out on all insured mortgages. This elimination, added to reduction in the cost of mortgage insurance, will, the administrator said, lower the outlay by home builders by a maximum of about 1 per cent on mortgages of $5400 or less. The insurance premium rate will be one-half or 1 per cent a year on outstanding principal of the mortgage.

National Mortgage Agencies.

In the amended measure the provision for national mortgage associations, which brought none into being, so far as known, is retained. These institutions, which must meet such regulations as may be set up by the administrator, are authorized:

1. To buy, service or sell any mortgage insured under F H A, or any partial interest in such mortgage;
2. To buy, service or sell uninsured first mortgages or other ordinary liens on real estate, provided that the amount of the principal does not exceed 60 per cent of the appraised value of the property at the time of purchase;
3. To make real estate loans, but these must be of a kind eligible to mortgage insurance. The associations are empowered to issue bonds for new capital.

Mortgage associations may be set up as privately owned or they may be created by such an agency as the R F C, with one difference between them. Under the law, any mortgage association controlled or operated by the United States, or any agency of the United States, unlike other mortgage associations, may not make the ordinary insured loan on a one-to-four family dwelling, but it may, like them, loan on large scale housing, on projects for slum clearance or rehabilitation of blighted areas, on projects of limited dividend agencies, and the like. Organization of a national body, under auspices of the R F C, was announced by Chairman Jesse Jones of that bureau last Thursday. It will operate from Washington, with a paid-up capital of $10,000,000 and surplus of $1,000,000. To obtain new capital from time to time an association may issue notes, bonds or debentures against the mortgages it holds up to 20 times the amount of its paid-up capital and surplus. The aggregate borrowings must never exceed the aggregate of worth represented by the unpaid principal of the mortgages in the association's portfolio, plus its cash and investments in Government or Government-guaranteed bonds.

Tax Exempt Obligations.

All notes, bonds, debentures or other obligations of a national mortgage association are tax exempt, both as to principal and interest, except for surtaxes, estate, inheritance and gift taxes. The mortgage associations themselves, including their franchises, capital, surplus, mortgage loans, income and stock, are also made exempt.

A minimum capital of $2,000,000 is required, of which at least 25 per cent must be paid in before the association can start business. The capital may be paid in in the form of mortgages of such kind as the association is authorized to buy. Since they are all to be chartered and supervised by F H A, they will in effect constitute a centralized system of mortgage markets and of mortgage money supply.

It is pointed out, in connection with the national lending agencies provided for in the housing measure, that the notable building activity in the 20's decade was in large part financed through bonds issued by private bonding companies on the security of a mortgage on the improved property. "It may be well to remember," it is stated, "that $10,000,000,000 of the country's most recent construction was made possible through machinery now extinct."

Gilbert, an attorney, whose subject will be "Insurance Laws." George A. S. Robertson, superintendent of the State insurance department, will be the guest of honor. Lyman E. MODIFIED ENGLISH PLANS FOR BRITTANY LANE HOME

On plans popular for English residences, but modified to better meet prevailing American taste, the future home of Addison Olian and family is being erected on a lot 85x140 feet, at 2 Brittany lane. It contains four master bedrooms, living, dining and breakfast rooms, sleeping porch, two baths, kitchen and lavatory, together with a recreation room in the basement. It is air-conditioned. The site was purchased through the Arthur Goldman Realty Co. Plans and specifications were drawn by Isadore Shank and S. B. Goldman, and construction is being carried forward by the Westland Corporation.

BUSINESS STRUCTURE COMPLETED AT CLAYTON

Edward L. Bakewell announced yesterday the completion of an attractive building on the north side of Forsythe boulevard in Clayton, identified as 7717 Forsythe boulevard. The site has a frontage of 110 feet by a depth of 212 feet, and was purchased from the Audrey Realty Co. by Oliver R. Burkart. The building was erected for and leased by the Fred Evens Motor Sales Co. for 15 years. The construction is of cut stone and there is a semi-circular glassed salesroom. The transaction was handled by Shaw & Francis, Inc., and Edward L. Bakewell.

LARGE SAVING CLAIMED FOR HOLC BORROWERS

The average borrower from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, who was refinanced to the extent of approximately $3000, has $324 more equity in his home than when he received his loan, and has saved $335, in addition, through the corporation. This estimate, made by HOLC officials, is based on payments on the principal already made, the negotiations which accompanied refinancing operations, and the corporation's low interest rates.

In refinancing 1,000,000 homes, the corporation arranged for holders of mortgages to reduce their mortgages by $200,000,000 before they were taken over by the corporation, saving borrowers an average of $200 on each home refinanced, and at the same time enabling the mortgagees to liquidate their mortgages for cash. In addition, it is estimated that borrowers have saved $135,000,000, or approximately $135 per borrower, through the 5 per cent HOLC rate as compared to the higher interest rates they were paying to private lenders.

Borrowers have repaid more than $350,000,000 in principal and over $400,000,000 in interest. More than 67 per cent of them either are entirely current or less than three months delinquent on principal and interest combined. In dollar volume, the HOLC is collecting approximately 86 per cent of money due.

DINNER-DANCE ANNOUNCED BY REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE

A dinner-dance for members of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, their families and guests, is announced by Oliver F. Hannauer, chairman of the entertainment committee, for Tuesday, March 1, at Norwood Hills Country Club, formerly North Hills. A de luxe dinner is set for inauguration of the event, at 7:30 p. m., with no cover or corkage charge, for which tables for six or more will be reserved. It is given as a strict condition that tickets must be bought in advance at the Exchange office, and that none will be sold after 5 p. m. of the day preceding the event.

Southwest Avenue Store Leased.

The store at 5903 Southwest avenue was leased last week to Anthony Loeffler and John von Minden for Gilbert Spieldoch. The Edward Glik Co. represented both parties in the transaction.

HIGH MARK SET IN FINE TOUCHES ON COUNTY HOME

Sunnen Residence, in City of Ladue, to Be Occupied This Week—Construction and Finish Notable.

While there remain a few more or less important touches to be given their new home, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Sunnen will take possession of it this week, removing from 9530 Ladue road. According to those who have watched progress in construction of this improvement in St. Louis County, it is about the most imposing addition to residential properties, in city or county, for many years.

About a year ago the Chauncey P. Heath Realty Co. sold a tract of eight acres to Mr. Sunnen. It was the last of 20 acres acquired jointly some time ago by Messrs. Boyle Rhodes, Jack Lehmann and Charles Morrell. It lies along the east side of Watson road, south of Ladue road, in the City of Ladue. Its nature suggested development of the type that has been given it, but of this design on the part of the purchaser the agency selling it had no information for some time after the transaction had been closed. Last summer evidence of Mr. Sunnen's intent appeared, along with indication that it was to be carried out with no unnecessary delay.

The dwelling stands completed with belief by the owner family that it is safeguarded against damage by wind and flame, and certainty in their minds that no known device contributing to convenience and comfort has been omitted. It was constructed upon a foundation of concrete and steel, a framework of the latter material extending throughout the structure. It is Colonial in design, even to massive pillars in front, but these are of marble and four in number, extending upward two stories. Light colored brick is the main material with cut stone trimmings, these providing settings for doors and windows, also about the chimneys. The height of the structure is three stories, which means more than it does in the customary residence of that order, because the rooms are unusually spacious, with high ceilings. Indicative of this feature is the fact that the building is 165 feet long and 45 feet wide. It contains 12 rooms.

Insulation of Pipes Aids Heating System

Insulation of the piping and boiler will reduce fuel cost and will make the heating system perform better. Such insulation may be obtained in sheet or block form for insulating the boiler, in which case, it is applied directly to the boiler surface and secured by wire and then covered with a coating of plastic asbestos cement while the boiler is hot. A small amount of Portland cement may be added to the final coat to produce a smooth, hard finish.

Pipe covering is obtainable in split lengths with a light covering of canvas cemented over the insulating material. The fittings may be covered with a plastic asbestos so as to bring the surface of the fittings even with the pipe covering. At the end of each length of covering a light gage lacquered metal band with a patented fastener is secured to improve the appearance and keep the covering in place.

Rather than leave the pipes and boiler uncovered on the theory that they help to heat the basement, and therefore, contribute toward the comfort in the house, it is better to insulate the equipment thoroughly and at the same time see that the cellar windows are tight fitting and that basement walls exposed above ground are reasonably well insulated. Any necessary heat in the basement can be obtained by installing a radiator either on the basement ceiling or wall. Frequently the cause of the failure of a radiator to heat properly is due to the fact that the pipes leading to this radiator are excessively chilled in passing through a cold basement.

Katherine Long Is Married to Pomeroy Day

Mrs. E. D. Nims and Mrs. T. G. Ratcliffe Attend Niece's Wedding in Connecticut.

MISS KATHERINE FLATEAU LONG, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Clifton Long Jr. of Hartford, Conn., was married at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon to Pomeroy Day at Asylum Hill Congregational Church, Hartford. The bridegroom is the son of Arthur P. Day, also of Hartford. The bride visited here two years ago as the guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene D. Nims, 56 Portland place, who have gone from their winter home at Ocean Springs, Miss., to attend the wedding. Another aunt, Mrs. Thomas G. Ratcliffe, who is spending the winter in New York with her son, Thomas G. Jr., went with him to Connecticut for the ceremony. Mrs. Day is well known to many St. Louisans who spend summers on Cape Cod.

The Rev. David McKeith Jr., assisted by the Rev. Warren S. Archibald, pastor of the South Congregational Church in Hartford, performed the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Mrs. Bruce Crane of Sugar Hill, Dalton, Mass., sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Her marquisette gown, in mimosa yellow shaded to chartreuse and deep green in the full skirt. The wreath in her hair was made of fresh gardenia leaves and she carried a bouquet of mimosa and yellow pansies.

Another sister, Miss Elizabeth Long, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were: Mrs. William W. Walcott, New Haven, Conn.; Mrs. Clark Crockett Smith, Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Mabel Walker, Llewellyn Park, N. J.; Mrs. Arthur Truman Safford Jr. and Miss Mary Bird, both of West Hartford. They all wore gowns like Mrs. Crane's and carried matching bouquets.

Marvin B. Day, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. The ushers were: Lucian Day, another brother; John K. Jessup of New York, Edward K. Miller Jr. of Morristown, N. J., George A. Phelps Jr. of Stamford, Conn., James A. Taylor, Spencer Growt, Arthur L. Shipmen and Robert H. Shutz Jr., all of Hartford.

A small reception was held at the Long home after the ceremony. Forsythia, yellow iris and daffodils were used in the decorations. After a wedding trip Mr. Day and his bride will make their home in Hartford.

The bride is a graduate of the Ethel Walker School, Simsbury, Conn., and Vassar College. She is a member of the Junior League. The bridegroom is a graduate of Kingswood School, Hartford, and Taft School at Watertown, Conn. Girl Student From Turkey Guest Here

MISS SEVIM SERTEL of Istanbul, Turkey, spent this weekend in St. Louis as guest of Miss Justine Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clint Murphy, 24 Austin place, Glendale. Both young women are students at the school of Journalism at Columbia, Mo., Miss Sertel a junior, and Miss Murphy doing graduate work for her master's degree.

Miss Sertel, the doughter of Bey Zekeriya Sertel, newspaper publisher at Istanbul, typifies the new independent Turkish women. She arrived in the United States a year ago this past autumn, accompanied by her uncle and aunt, but, since she spoke no English, was unable to enter college immediately. After one semester at a boarding school in the East she was ready to enroll at Columbia, though she "still bothers" about American slang. In addition to English, Miss Sertel speaks "Turkish, of course, French, and Italian, if I get in a jam." She also reads and writes Arabic.

This summer Miss Sertel, with Miss Murphy as her guest, will go to Turkey for the holidays, returning in time to re-enroll at the School of Journalism in the fall. On completion of her work, Miss Sertel plans to do foreign correspondence at Istanbul, and would "rather write there for American papers."

TENTH AND OLIVE

By the POE SISTERS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12

SHAKESPEARE'S dictum that "if Winter comes Spring is not far behind" was attested anew in Washington last week when forsythia due in April burst into bloom at Woodley, the estate of the former Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson and at the home of Senator Alben B. Barkley in Cleveland avenue n. w.

Despite the verdict of the groundhog we may expect other outward and visible signs of spring in Washington gardens from time to time now.

In many senses of the word Washington is a world cross road and if one waits at it long enough almost any accredited visitor is apt to reappear again. Diplomatic society welcomed such a visitor last week when Mme. Slavo Grouitch who had a special niche of her own during the World War as wife of the Minister of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes. The treaty of Versailles made that picturesque title no longer possible.

Memories come back of Mme. Grouitsch's passionate devotion to the cause of her adopted country for she was an American belle, Miss Mabel Dunlop, when she met and married the diplomat.

Mme. Grouitch was a popular hostess and striking looking with wavy hair and a custom of wearing purple and lavender gowns which were most becoming to her. She was one of a little group of diplomatic women who worked eagerly at war relief, too, for the A. E. F. at the Theodorus Bailey Myers Mason House, lent by the late Mrs. Julian James for this laudable purpose. Mme. Grouitch was in a class for war relief work organized by Mrs. Robert Lansing at the Mason House when her husband was Secretary of State.

After leaving Washington Mme. Grouitsch became chatelaine of the Yugoslavian Legation in London, where she gained many new friends among the members of the American colony there as well as in the diplomatic set.

Before his death Dr. Grouitch was marshal at the court of King Peter and the regent Prince Paul of Yugoslavia and had the important task of supervising the arrangements for the young King's education.

It is recalled by those who remembered Mme. Grouitch during her former residence in Washington that she laughed as heartily as any of the guests when the butler of an important household here announcing the arrival of the Minister and Mme. Grouitch became confused over his title and said in a grave tone of voice: "Minister of the Serbs and all those other things."

Speaking of war relief brings back memories of the Navy Relief Society when George Dewey, Admiral of the Navy, was its head and took great interest in its work. When Admiral Dewey died before the United States entered the World War the navy men and women he had honored as fellow workers carried on for him. High in this category was the late Capt. Edward Dorn, U. S. N., whose recent death was so regretted. The annual Navy Relief Ball is on the spring schedule and interest in it remains unabated. A worker long identified with it, too, was Mrs. Spencer Wood, wife of Rear Admiral Spencer Wood, U. S. N., who died recently.

Now on the subject of war relief service one must pause to note that many officers and men of the army, navy and marine corps were saddened last week to learn of the death of Mrs. Laura V. Dann, who from World War days until her death worked indefatigably for the men in the hospitals here who had seen service. She organized parties for them, took them on pilgrimage to Mount Vernon and other historic spots and was loved and revered by them for her abiding interest in their welfare.

Mrs. Dann began this work under the Woman's Naval Service at its World War headquarters, The Theodorus Bailey Myers Mason House. Arriving early for one of Mrs. Roosevelt's press conferences at the White House recently, it was interesting to watch the early morning wheels go around at the executive mansion. The first thing to catch the eye was the electric waxer at work making that mirror, like finish to the floor, one of the charms of the staterooms of the White House. The dust left in the end of the waxer was a large puff and as fluffy as a powder puff.

Blame it on the tremendous purchases furriers made last Summer when fur prices reached their highest level since 1929. Blame it on the recession which hit the country last Fall and slowed up buying. The fact remains that furriers are now left with thousands of dollars' worth of unsold furs.

Lane Bryant is instrumental in relieving furriers of thousands of fur coats in the greatest fur sale in our entire history. Immediately, the whole fur market was galvanized into action. Furriers, who last week held out, hoping for better market conditions; furriers with whom we haven't done business in ten years; furriers from the length and breadth of Fur Market—stormed our doors, kept wires humming and phones jangling—offering us bargains the like of which we doubt we (or you) will ever see again.

The new season is beginning and furriers must have capital NOW if they're to remain in business. If slashed prices are the answer, they'll slash them with a vengeance.

We're sorry these furriers have had such an unfortunate season. But it's the old story of an ill wind that blows no one good. Tomorrow! While you reap the benefits of these slashed prices, furriers get the capital they need to stay in business.

We're not prophets. We can't say that next month fur prices will increase 20, or 30, or 40%. We CAN say that if furs should remain at these levels, there would be no fur industry. If you need a new fur coat, an extra fur coat—don't wait—

TOMORROW'S THE TIME TO BUY!

TOMORROW, you are invited to accept the complete works of Mark Twain in a magnificent 24-volume library, practically for the asking.

Think of it! The Complete Works of MARK TWAIN! America's beloved Prince of Laughter! That one day the rich treasure of his complete works should be within your grasp was beyond all imagining . . . Yet here they are—YOURS—almost as a gift! YOURS—practically for the asking and you can claim the first volume tomorrow. No waiting, no red tape—just clip the coupon below and come in right away. A new book will be yours every week.

Why This Offer Is Made!

Two years ago, at centennial ceremonies all over the world, Mark Twain societies paid tribute to America's greatest author. At that time, in every civilized country, memorial exercises were conducted in his honor . . .

Also at that time something that means much more to the happiness of your family took place . . . a few far-sighted men conceived the idea of creating—NOT ONE Mark Twain monument—but living monuments that would create happiness, that could be brought right into hundreds of thousands of American homes—into your own home—the place where Mark Twain himself wanted to be remembered.

Public-spirited men and women gave their services to the cause. And so today the Mark Twain Commemoration Committee takes pride in inviting you to accept the Complete Works of America's beloved Prince of Laughter—practically for the asking!

Would You Prefer the Superb AMERICAN ARTISTS' DE LUXE EDITION?

For those among our readers who are satisfied with nothing but the best, the Mark Twain Commemoration Committee has made available a flawlessly exquisite American Artists' De Luxe Edition of these great masterpieces of literature—a triumph of color-harmony, classic design and expert book-craftsmanship!

These matchless DE LUXE volumes are bound in creamy, "cleanable" white with lustrous gilded titles and ornamentation—stamped in jewel-tone with stained tops that match! An adaptation by Clarence Hornung, America's foremost book designer—adorns the top cover.

The end papers are the work of that world-renowned "painter with the pen," Franklin Booth! William Addison Dwiggins, celebrated type stylist and supreme master of his craft, has furnished the decoration and hand lettering.

And what a glorious array of talent has been called upon for the illustrations of this sumptuous edition! The work of the inimitable Howard Pyle—master painter and artist extraordinary—is here in all its rich, living color! N. C. Wyeth! Worth Brehm! Franklin Booth! Names that have been emblazoned on the honor roll of art!

Books of rare, vivid beauty—built for generations of constant usage! Woven head and tail bands! Heavy end papers! A binding that is DURABLE and CLEANABLE!

And here is good news! If you prefer this "American Artists" Edition, all you are asked to pay is the give-away sum of only 59c for each volume.

You may take your choice, but you must act at once! The number of De Luxe Libraries is VERY LIMITED, and will be available only to those who claim their first book immediately. CLAIM YOUR FIRST VOLUME TOMORROW! CLIP THE COUPON BELOW AND COME IN RIGHT AWAY.

NOW ALMOST A GIFT
Claim YOUR FIRST BOOK TOMORROW

In Australia, China, Japan—throughout Europe—in the farthest corners of the earth—children and grown-ups have thrilled to the adventures of TWAIN'S beloved characters. To the peoples in all lands Mark Twain is an inexhaustible source of happiness and sound philosophy, a tremendous influence for good. He typifies the American spirit of optimism and courage.

If the Spanish people, the Russian, the Chinese, the French must have him—why should you, an American, do without him? Until now you were compelled to because complete sets of Mark Twain's works are so precious and so costly, so rigidly copyrighted throughout and so closely held that only a few wealthy families could afford them.

Now, however you need no longer be without Mark Twain. Tomorrow the Mark Twain Commemoration Committee invites you to accept his Complete Works in 24 Majestic Volumes PRACTICALLY FOR THE ASKING!

Now you, too, can have Mark Twain to lift away the burden of life, to make your home a sweeter, happier place; and to take you back to the golden days of your boyhood. Now your children can enjoy the benefit of growing up with Mark Twain's clean, sane influence. Now you and your family can have this very precious library ALMOST AS A GIFT!

"I am most happy to see MARK TWAIN'S books being almost given away. It is what my cousin, Mark Twain, himself, would have wanted—his books within the reach of everyone—in the very homes of the people he loved so well.

"It's as necessary as carbon paper"

Chamberlain's Lotion is a fixture in offices everywhere. One reason for its popularity among all business girls is that after using it, papers never stick to the fingers. Chamberlain's, a clear, golden liquid, dries quickly. Above all, it is never sticky, greasy, gummy nor "messy." Because it satinizes, it helps keep dainty fingers lovely, skin smooth and attractive. At all toilet goods counters.

SPECIAL DRENE FOR DRY HAIR

HOW DOES THIS NEW SPECIAL DRENE FOR DRY HAIR DIFFER FROM THE DRENE I'VE BEEN USING?
THAT'S JUST THE KIND OF A SHAMPOO MY HAIR NEEDS—IT'S SO DRY AND 'WILD' AFTER A SHAMPOO. GIVE ME A BOTTLE, PLEASE.
THIS NEW DRENE, MADAM, IS SPECIALLY CREATED TO MAKE HARD-TO-MANAGE, DRY HAIR STAY IN PLACE IMMEDIATELY AFTER WASHING. AND GIVE IT SPARKLING BEAUTY, TOO.

Here, at last, is a shampoo that leaves dry, unruly hair wonderfully manageable immediately after washing . . . and sparkling with dazzling highlights

TODAY, a new Special Drene for Dry Hair has just been placed on the market which is thrilling women everywhere with its amazing gentle results. For it leaves even the driest hair as easy to manage as normal hair immediately after washing. And imparts a brilliance and glamorous beauty never before seen.

Your very first shampoo with this Special Drene for Dry Hair will prove a revelation to you, no matter how unruly, dull and lifeless your hair has been left after using old-fashioned methods. You will see your hair set perfectly—every strand in place—the minute you dress it. Beautiful highlights will dance and sparkle and your hair will abound with new life, new-found beauty.

This amazing shampoo is as safe as water on hair, and so different that the process by which it is made has been patented. It is not a soap—not an oil. It isn't anything you've heard of before. It's revolutionary—and its effect on dry hair is just as magical as the process by which it is made. There is nothing milder, nothing more effective that you can possibly use to clean your hair. And of another thing you can be certain—there is no safer, more beautifying shampoo in all the world. And healthy hair demands a safe shampoo.

Amazingly Easy and Quick to Use

You simply wet your hair, pour on a few drops and instantly you get a glorious, billowy, gentle lather. Five times more lather than soap in hardest water. You rub it briskly into the hair, rinse thoroughly—and you're through.

"What?" you say, "no vinegar, lemon or special after-rinses to 'cut' the lather? No brilliantine, pomades or sticky greases to make your hair stay down, and give it life and sparkle?" No, they are not necessary.

First Shampoo a Revelation

And how overjoyed you will be to find that your hair is not a snarled, tangled mass. That it is not left "wild" and unruly. That's the astonishing result of the new Special Drene for Dry Hair. When you set your hair, not only will every strand be in place—but your waves will be more radiant, more beautiful than you have ever seen them before.

Most amazing, embarrassing dandruff flakes disappear with a single washing, leaving the scalp scrupulously clean. For all these reasons the best beauty shops recommend and will give you Drene shampoos.

Try for Thrill of Your Life

You can now buy the new Special Drene for Dry Hair in various sizes at all drug, department and ten cent stores. Only half a tablespoonful for a perfect shampoo. The most economical and beautifying shampoo you have ever used. Try this amazing shampoo at once. Buy the large size and save money. Made by Procter & Gamble. Trade-mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

SPECIAL NOTICE

Because different types of hair require different treatments to get the best results, there are now two kinds of Drene:

(1) Regular Drene for normal or oily hair.

(2) Special Drene for dry hair. You can obtain either Regular or Special Drene from drug, department and ten cent stores.

ST. CHARLES ITEMS

MRS. ALLEN W. CLARKE, 800 Jefferson street, and her daughter, Mrs. Richard O. Denning, 800 North Sixth street, entertained friends at a reception and tea yesterday at Mrs. Clarke's home.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Clare Elizabeth Faherty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Faherty of St. Louis, to James M. Duggan, son of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Duggan of Kirkwood. Mr. Duggan is manager of the Duebbert & Thoelke insurance agency.

Announcement of the engagement of two relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar G. Roschke, 805 Washington street, have been announced. Miss Edna Wendt of Red Bud, Ill., and the Rev. Carl Roschke of Kirksville, Mo., will marry soon, while the engagement of Miss Elsie Roschke, of Cole Camp, Mo., to Rev. F. Reith of Detroit, Ia., was recently announced. The Rev. Mr. Reith is a son of the late pastor of the Orchard Farm Lutheran Church. Miss Wendt and Miss Roschke were guests last week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Roschke.

A St. Valentine's dinner dance Friday night at Lindenwood College was given by the Freshman class at Sibley Hall and Butler Gymnasium for the rest of the school. The ceiling was festooned with small hearts, while large Valentines were placed at either end of the hall. Favors were given to the guests. Receiving were Miss Mary Dillon, president of the class, Dr. and Mrs. John L. Roemer and the class sponsor, Dr. Marion Dawson.

An innovation at Lindenwood College is the contract bridge tournament now going on in the Y. W. C. A. clubrooms among foursomes from Irwin, Butler, Niccolls, Ayres and Sibley halls. With the final elimination of teams to one set of victors from each hall, the championship between halls will be played off early this week. A silver cup will be given to the winner. Miss Betty Harper of Des Moines, Ia., is in charge of arrangements.

A St. Valentine's tea will be given at 4:45 o'clock tomorrow afternoon by the music sororities for students in the School of Music at Lindenwood College. It will be held in the library clubrooms.

THIS NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.

WHAT Maury Paul calls a "hate wave" seems annually to overwhelm the Manhattan social scene along this time of year. Malice is in the air, old friends and lovers start uprooting each other's scalps and reputations on the slightest incentive, the gossip paragraphs are awash with bad feeling and a superabundance of ill will dominates any convocation of two or more converging over a sociable toothbrush mug of gin and bitters. The possibilities of insult seem uncommonly lush during the winter season and foot-stamping and eye-flashing are visible evidences of outraged hauteur on every hand. At the moment there are a score of potable vendettas of positively Hatfield-McCoy proportions blazing brightly; a foreign phony has threatened to chew the ears off all or any members of the management of Morocco because the house very properly, since it was after closing hour, refused to serve his escorte a drink; a female columnist on one of the town's morning papers carried a personal note so far a few weeks ago in print that she contrived to ease herself out of a job.

THE TOWN'S most pretentious hostess is furious at all the newspaper photographers in New York because they have smirkingly taken her at her word when she once said she didn't want to be pictured, with the result that she hasn't had any camera publicity since and is fit to be tied; the unfortunate episode of Cecil Beaton's shame has aroused quantities of ill will in publishing circles; Dwight Fiske, who can be pretty terrifying when in a huff, has done such a wickedly witty job on a local beer hall pipsqueak that the little drizzlepuss, suffused with blushes, has fled the town; the man has come for the piano at half a dozen once happy and celebrated love nests and the extra fare trains to Reno are running out of Chicago in two sections. Now is the winter of our discontent and, stranger, whatever you say you better smile when you say it. Otherwise, somebody is sure to be insulted and will have convulsions right at the bar with you.

District Attorney Dewey is the town's most notable sword cane carrier . . . The nearest thing to an amiable walrus at the zoo is Ben Sonnenberg, whose long, yellow, handle-bar mustaches are the glory of press agent circles, swimming in the Biltmore baths . . . Like it or not, there will probably be a deluge of films exploiting the glamor of cafe life and celebrities . . . Two major film concerns are already running up numbers based on night club and restaurant existence in New York and others are reported about to follow their lead . . . Myrna Kingsley's astrology business has grown by such leaps and bounds as a result of her wireless programs that she is now a wholesaler in future and advertising in the coated-paper magazines . . . Since the death of Dexter Fellows there has been a great revival of anecdotes of circus agents and old-timers in the bars are telling a new generation of reporters of the exploits of Toddy Hamilton, who had Dexter's job long years ago.

SYMPHONY FOR GOURMETS: The Canape Marquis, a hot confection of tuna fish and mustard sauce, at the Margueray . . . The snails bourgignonne at the Lafayette . . . Also the Lafayette's Trocadero, an actually plausible arrangement of ices, fruits and pastry . . . The Parmesan cheese at the Colony Bar, made at the Italian farm of Gene Cavilieri, the proprietor . . . The homemade chicken soup, a Sunday specialty at the Plaza and marvelous for hangovers . . . The fromage de maison at Jean's in Sixtieth street, cream and roquefort secretely blended with cayenne and Worchestershire . . . The soft clam pie on Fridays at Billy the Oysterman's . . . The breast of chicken Tanya, stuffed with foie gras and fried in deep fat, the invention of Albert Keller at the Ritz . . . The crab meat cocktails at Jack Bleeck's Artists and Writers, served in containers the size of coffee cups with wonderful Russian dressing . . . Crepes a l'orange made by Maitre d'Hotel Malnati of the Biltmore from his own private formula . . . The hot Bortch at Reubens served with a boiled potato as big as your fist . . . The first Delaware shad of the season at Whyte's in Fulton street . . . And the pompano saute Meuniere at Gage and Tolner's in Brooklyn . . . The figs in syrup served with double cream on the New Haven's dining cars . . . Jack Dempsey's Kansas City steaks hung to a stop watch exactness and served with plenty of butter and pepper.

Auriol Lee's newest compact is made to resemble a telephone dial, with numbered and lettered finger holes around the edge . . . The traditional rivalry of the Pennsylvania and New York Central lines will reach its peak when their new equipment for the Broadway Limited and the Century, respectively, is put into service . . . Each is rushing new luxury trains to completion and each probably will cut an hour, or even more, off the timing on the New York-Chicago runs . . . Shenley's is patting its own back with reasonable pride over its fine new Bacardi room in the Empire State Building . . . Designed by Franklin Hughes, who won't be called an interior decorator and says that his calling is that of a "barologist," the rum pavilion has a cobalt blue ceiling, with tiny pinhole spotlights focused on drinkers' chairs, and the walls are illustrated by Gatterno, a Cuban muralist and protege of Ernest Hemingway and John Dos Passos.

THE MEN'S TOUPEE department at Robert's Fifth Avenue beauty shop has been doing such a rush job in bald pates that it is taking over two floors formerly devoted to female reupholstering . . . Billy Rose's Casa Manana, which the cynical and timid feared would be one big night club too many, is playing to $50,000 a week . . . "Dining, Wining and Dancing in New York," by Scudder Middleton, furnishes at last a complete guide book to the town's fun palaces.

CLEVELAND IS STILL TITTERING happily over the Shaker Heights hostess who was arranging for her daughter a debutante party that was to rival Mrs. Aileen Winslow's, to date the local season's top-notch barn raising. She issued commands to tradesmen that everything should be of the best, better, if possible, than Mrs. Winslow's. When the question of wine came up and it was mentioned that her rival had served lashings of champagne, she told the grocer she wanted something much more exquisite—how about a vintage of "the best sparkling sherry"?

HIGH AND DRY ON SOCIAL BEACH

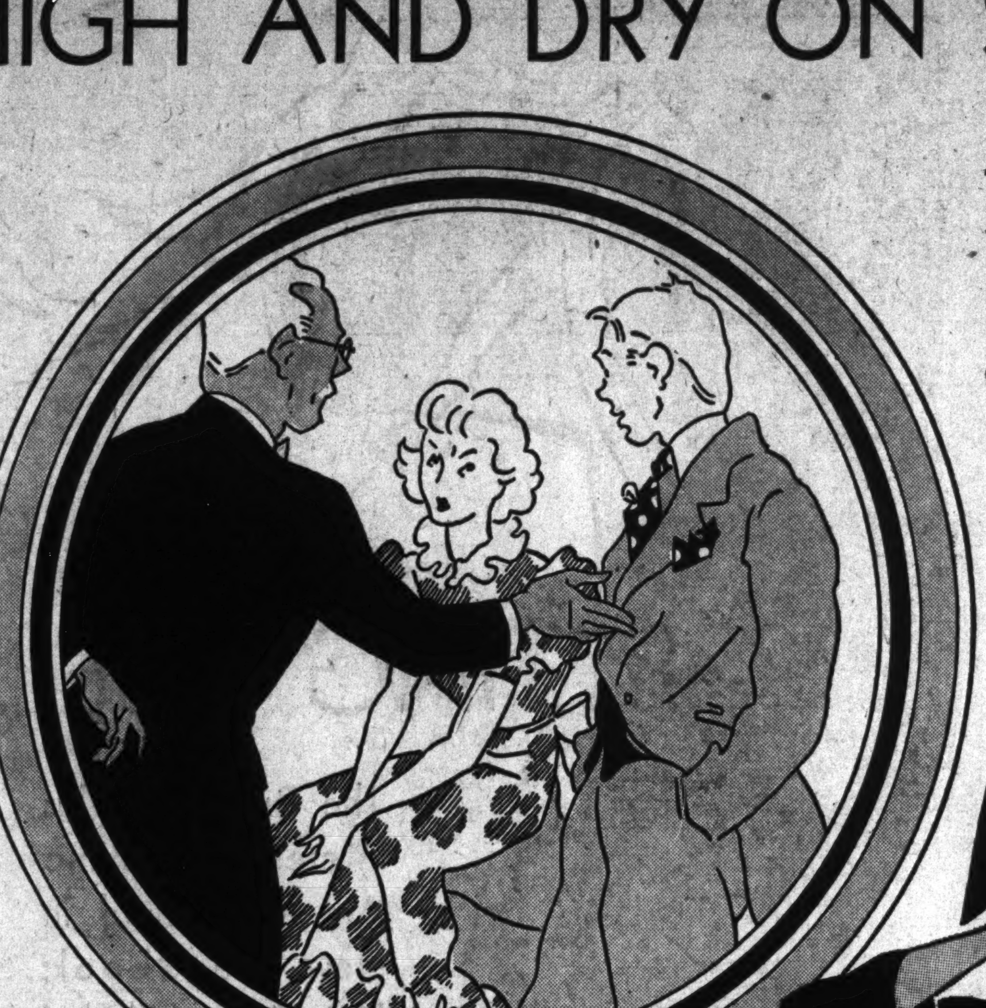
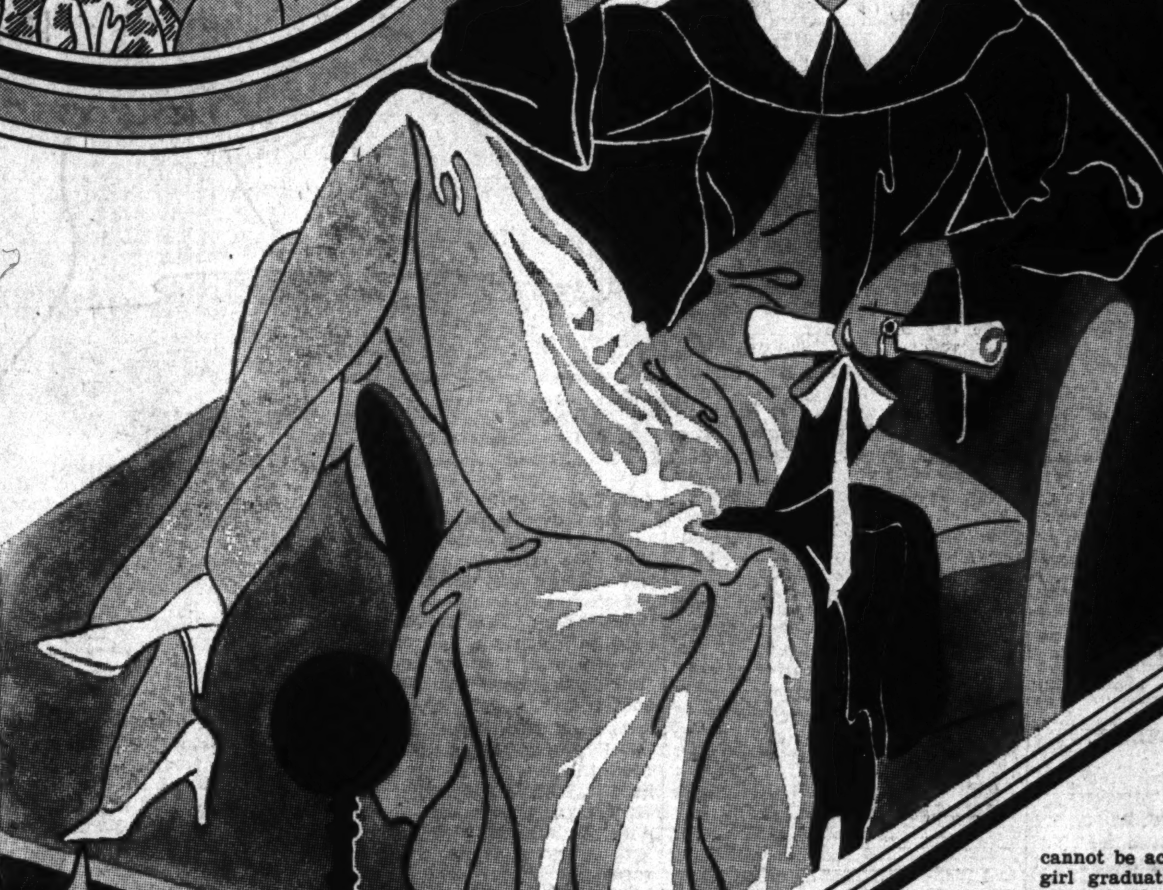
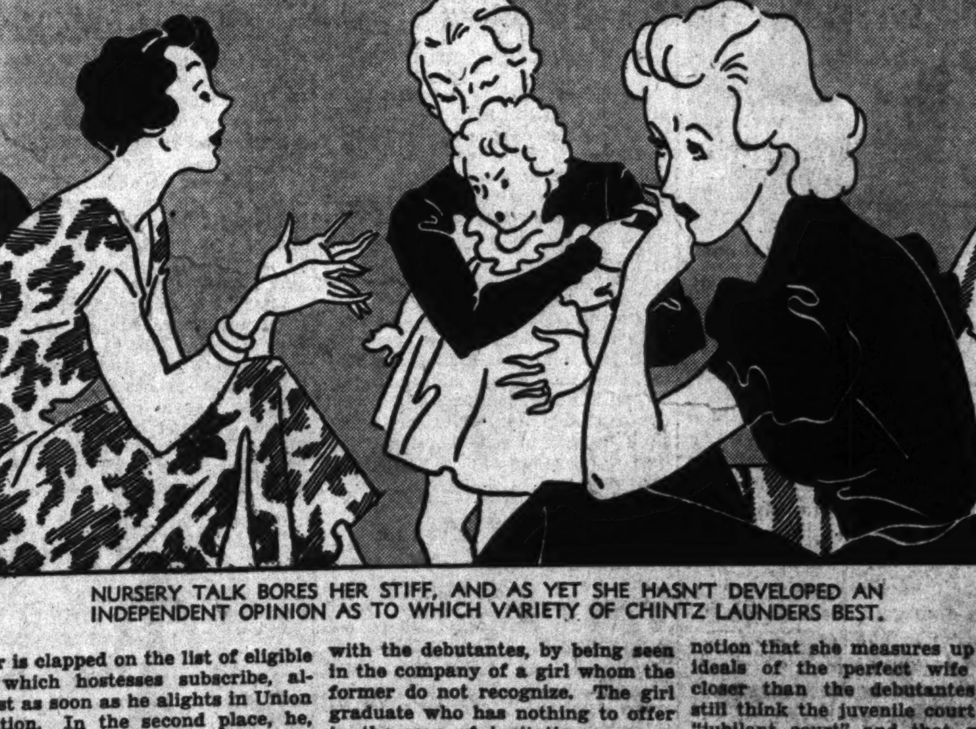
By DOROTHY COLEMAN



FATHER IS PROVERBIALLY A POOR PICKER.



IS ANYONE AWARE OF HER PRESENCE? NOT SO YOU WOULD NOTICE IT.



NURSERY TALK BORES HER STIFF, AND AS YET SHE HASN'T DEVELOPED AN INDEPENDENT OPINION AS TO WHICH VARIETY OF CHINTZ LAUNDERS BEST.

PLENTY has been said about the joys and sorrows of being a debutante for a season. But what about the plight of the recent college graduate who has never been a debutante and never will be if she can help it, even though her family has the means and position to bring her out and put her over in style? She is the forgotten woman in the social scheme. From her vantage point she looks down on the whole ritual of debut-making as a racket, debutantes as frivolous adolescents and their beaux as numbskulls. But she would enjoy an occasional lark, now that she has presumably completed her preparation for the business of living.

There are any number of such enlightened young women around town. Only no one ever hears about them; their names are seldom news. In addition to the qualifications for any first-class debutante—i. e., a substantial bank roll, a fashionable address, a passable figure and face, and parents of some standing in the community—they have had the intellectual advantage of an education beyond finishing school, and the social advantage of such extra-curricular instruction as proms, football games, and house-parties afford. After four years away from home, they make their triumphal return, armed wth a sheepskin, a Fifth avenue wardrobe, and the poise that comes of knowing their way around. But is anyone aware of their presence? Not so you would notice it.

Their school friends and contemporaries, who chose a debut rather than a college education, have out-distanced them socially. They have forgotten all about the grand time they used to have together pulling taffy on Friday nights and swapping movie stars' pictures Saturdays. Their new friends are strangers to their old playmates and don't welcome the latters' sudden intrusion. In the four years our young woman has been away, her old friends may even have taken on the responsibility of a husband and a child or two with all of which activity the recent college graduate can hardly be expected to sympathize. Academically, she may be interested in this or that theory of child psychology but nursery talk bores her stiff and as yet she has not developed an independent opinion as to which variety of chintz launders best.

The girls who are in the social swim the fall our girl graduate returns to her native heath, are much younger than she, since the accepted age for a debutante has dropped down to well below 20. A girl who doffs her mortar board and gown before she is 21 is almost a phenomenon. By that ripe age she has come to regard herself alongside the finishing school fledglings, as a flight-tried adult. Conversely the sketchily-educated, inexperienced debutantes look upon her as a threat. They don't want her around spoiling their fun even if she is Handsome Hal's sister and a prospective ally in their conquest of his affections. Or maybe they do relent and invite her to a dinner dance. Just as a gamble she decides to go. But once is enough. Her appointed escort, none too pleased about the appointment, escapes from the table after the soup without so much as a by-your-leave, and never turns up again. When rumor spreads that he is out cold in the men's room, she collects her coat, and leaves by taxi, vowing that it's the last time she will ever subject herself to such humiliation.

Besides, she can think of lots better ways to spend her evenings. Better to be a wall flower in your own front parlor.

The boys with whom the sweet girl graduate used to go to fortnightly dancing classes and an occasional movie, having reached man's estate, are in the same boat with her. If they have been away to college—and four years' residence on an Eastern campus is standard equipment for moneyed men these days—they are just home, too, anxious to make new contacts in the interests of their chosen business or profession. The difference is that they don't have to sit at home and wait for invitations to come to them. In the first place, the name of any young bachelor is clapped on the list of eligible to which hostesses subscribe, almost as soon as he alights in Union Station. In the second place, he, being of the assertive sex, can set out straightway to impress himself on the also-eligible damsels. The boys, unsure of their social footing, don't dare risk their reputation with the debutantes, by being seen in the company of a girl whom the former do not recognize. The girl graduate who has nothing to offer in the way of invitations can go jump in the lake as far as the newly-launched beaux are concerned.

The old-time fusser, who has seen many a season wax and wane, cannot be accused of deserting the girl graduate. He simply is unaware of her existence. And far be it from him to go out of his way to discover her. Let someone else do the pioneering, is his attitude. Several successful seasons have given him such a high-and-mighty opinion of his desirability, that he won't bestow his attentions on an unknown. Fundamentally he is a snob—afraid to venture outside his own little circle. No matter that in reality he finds the college graduate much better company and may even harbor some notion that she measures up to his ideals of the perfect wife a lot closer than the debutantes who still think the juvenile court is the "jubilant court" and that missing a Saturday night at the country club amounts to social disgrace.

The girl's mother, though she

ON THE FLICKER FRONT

By H. H. NIEMEYER

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 12.

TUESDAY will be Jack Benny's birthday. He was just a little Valentine to his parents 44 years ago. If you want to send him a telegram of congratulation it will be OK with Jack. But don't send it collect. He's already notified the telegraph companies that he won't be responsible for any debts except those contracted by himself. Maybe, if you hear him over the radio next Sunday night he'll tell you about his birthday party. It's a cinch Mary Livingstone will mention it, probably without letting Jack know about it at rehearsal. She frequently does things like that. Now Jack is a nervous man. He's habitually jumpy, but when we saw him last Friday in his dressing room at Paramount he was in a state to arouse pity in a heart steeled against the woes of entertainers who only manage to pull down $15,000 or so a week.

On Fridays—any Friday—he alternately paces and flops, in rotation, upon chairs and divan. Instead of sitting still be goes through a series of squee-gees, supporting himself successively upon the back of his neck, the end of his spine and the various vertebrae in between. And he has scarf trouble. In the approved Hollywood manner for informal attire he wears a scarf knotted around his throat inside his sport shirt. The knot keeps sliding 'round behind one ear. He jerks it back and tucks it in under the chin. In two minutes it is consorting with his ear again. The effect is peculiarly harassing. Even the cigar which he is smoking has the tremors.

FOR ALL THIS Benny is apologetic. "It's Friday," he explains unnecessarily. "It's my deadline. I mean the deadline for my radio show. It has to be in shape today so we can rehearse tomorrow. Only have one rehearsal because if we try more then the show doesn't sound spontaneous when we put it on the air. The rehearsal is always terrible.

"I like radio. I like pictures. I know I'm lucky to be able to do both. I wouldn't change the situation for anything. In fact, I'm so full of gratitude to producers, sponsors and public I'm the legitimate offspring of Pollyanna and one of the Rollo boys.

"But just among friends like this I don't mind saying that if a fellow were given his choice between trying to balance the national budget and trying to be funny all the time he'd be a sucker if he didn't tackle the budget.

"Sometimes I wonder why I ever quit playing the violin."

WE MENTIONED Mary Livingstone who is, as every radio fan knows, Mrs. Benny. She is also under contract for pictures with Paramount but so far has appeared in only one film, "This Way, Please." Mary's place on her husband's air show was made solid by popular request. She first went on as a temporary attraction. Neither she nor Jack had any idea of making it permanent until fan letters began to pour in. The flood reached such proportions it soon became apparent Mary's deflations of Jack's witticisms were what the public wanted.

And Mary is much more than just a stooge for Jack. Her case parallels, in a way, that of her closest friend, Gracie Allen. Gracie began as a foil for George Burns. Pretty soon she was taking most of the play away from him. The two couples are constant companions. George and Jack have been friends for 20 years. They used to live together. Jack says George is the best off-stage clown he has ever known. "I can't touch him in a social gathering," says Jack. "When George starts I give up."

As a matter of fact, Jack is a rather sober individual when he isn't working. All comedians are supposed to be and aren't. They vary like other people. Still it can't be said truthfully that Jack puts his sense of humor away on a shelf between chores. He is a genial, pleasant person to talk to—even on Fridays.

ABOUT 10 YEARS AGO when Benny was playing in vaudeville at the old Orpheum Theater in Los Angeles he met and married Mary. The next year when he came back here on his regular two-a-day stuff M-G-M tempted him to try the film game. Tempted him with a lot of Hollywood gold. So the Pride of Waukegan deserted the varieties, which were dying anyway, for a flight into flickers. The flight covered three pictures, "The Hollywood Revue of 1929," "Chasing Rainbows," and "The Medicine Man," with long waits in between. Benny,

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

MY OPINION

Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

THE group of girls I go with range in age from 14 to 16 years. There is a fad among us to take turns about staying all night with each other. My mother thinks that it is perfectly all right for any of the girls to spend the night with me; but she won't even think of letting me spend the night with any of them. It isn't because she has anything against the girls, but she says I am too young to stay away from home. Of course I disagree.

Please put a piece in the paper making her see that she isn't fair to me or my friend. It is terribly embarrassing to have to refuse, as she has stayed with me so often. J. G.

When your mother has refused so often for you to stay with this girl both she and her mother should have taken the hint by this time. Your mother must be a very kindly and wise person to keep on allowing you to ask the girls there when she does not approve of the custom for her own daughter.

The fact is, your mother is eminently right. When young girls stay the night with each other it is always a temptation to neglect home duties, the regular routine a girl should have about bedtime, while she is still going to school and maturing physically. So do give your mother the credit she deserves for her conservative and common-sense ideas.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● WILL YOU PLEASE TELL ME if it is proper for the groom-to-be to help a bride-to-be in getting her trousseau? I mean, in this case, her dress, as I am already helping in other ways. Of course I think in present conditions people should not be so formal. She isn't working and as I can help her I don't think it fair to postpone the wedding on this account. After all I will do this after marriage and I don't see any harm in doing it now. What do you think would be best for a man to wear at the wedding in such circumstances. Thanking you kindly. GROOM-TO-BE.

In such circumstances, the simpler the wedding the better. There is no use whatsoever of shopping in advance for household things, such as linens, furniture and an elaborate trousseau. Her trousseau she should provide, and perhaps she can afford the simplest kind, which is all that is necessary.

It would be better to go to the minister's study or to have only the family at a home service, and she need not even get a new frock. The wedding flowers and bouquet, a pretty pair of gloves and fresh accessories would make up the bridal array just as well as an outlay for a large trousseau; and would be in much better taste than handsome clothing, new linens bought by the bridegroom for the bride or any personal equipment for the bride.

Wear a good-looking business suit.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● I AM WRITING YOU in the hope that you may be able to help me with my own particular problem. A very dear friend and I, recently settled in St. Louis, are young married people. Our husbands both have jobs which take them away from the city for weeks, and sometimes months at a time. Of course we understand that, in these times we must be thankful that they have this means of supporting us, but their long absences deprive us of their companionship and happiness that we would have. Our main problem is our growing loneliness. What would you suggest we do? LONELY SEMI-WIDOW.

There is no reason to be lonely now, even in a strange city, but I understand that a little direction would help. You are, however, not quite definite. You have given me no idea of your talents and accomplishments or your taste. Is it musical, literary; do you like social service work; are you fond of athletics—all these tastes and interests can be gratified easily in St. Louis, and, if you wish to be more specific, send me self-addressed and stamped envelope and I can help you out. Refer, when you write, to your signature "Lonely Semi-Widow."

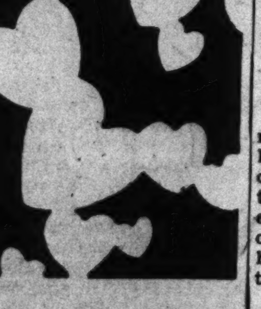
My dear Mrs. Carr:

● SOME TIME AGO people from another city moved into my father's flat. At first, they seemed very nice, quiet people, and the man gave us to understand that his wife did not care to be bothered, as she "liked to be alone." But they have not lived there a month when the woman became extremely bold and a regular nuisance. She coolly uses everything of ours within reach, even a washing-machine.



Mother, being generous, told her she could use it, occasionally, but said that it would be in use on Monday as that was our wash day. She agreed. But soon began getting up early and beating mother to it.

Mother will not say anything, as this woman is very quick-tempered; but she is growing intolerable. Please tell me, Mrs. Carr, how we are to keep this woman from making mother a nervous wreck. I am hoping the woman will read your answer also. Thank you. A DAUGHTER.

It is more than likely that the husband was aware of his wife's disposition to be cheeky with her neighbors and I have no doubt that she has, before, brought him trouble. Probably, he hoped to forestall any beginnings of this kind by saying she liked to be alone. If it happens that the washing machine can be placed out of sight, this should be done at once. And at the same time a little change of manner, very friendly, but slightly iced, should be adopted by your household.

Since she does not understand the proper reserve carefully preserved by well-bred people living in such close quarters, her temper is likely to find vent; but you should pay as little attention to this as possible, say nothing when she rants, go into the house and the next morning greet her pleasantly. Say that sometimes you have unexpected use for household things and you do not like to bother her by going to her apartment so often or at inconvenient hours.

Any woman who is blind to the situation here, probably is an inveterate mover anyhow and you should waste no worry if she leaves.

By Elsie Robinson

THIS business of "outsmarting the other fellow"——

Getting by with a "slick bit of business"——

There's a temporary kick to it, maybe. You think you've made some easy money and are a clever number—yes? But have you ever thought of the other side of the picture? Have you ever considered the tag you hang on YOURSELF?

No, I'm not going to preach a sermon. But there's so much of this smart stuff . . . you meet it everywhere. Remember the old time when "a man's word was as good as his bond?" That's a joke now . . ethics for "the folks from the sticks." Even so-called decent people pride themselves today on "putting over a fast one"—until one stumbles over a line like this by Hester Cholmonely:

"Still, as of old, men by themselves
"For thirty pieces Judas SOLD HIMSELF, not Christ!"

—o-o—

FOR THIRTY PIECES . . . I wonder how Judas would have felt if some one had put it up to him like that, beforehand? He was young, they say. Young and ambitious . . . envious, too, perhaps. Jealous of that other Young Man. Clawed by envy as he saw that Other riding through the palms . . . with faces lifted in adoration.

If he, Judas, could ride like that . . . be worshiped like that . . . have such power! Or even greater power . . . power among the wily priests and politicians. If by some trick—some subtle, secret trick—he, too, could ride in triumph, with the great!

Judas scheming. Going and coming with the rest of them, fooling them all while he schemed—planning and pretending. Telling himself that it was all right. Telling himself that if he didn't do it, some one else would. Saying he needed it . . . had a right to it . . . smiling, perhaps, at his careful cleverness . . . doing the thing which no one would ever suspect.

Then, at the last, everything in a rush. The feast . . . the cup . . . the kiss of death . . . the thirty silver pieces passed from hand to hand . . . His silver—his at last! The kiss—the coin—the swiftly coming power—he'd done it all—!

THEN SUDDENLY, as though a vulture swooped, the horror was upon him! He'd sold his Lord! For what? For thirty silver pieces? No! For hate and heartbreak . . . and shame the endless hells could never sear away! . . . And so he went outside and hanged himself . . . and died.

Thirty pieces of silver—that's what he got. But what did he pay for them? Horror at dawn . . . Heartbreak and choking sobs . . . and then—a shamed thing dangling from a cursed tree. I wonder how Judas would have felt if anyone had put it up to him like that—beforehand?

That "slick bit of business" . . . those "fast ones" we put over . . . the short-changing and the double-crossing that seems such a keen joke—and the easy money that's our goal these days—

That's what we get.

BUT WHAT DO WE PAY FOR IT ALL?

That's what we put over on the Other Fellow —

BUT WHAT DO WE PUT OVER ON OURSELVES?

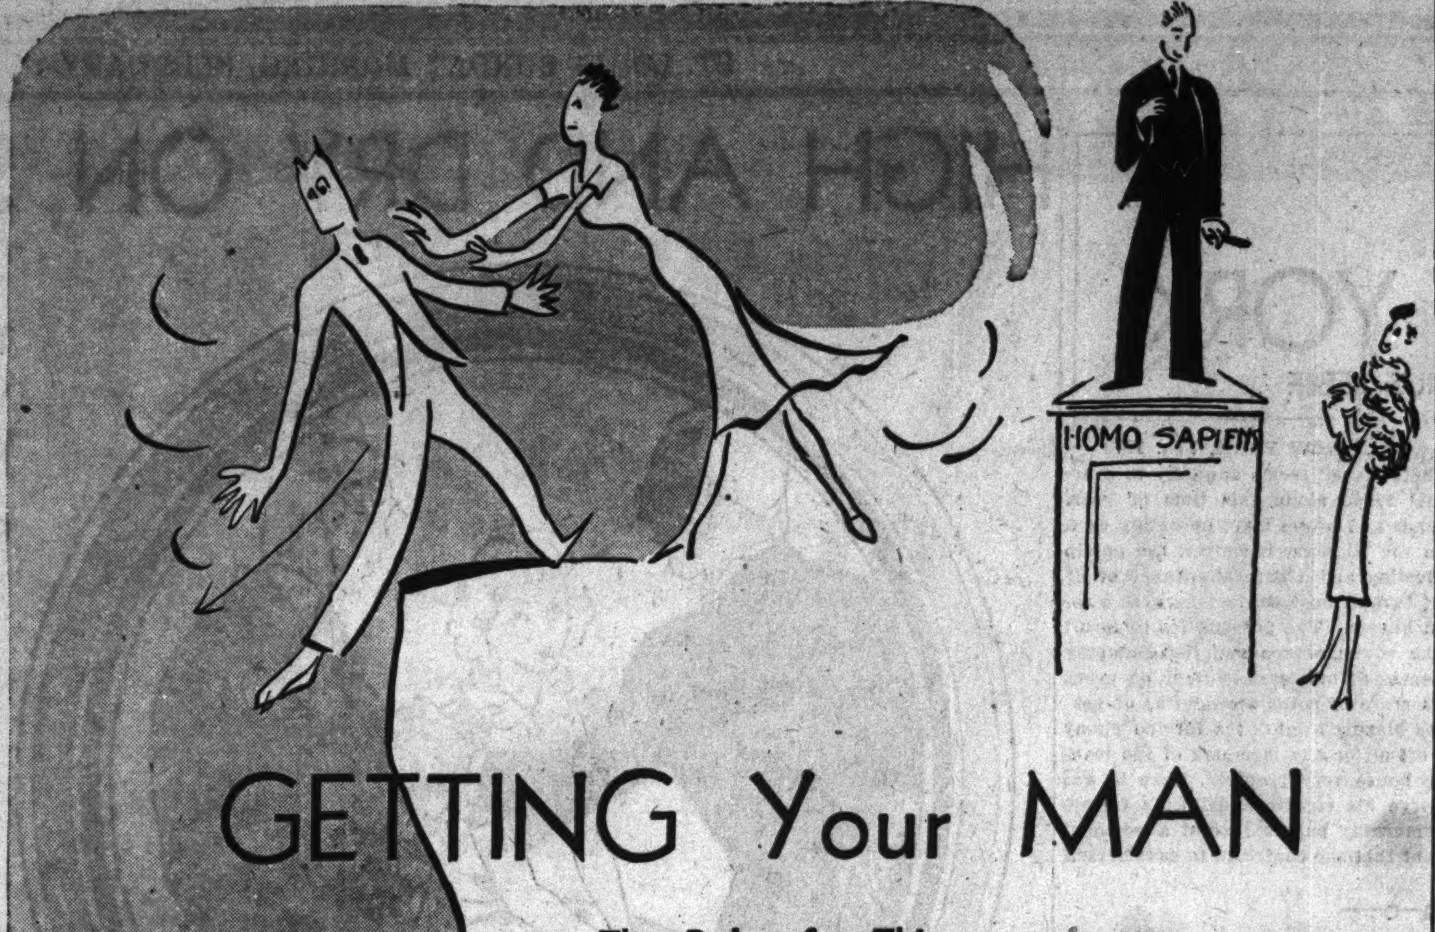
Bolero Brightens Old Evening Dress

An old evening dress can take a new lease on life, now that the bolero is offered in such a variety of themes. Those who like a trim, tailored type of jacket will be interested in the versions that are made of sharkskin or printed linen. They have boyish collars and stitched trimming.

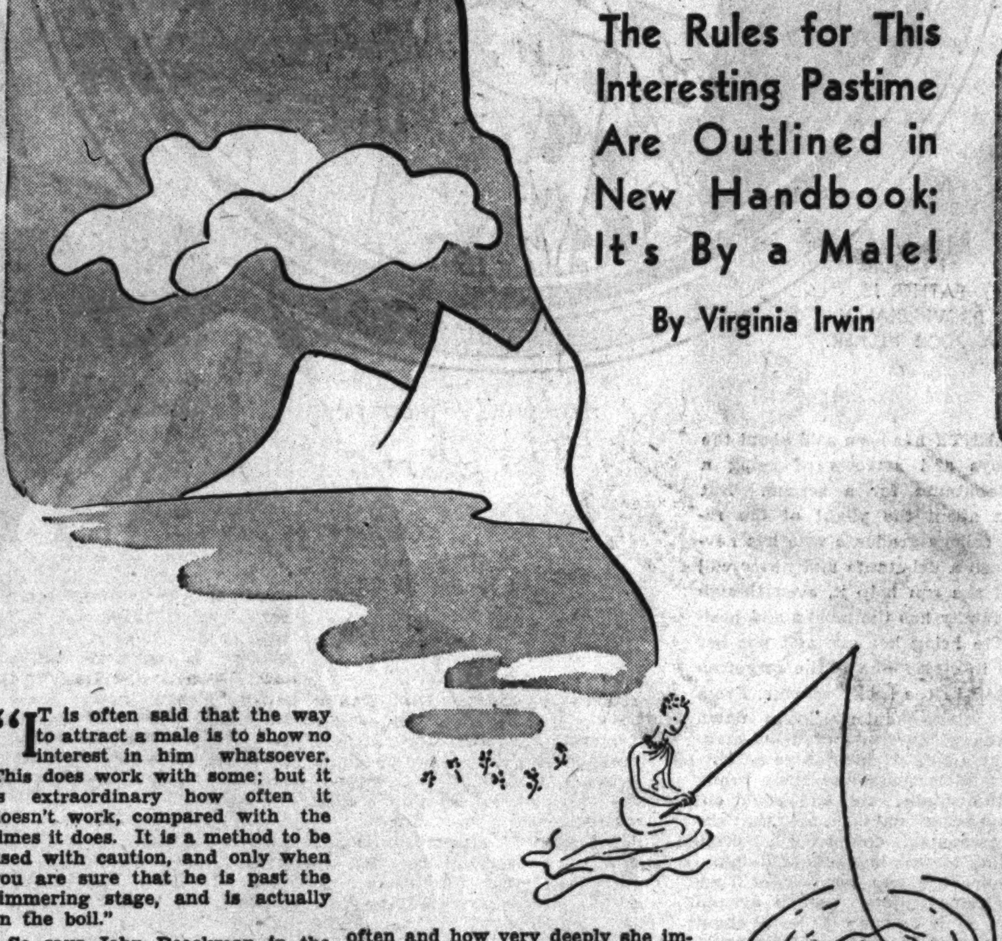
White sharkskin is recommended for wear over a black frock while those printed linens will look well with vivid or dark shades, especially if the wearer is among the winter cruisers. Embroidered organdie and shirred marquisette that are available in white or pastel tints transform a tailored costume into a frivolous and a very feminine one.

"Balloon" Blouse

The blousy blouse which is cut to look like it is at least two sizes too large for the wearer, is the hit of the early springtime. Some call it the "balloon" blouse, some the "rhumba" and some the Gibson girl shirtwaist. The sleeves are large from shoulder to wrist although gathered into a snug band at the bottom, and there are pleats, tucks or gathers both front and back to provide the blousiness. An elastic band at the waistline holds the fullness in place. Materials vary from Chinese damask to voile with peasant embroidery.



GETTING Your MAN



The Rules for This Interesting Pastime Are Outlined in New Handbook; It's By a Male!

By Virginia Irwin

"IT is often said that the way to attract a male is to show no interest in him whatsoever. This does work with some; but it is extraordinary how often it doesn't work, compared with the times it does. It is a method to be used with caution, and only when you are sure that he is past the simmering stage, and is actually on the boil."

So says John Beeckman in the latest how-to-get-your-man handbook to come off the press. And in "The Way to His Heart" (Bobbs-Merrill, publishers), Beeckman outlines his ideas on how to pilot the man of your choice through the successive stages of simmering, bubbling and boiling.

If you've been depending on a streamlined chassis, the last word in hair-do's and other eye compellers for trap bait, that's all right, but, says Beeckman:

"The first rule is a rule of behavior. All men, whatever their state of intelligence, have one idea about woman in common. They believe that women are ministering angels. I suppose this sounds pretty daffy, not to say poetic, but the truth is often that way; and a woman's success, in this sophisticated world, primarily depends upon whether or not she is willing to play up to this simple belief.

"Don't get me wrong at this early stage. By 'ministering angel', I am not implying an ability to cook, mend, sew, wash, run a household, or tot up a budget. It is doubtless very pleasing to a man to discover that the lady of his choice can do one or more of these things; but he doesn't choose her for that. And he doesn't choose her for her clothes or her figure or her face, though these are all very helpful. What really gets him is the belief that she is well disposed toward life. That gets him over and over again, and always will."

Next, says our adviser, you must demonstrate an ability to think clearly. You don't have to be brainy, but you simply must have tidy mental processes.

"True," says John, "the woman whose thinking is all fluff, or is so flighty that it quite eludes his grasp, may charm a man while she is with him. But it's strange, too, how very often and how very deeply she impresses him with the conviction that he wouldn't like to spend a great deal of time with her. And that is no kind of an impression to leave. Nothing displeases a man more, after a fatiguing day, than an untidy feminine mind. He doesn't want a woman whose thinking is all hairpins."

But this does not mean that your conversation must be so serious that it drowns out the tender thoughts the gent in question may be entertaining about you. Man, maintains Beeckman, never talks to woman as if she were another man. The male of the species isn't as much interested in woman's ideas as he is in her personality.

"Man likes to be explored, but not exploited," Beeckman warns the girl who's attempting to lead her man on conversationally. "It flatters a man to think that you are interested in his background, business, and so forth; and all of us—except the ones with police records or extremely reticent natures—feel warmly toward the lady who has allowed us to talk about ourselves. But it is a great fallacy to suppose that you can come right out at once with, 'And what do you do?'

—o-o—

"FOR example, the lady says to the gentleman she has just met, 'What do you do?' and he answers, 'I am an hydraulic engineer.' And she says, 'How thrilling!' or 'How interesting!' to which he replies sweetly, 'And what makes you think so?' 'Well, digging holes and that sort of thing,' says she, realizing that she has dug a hole for herself, and no mistake."

"A touch of malice makes the whole world kin, no doubt of that," he says. "But, while malice is the spice of gossip, it needn't be turned into curry powder. There is constructive malice and destructive malice; and a man when he gossips with a woman, is always on the lookout for the latter. If her malice is destructive, something inside him says, 'I told you so!' in a complacent way; and he goes on to advise himself that while she's a lot of fun to be with, he wouldn't trust her not to have herself a swell time with his little weaknesses, once his back is turned. Whereas, if all her criticisms of other people contain the implication 'even as you and I'; if they are diverting criticisms of life rather than cracks at Jaura or James or Bill, he will be enormously attracted. She will have tapped the living springs of gossip, and since man's instinct tells him that woman is just a little closer to life than he, he will find it hard to resist that kind of experience."

Maintaining his role of Cupid, Beeckman finally comes middleways in his book to advising you how to act when your gentleman friend has become sufficiently interested in you to want to show you off to his friends. There will probably be a party. Just what sort of party you can't tell, of course. But even if the thing turns out to be about as pleasant as a witch drive in Salem, you've got to convince your man that you can get on with his "friends in particular and the world in general." It's the old business of making him believe that you're "well disposed toward life."

If, and when, your boy friend throws this party to introduce you to his friends, your best bet in the way of making an impression is to assume at least some of the duties of hostess—especially if the b. f. is not exactly an old hand at entertaining.

"If he is especially helpless, he will go for a little assistance in the matter of seeing that food and drink are more or less circulating," Beeckman advises. "But the only thing he won't go for in any circumstances, is the use of any materials other than those he has provided.

"I remember the sad havoc created in the breast of one of my friends by just this sort of behavior. He was feeling rather tender about a girl, and asked her to a little party he was giving. As a provider he belonged in the lowest category, and had served an appetizing repast of raw cocktails strong enough to start a Diesel engine, and crackers which definitely suggested that the mice had beaten us to them. Well, he didn't know this girl too well; and what did she do but go out into his kitchenette, find some cheese there, melt it, and serve it on the crackers. This pleased everybody but him. He described his feelings to me afterward, but I can't print the description here. It all goes to show that, even with the kindest intentions, a good guest must not make herself thoroughly at home, unless it's previously established that she belongs there."

Which only proves that a girl can't be too careful when she's trying to worm her way into a man's heart. When such little things as using his cheese to brighten up some dead tired crackers can make a man throw away a telephone number, the situation sounds pretty sad. And Beeckman admits that it is, because "there are probably as many kinds of men as there are men."

So there you are, girls. Beeckman claims his book is an explanation of women as men would like them to be and that it points the way to a man's heart. He offers 180 pages of good advice on "how to snare without scaring," and who knows but what you might get just the pointer you need from "The Way to His Heart" to jockey your boy friend into the mood of shopping for a solitaire? If not, you might consult Beeckman himself; his publishers have announced that "he will be glad to discuss by mail any point of controversy or any question that the book may arouse in the reader's mind."

Suspender Skirts

Scotch plaid skirts that have been favorites in classroom wardrobes during the last few months will be replaced before many weeks with fan-pleated suspender skirts of light colored plaids. Some of these pastel tinted wool skirts have matching boleros, others have the swagger type of topper. There are solid colored pastel jackets, too, to be harmonized with the gayer skirts and to set the pace of juvenile fashions.

IF you are in the habit of driv out West Pine boulevard, may have seen a billy goat gra ing on the well-kept lawns in th 4500 block. For your informatio he didn't just drop off a pas ing truck. He belongs ther He is, in fact, part of the menageri of the Wilson Benoist family, whic shares the mansion at 4545 We Pine with seven dogs, several cat lovebirds, canaries, rabbits and th goat.

ON THE GLAMOR ROAD

By
Robinson

"DON'T LEAVE THE MAIN ROAD FOR PATHS TO FALSE GLAMOR."

GLAMOR has been in the dictionary a long time. But up until a year or so ago it didn't show much sign of life. It was in a dormant stage, as we say of volcanoes. Once in a while it spurted forth to pin a rose upon the memory of Elizabeth, the Virgin Queen. Then it went to sleep until a dream, perhaps, prompted it to laurelize Marguerite of Navarre.

On the whole, though, it was a peaceful word. It disturbed practically no one — until one day it staged a resurrection. Maybe a press agent was responsible; possibly a movie star, languidly thumbing over a copy of Roget's Thesaurus, clapped her hands at the find. At any rate, glamor came back—and liked it. Liked it so much that it has turned full many a silly young head, deluded more than one who should have known dross from gold.

For glamor is capricious, a flirt of the deepest dye, as fickle as they come. Here today, gone tomorrow—sometimes fled for good. Glamor likes nothing better than to stir up a rumpus, start the pursuer off on a false clue, then when the chase tires, desert without compunction.

All of which would seem to mean that glamor's best left alone—to die unhonored and unsung. Not at all! It boils down to a matter of technique. For glamor can be captured.

Here's the secret; Glamor chooses its host (to speak scientifically). It's mainly a matter of personality. That person who has within herself or himself the quality of unconsciously convincing us that he or she can perform the impossible, possesses glamor without knowing it. Whether or not he or she achieves the impossible doesn't particularly count. The illusion existed. We, the observers, were in touch with a human being who bestirred us to lift up our heads to the stars, to breathe a rarer air than ever we had known. It's an experience we do not forget.

That kind of glamor cannot be copied. It's useless to try. But the memory of it can freshen our life like a song. Glamor chooses its host. Let's go back to that. What can we do with ourselves so that glamor will choose us?

The best we can do is to try to keep ourselves so attractive that we shan't be counted out when glamor plays eeney-miney-mo. In addition, we can cut out all abvious approaches to that temperamental quality. By this time, surely, we know that we don't become glamorous through outward trappings alone—by going in hook, line and sinker for every new bit of junk jewelry on the market. Nor by adopting each latest hair style—hot out of the hairdressers—whether or not it's becoming. Nor does glamor fly to that person who is content to be "neat as a pin."

There is this point about glamor, though—especially as it pertains to women; there never was a glamorous woman in history who was not known in her time as a "good dresser," to put it bluntly. That didn't mean that she wore spangles in her hair at breakfast; it meant simply that she was dressed appropriately at all times, and as becomingly as she knew how. "Appropriately" is meaty in this connection. I wonder how many of the so-called "glamor gals" (those who imagine they are that because they trail in at theatrical openings garbed in everything but the kitchen stove) really know what appropriateness is?

The glamorous woman wears her makéup, clothes, accessories unostentatiously, because she's the reverse of showy. She abhors being conspicuous, but if she's in the limelight she takes it all right in her stride. She parades no accomplishments or possessions—not because she regards them as vanities, but merely because she keeps her head.

And because she keeps her head, she looks ahead, beyond the day at hand — gives petty irritations their true value. Were she cluttered about with this world which is too much a part of you and me, she'd be like most of us; an aspirant to glamor, not its rare possessor.

How a Woman May Develop Glamorous Personality

—o-o—

YOU know what happened to the man who buried his talents. Keep yours in circulation — no one likes a miser.

—o-o—

MAKE the most of yourself. It's worth a trial to improve whatever you have—in looks, grace, conversation, bravery and good humor.

—o-o—

THE glamorous woman parades no accomplishments or possessions.

FRETTING grows wrinkles. They're not as easy to erase as to avoid.

—o-o—

DON'T "hunch" over a desk or table or slouch dejectedly in a chair in the process of untangling a personal problem. Get the air into your lungs and you'll reason more clearly.

—o-o—

WHY labor to be "interesting"? Widen your horizon of ideas — you'll be "interesting" without being obvious.

—o-o—

GRAVITY is a gift. Cultivate it for those moments when only gravity will serve. Sounds serious. It is.

—o-o—

A "GOOD DRESSER" is not one who wears showy clothes, but one who is dressed appropriately at all times.

—o-o—

GLAMOR chooses its host. It's mainly a matter of personality. But don't be discouraged, for glamor can be captured.

—o-o—

TRY a new perfume if you need a change. Put on entirely new make-up when you feel low. Turn to the comic strips if life seems weighty.

High and Dry on Social Beach

may be eating her heart out over her daughter's failure to attract beaux, is powerless. If daughter will not submit to the tortures of a debut, a modest one, there is nothing else mother can do. She will not place herself in the position of "advertising for a husband" as one mother put it, by urging young men, sons of her friends, to come call, with the "I-know-you-two-will-be-very-congenial-if - you - take-time—to-get-acquainted" plea.

Father—well, father is proverbially a poor picker, given to thinking that the sterling young man from upstate who offices with him would be an ideal companion for his little girl.

And did anyone yet know a big brother who would give a little sister a boost? Assuming that she would have anything to do with his friends. Sisters? An older one regards a younger only as a potential rival.

Champions failing her, the girl graduate is thrown back entirely on her own resources, and while they may be inexhaustible, they cannot supply an escort and orchids for the Veiled Prophet Ball, or the Princeton Triangle show, or New Year's eve. The mere fact that a girl went to college doesn't mean she has no hankering for fun. It probably means she's developed a healthy taste for it. She's won her academic spurs, and is ready for a fling, if the cockeyed social system would give her a chance at one, without obliging her to resort to the paid escort services!

Which is not to say that she doesn't come out ahead in the finals, with a husband who shares, among other things, her disdain for the ways of society.

But what she goes through in the meantime is no less an ordeal than the one she would have faced as a debutante, and the satisfaction of standing pat has been a meager reward.

Prune Cream Whip

Fold three-fourth cup chopped, sweetened cooked prunes into one cup heavy cream, whipped. Approximate yield: one and one-half cups sauce.

Cruise Coats

COATS that are both beltless and collarless have gone into many cruise wardrobes and are hinting at a trend that may be important during the springtime. Some of these coats wrap at the front and fasten high on one shoulder, while others follow the redingote style and barely close with novelty fastenings. Clips, flowers and contrasting scarfs are used to decorate the necklines. The skirt sections of these coats usually are straight of line and there is slight fitting at a rather low waistline.

Citron-Colored Gown

Citron is the shade of a handsome evening gown that has its skirt fullness placed so that the silhouette stresses the new low waistline. The fabric is chiffon and the covered-shouldered bodice is gathered into a wide shaped girdle extending to the hipline where skirt gathers begin. A chiffon sash of many colors, including deep dahlia tones, is wound around the waistline until it completely covers the corselet section.

Sheer Fabrics Gaining Early Popular Usage

THE soft, shirtwaist and skirt idea prevalent in dress fashions has brought sheer fabrics into prominence very early this season. They are used with success in tailoring these softer-type blouses whose sleeves flow from the shoulder in a ballooning fullness that is very flattering. These new prints are very feminine, using for their themes flower designs, all-over lacey prints and overlapping circles in bubble pattern.

Typical of these new sheers is a printed celanese rayon that is very sheer and washable. It is a ninon weave that drapes like chiffon and, because of its clear, bright colors, is smartly used for evening dresses, spring blouses and daytime dresses for the South. One of the chief virtues of these rayon fabrics is the clear, vivid colors obtainable. They are delightfully sharp and concise, and lend vivacity to the garment in which they are used.

This fact is specially emphasized in a red and black print adapting a flower and leaf design for evening. It is highly dramatic and interesting. In contrast, another charming print for house coat or lingerie shows a tiny pastel cottage hidden behind tall hollyhocks, a lovely print for the woman whose rooms are in Colonial or eighteenth century decor.

Another rayon sheer is printed organza, stiff as organdy and as sheer. Important in these fabrics is the modest price. Women who sew at home will find these new sheers charming for early spring clothes.

The Hollywood Flicker Front

as stated, is nervous by nature. He was made more nervous by the waits.

"In those days," he explains with a wave of the inevitable cigar, "I was innocent and impatient, also ambitious. Collecting a salary for doing nothing bothered my conscience or something. My conscience has since grown inactive and if anybody were willing to pay me for idleness now I wouldn't say a word. So now they keep me busy."

After those three films he went back to New York and an Earl Carroll "Vanities" show but got the idea, somehow, that the new, bouncing baby of the entertainment world, a little thing frequently called, in those early days, the "Raddio"—see "The Life and Letters of Al Smith"—was going to amount to something. Went into it and you know what happened.

Jack used to write all his own gags, until the task became too heavy. Now he employs two writers, but he works with them all the time and a good many of the choice bits they put into words are his ideas.

He'd like to make pictures with fewer gags in them. He denies any suppressed longing to ham his way through Hamlet or chew scenery in any other of the famous tragic roles. All he asks for is the chance to "play straight once in a while."

"I'm 44 years old and a guy can't go on being a comic forever. The many years I've spent in show business must have taught me something besides how to put over a fast line," he says.

Understand he is talking about the future, not the present. That's taking care of itself nicely, thank you. The only unsatisfied desire Jack can think of at the moment is an ambition to meet Garbo. He nearly did once, but at the last moment arrangements fell through. Jack says Mary Livingstone gummed them up.

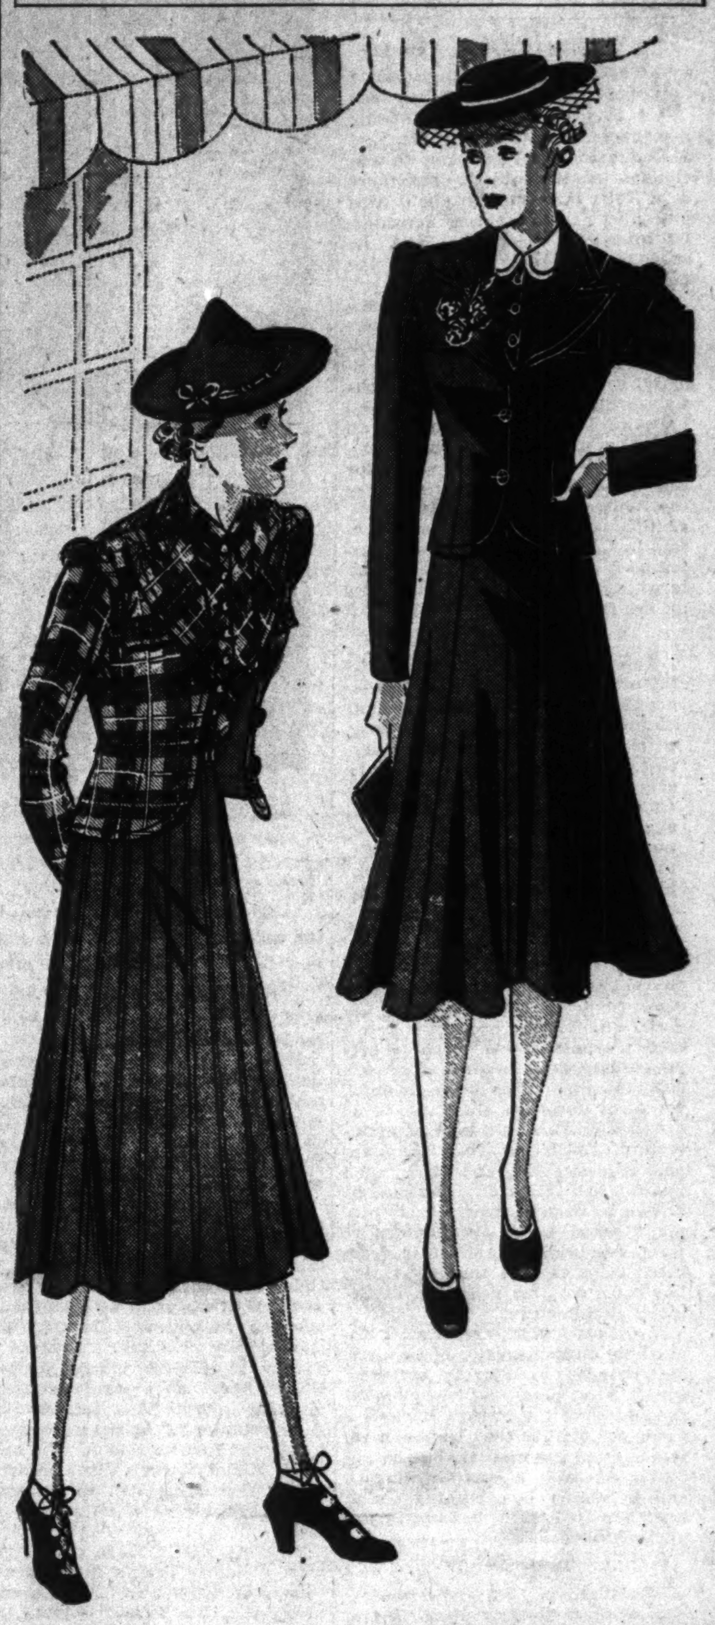
Starched Linen Frock Trimming

IF in doubt as to the type of trimming that will give a frock the look of springtime, consider starched linen. Many of the dresses and costume ensembles on display in the St. Louis stores employ this mode of crisp decoration while the neckwear counters have their supply of similar accents to dress up a winter wardrobe.

Flowers, collars, cuffs and complete jackets are being made of the starched linen. They look most impressive when they are white and appear against a navy or black background. The collar which is narrow at the back but extends in wide points at the front of the shoulders gives a maximum of interest to the neckline, while a little bolero made of the linen folds handled as though they were braid is a smart addition to a frock that goes into the teatime or the dinner hour.

Add buttons and belt of shiny patent leather, a pillbox of the starched linen if you are inclined to be a bit daring, white suede gloves and carry a patent leather purse; then there will be no mistaking that you are ready to meet the springtime.

THEY FORECAST SPRING VOGUE



THEIR DESIGNER CALLS THESE FROCKS "PROPHETICS" AND NO ONE WILL DISPUTE THE APTNESS OF THIS NAME, FOR THEY FORECAST A SPRING VOGUE THAT IS LIKELY TO SWEEP ALL BEFORE IT. THE SIMPLE SHIRTWAIST DRESS WITH ITS OWN TINY, FITTED JACKET TO MATCH OR CONTRAST IS UNDOUBTEDLY A FASHION OF FIRST IMPORTANCE. ITS POPULARITY IS EASY TO UNDERSTAND, FOR THE LITTLE JACKETS ARE EXQUISITELY TAILORED AND CAN BE WORN SMARTLY WITH SEPARATE SKIRTS OR WITH OTHER SIMPLE DRESSES.

ONE MODEL IS OF WOOL WITH SHIRTWAIST BLOUSE OF SILK CREPE AND A VERY BRIEF, TAILORED WOOL BOLERO ON MESS-JACKET LINES. THE DRESS SKETCHED WITH PLAID JACKET AND KNIFE PLEATED SKIRT, STITCHED FROM WAIST TO HEM, GAINS ADDED ATTENTION FOR ITS HAPPY COMBINATION OF COLORS. THE SKIRT IS IN NAVY, THE BLOUSE AND JACKET IN A SOFT VIOLET AND GREEN PLAID WOOL.

NEW SPRING COSTUMES ARE YOUTHFUL AND GAY

WITH color running rampant through the fashion trends, it begins to look as though a somber costume will be hard to find. Youth and gaiety rule the mode, and so every woman, regardless of her conservative inclinations, may as well make up her mind to be as giddy as her neighbor.

Light and bright colors are heralded as the basic ones for the smartest spring costumes. This means that when navy, black and brown appear they must offer some brilliant excuse for their presence. Scarfs, sashes, flower trimmings and flash belts are some of the methods being employed to inject color into dark ensembles while footwear and millinery also display the vogue of lively tones.

This spring's most popular costume starts with color at the head with flashes of brilliance to the feet. Even now the hats that are featured for wear with late winter costumes are as gay as prints and novel color alliances can make them. Among the most attractive models for immediate wear are draped turbans of printed silks and synthetics. Most of these have black or navy backgrounds with a variety of shades introduced in flower or modernistic motifs. Some have matching scarfs to make certain that a costume gets the maximum of brightness.

AMONG OTHER striking hats to wear now are those which have brims of pleated challis. The crowns are of straw fabric or of grosgrain while the brims are very colorful. Flower and fruit-trimmed chapeaux further illustrate the vogue of colors, one of the most unusual models being a very large black fabric beret which has a large red rose tacked to the center of the crown.

While allover printed dresses are not as extensively shown for early spring as has been customary in the last few years, there are many printed fabrics used in alliance with solid colored materials. The blouse, jacket or sash of print is illustrative of the trend. With such handling of the vividly designed materials, there is more opportunity for large patterns and decided contrasts of shades without the entire ensemble becoming gaudy.

BOLERO COSTUMES offer new opportunity to introduce color into the costume because of the attractiveness of bright, contrasting sashes. Blouses that also are very gay can be worn successfully. There is a striking fashion of bright printed or embroidered jackets to match solid colored dresses that are trimmed with the same print. Often the hat and the footwear repeat one dominant shade so that the entire ensemble is a splash of color.

Even the most tailored footwear for spring is brighter than one expects to find for sportswear. This is due to the tinting of leathers in shades of reddish brown, tile and other high shades. Pipings of color trim many dark-toned shoes while the trend toward cut-out effects permitting the hosiery to show through also lightens the tone of footwear. Talk is now being heard of printed sandals for summer so there seems to be no limit to the gaiety of feet, once the designers get started.

Printed Jacket Linings

Printed blouses and printed jacket linings are distinctive features of many of the suits appearing in the shops for early spring. The colorful accents are most apparent when the jacket is of the short bolero or boxy type. One suit that illustrates the trend has a blouse that is made of a paisley print which also pipes the edges of the straight-hanging coat. Another uses the polka dot theme for lining which extends wide at the front of the coat to make a scarf-like collar.

LET ME SUGGEST

by Josephine Walter

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 12.

WHENEVER I start to write about Miami Beach, I fear that I may be suspected of being in cahoots with the local Chamber of Commerce, for I am likely to wax eloquent on the subject. But there is a fairy-tale quality about this place, with its sparkling sunshine, its luxuriant vegetation, and its sheer beauty that brings out the poet in me, if any.

And, in addition to being beautiful, Miami Beach is extremely interesting this year, especially architecturally. For there is now developing down here a type of domestic architecture which may well have an influence on building all over the country. Although modern design has been the vogue for the past few seasons, you see very few houses in this style being erected this year. All interest now centers in Colonial types, but a different and in most cases a more interesting style of Colonian than we all are familiar with in St. Louis.

This new type of Colonial architecture is, on the whole, a Florida adaptation of various foreign and Southern styles, but would, I feel, with very few changes, be equally suited to our climate and landscape. British Colonial, New Orleans Colonial, French Colonial and Bahaman architecure are merely a few sources from which this new style has been adapted, to produce a result that is fascinatingly individual.

● THIS NEW STYLE has the charm and simplicity which we have come to associate with Colonial architecture and yet it has a certain sophistication which reflects its cosmopolitan origins. Through constant use of the term Colonial, we have come to think of it as a typically American type of architecture, forgetting that in times past France, England and even Spain had foreign possessions known as colonies where their people adapted home architecture to local conditions. And it is from these colonies that the inspiration has come for this new type of Colonial architecture.

Now, just what are the distinguishing characteristics of this new development in Florida architecture? First of all, no matter what the source of inspiration, there is a clean cut quality that has been retained from the modern, but, in addition, there is a certain warmth and liveability incorporated which is all too frequently lacking in the purely modern.

The lines of these new houses are of three distinct types. There is the low, one-story type with flat or almost flat roof lines which blends into and almost becomes a part of its surroundings. Then there is the rather tall, square style, usually distinguished by thin, attenuated columns which further accent the height of the facade. And there is the rather long, rambling version, with balconies and ornamental grille work known as the New Orleans style which has already gained some acceptance in other parts of the country as well as Florida.

● WHAT, THEN, are the features which draw these rather divergent types into the one classification which might well come to be called Florida Colonial? First, most of the houses are of gleaming white and have, in addition, roofs made of white tile. Gone are the brilliant colors which have been so popular heretofore, except as accenting notes in shutters, doors and flower pots, and an occasional pastel toned roof.

Then, too, all of the houses are built either on a U-shaped, an L-shaped or a long, narrow plan to give a maximum of exposure for the main rooms of the house, so that they may obtain any prevailing breeze. And that, incidentally, is one feature which St. Louis architects might profitably study. In fact, some of the newest of the houses are being built with the servants' quarters on the first floor and all the living rooms on the second floor, to obtain the best ventilation possible.

ANOTHER destinguishing characteristic of not only these houses but all Florida residences, and a feature which undoubtedly could be used to advantage in St. Louis, is the close-knit relationship between the house itself and the out-of-doors. It is almost an unwritten law for the houses here to be designed as much for outside living as for indoor comfort. Porches, patios and open terrace are an integral part of the design of practically every house, and there is such subtle transitions between the two that it is often hard to tell where the house leaves off and the out-of-doors begins.

Closely related to this is the fact that the gardens, garden walls and outside planting areas are planned as a definite part of the architecture of the house. Granted that with all the available types of vegetation, it is comparatively easy to give a house a well-planted appearance two weeks after it has been built, it is the artistry and appropriateness of this planting which adds so much to the co-ordinated appearance of these houses.

NEW FLOWERS For THIS YEAR

Eight, With Awards of Merit to Their Credit, Will Be Available to Give New Life and Interest to St. Louis Gardens.

By Harriet W. Chandler

GOLDEN CROWN CALLIOPSIS.

ANTIRRHINAM, OF THE CELESTIAL VARIETY.

PETUNIA . . . IT HEADS THIS YEAR'S LIST WITH FIRST AWARD OF MERIT.

THE All-American selections from the flower novelties of 1938 have been announced by the committee of judges. Now eight new flowers, with awards of merit to their credit, will be available to give new life and interest to St. Louis gardens this season.

If this year's debuntantes are not so startling as the odorless marigold of last season or the double nasturtium that interested the gardening world several years ago, they do show improvement in form and in colors.

It is too bad that new names cannot be thought up to designate the novelties. Each year we have Fantasies, Golden Crowns, Crowns of Gold, Supremes and other overworked titles, creating confusion between the new and the old. Only one novelty this year received a snappy suggestive name, Scarlett O'Hara, for a vibrant crimson morning glory. This introduction gave promise of being quite spectacular and was slated for the only Gold Medal Award, but unfortunately marketing had to be postponed because of a shortage of seed.

With Scarlett O'Hara out of the way, a dainty little petunia heads this year's list with the first award of merit. It is named Salmon Supreme, from its distinctive new color. As the name suggests, it is a rich coral salmon on opening, changing as it matures to a soft salmon pink without a trace of the familiar magenta so common in petunias. The flowers are about an inch and a half across, quite in keeping with the foot-high plant, which needs no staking. Like the still popular Rosey Morn, this little petunia will bloom all season. It gives a splendid new border plant and will be equally effective when used in window-box gardening or in urns. As a cut flower it is lovely in low arrangements, where it blends with other flowers and shows up well under artificial light.

The Petunia family seems to be in the ascendency this year. Though not next in order of awards, three other petunias received honors. Orchid Beauty got an award of merit. It is of the double-fringed dwarf type which comes from Japan. The flowers are a lovely light lilac or orchid shade, with deeper violet veinings. They open like a Japanees iris, but seem to keep on developing petals until when entirely mature they are fully double. This petunia forms sturdier plants than the general run of the double sorts and is quite free-flowering, four-inch blooms being the rule rather than the exception.

From Japan also comes Gaiety, another dwarf double-fringed petunia like Orchid Beauty, but in brighter tones. Its shade of vidid rose-red with gay white trimmings won for it a special mention. Petunia Topaz is a child of America, having been developed in California. It gets a special mention and well deserves it. This hybrid is of easier culture than the others, the two-inch flowers blooming freely on strong 16-inch erect plants. The bright topaz-red blooms have the real petunia perfume and hold up under the hottest summer sun, truly a find for our rather difficult St. Louis climate.

Celestial, a striking new dwarf snapdraggon of the large-flowered majestic type, scored well in points, receiving the second award of merit. The broad spikes of this late introduction are about 10 inches long and are well filled with large flowers of a soft salmon-rose color. The plant grows well without staking and should be a welcome addition to the late summer and fall border. Like all snapdragons, the flowers are fine keepers when cut, and blend beautifully with the fall roses in bouquets.

The new pansy, Coronation Gold, has come this year from Holland, to glow in our early gardens. It is truly lovely with a large canary yellow face, flused orange on the lower petals. All petals are slightly ruffled and the flower has a mild spicy scent. The judges thought well enough of it to give it third place in the order of awards.

The gay little Calliopsis, which blossoms freely and seeds itself so generously, has never before been the subject of the hybridizer's art, but now Golden Crown comes as a selection out of a new large-flowered strain of the Drummondi type in England. The flowers are a rich orange yellow, many of which have a double row of petals. Their delicate scent recommends them for the "fragrant garden," and their long, wiry stems make them valuable for cutting. They have the virtue of growing easily anywhere, and have received the fourth award of merit this year.

CALENDULAS do not grow so easily here, as they like more moisture in the air than they can get in this section. However, many expert gardeners are able to grow them and should be delighted with the new Orange Fantasy. This late development represents something of a new type in this popular cutting flower. The plant is rather small, standing only about three feet high, with heavy foliage. The orange flowers have a crested center of seal brown and a rather shaggy, informal grace that makes them quite different from the other members of the calunda family. They are decidedly a novelty and well worth trying in spite of our many hot, dry summers.

This covers the awards of merit and special mentions for this year. But there are other worth-while novelties "recommended" by the all-American Committee.

The Greater St. Louis Flower and Garden Show, which will be presented in the Arena March 26 to April 3, will acquaint St. Louisans with some of the outstanding novelties of this and recent years.

LETTING PEOPLE BE HAPPY -:- -:- -:- By Angelo Patri

LETTING people be happy in their own way is something of an achievement of mind over nature. There seems to be a dictator born in every one of us. We want to tell all and each how to do and what and when. The fact that our own lives do not show the advantage of such wisdom as we offer does not appear to touch us. We keep on telling other people how to succeed, how to be happy, how to be just like us. And the unfortunates cannot be like us, not if they tried forever and aye. Why not let them alone to be happy in their own way?

This sort of advice, this longing for power over the minds and the persons of others, have caused trouble and sorrow and death and destruction through the ages. Yet we don't seem to learn. Mothers tell their daughters exactly what they ought to do, and fathers do the same by their sons and daughters. Neighbors are quick to advise and to criticise harshly when their advice is not taken, although they cannot have any understanding of the actual conditions. So it goes, and so the battle between youth and age rages through the years.

When children are young enough to be completely dependent, parents and teachers have to do the thinking for them. But that process, that giving of self to others, must come to an end, and the earlier the better for the children. Gradually the little ones grow in strength of body, and mental power should keep time with that growth. It will if people do not insist upon looking inside the child and pulling his strings to make him go.

Adolescent children suffer the most from such mishandling. They have grown a personality of their own; they have arrived at some conclusions of their own, and they have certain hopes and ambitions coming to life within them. It is now that father or mother says, "Of course you are going to my old college." "Of course you are going to take over my work." "Surely you will want to take this course. I think it is the best possible for you." Sometimes there is no reason why the child should not happily follow these suggestions, but many, many times there is every reason why he should not because he cannot.

Nature rarely makes a copy. Each child has something of his father and mother, and much more of his ancestors in the past, and the combination is such that the product is unique. Rarely can a child be happy in the same field of activity—education, training, recreation, work—as his father or mother. He is a new person, and he has to be happy in the peculiar way his nature demands. If the family is to be happy, and the child happy, let him be.

I can understand the feelings of a father, who is a highly successful professional man, as he sees his son becoming a mechanic. I can sympathize with the mother, who sees a child who, to her, seemed destined for fame, step out of the frame and marry the young man she loves. But the only thing to do is to know that people have to be happy in their own way. And that is knowledge hard come by.

George Rector Talks of Tripe And Pigs Feet

Two Grand Dishes, He Says, and Both Are Inexpensive.

By George Rector

RECENTLY I promised to tell you about several foods that call for pennies rather than dollars. One of these is pig's feet and the other is tripe. The pig's feet that I want you to prepare some time soon are the fresh pig's feet—strictly fresh and please do not confuse them with the pickled variety. It takes a long time to cook these raw pig's feet. They are simmered for three or four hours in a large saucepan filled with water.

Suppose we start with six feet. Let the water come to a boil first, then put in the feet and lower the heat. Into the pan or pot in which the feet are cooking add one onion studded with cloves, several bay leaves, a pinch of thyme, a few outer stalks of celery, a small bunch of leeks and a few carrots. These vegetables added to the water is known in French cooking as court bouillon. Cover the saucepan and let them cook ever so slowly. When the feet are cooked remove them from the saucepan and lay them out to cool. Each foot should be cut lengthwise with a sharp cleaver, which will naturally produce 12 pieces of the feet. Prepare on the side about two cups of buttered bread crumbs and roll or pat the pieces in these crumbs.

Now comes the sauce, which you must not fail to serve. It's called sauce diable—deviled sauce to you.

NOW LET'S get started on the sauce. Pour into a small saucepan three-quarters cup of taragon vinegar. Add two buttons of garlic, one tablespoon of dry mustard, two bay leaves, one teaspoon salt, one-half dozen whole black peppers, one teaspoon of paprika. Reduce by boiling this quantity to one-half and strain. To the remaining liquid add one cup of tomato puree or thick tomato soup. Stir and heat. Dissolve in one-half cup of boiling water two teaspoons of extract of beef. Add to the sauce also a teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce, a pinch of cayenne pepper and lastly a tablespoon of butter. Do not boil the sauce, just keep it hot and serve hot.

Dot the flat side of the breaded pig's feet with butter and brown on a rack under the broiler flame or oven. It would be well to place the rack in the baking pan, because a little basting would do no harm.

Now, there you have a dish that will bring compliments from all sides. You have my permission to take the little bones in your mouth and bite off the tender morsels of meat. I get so enthusiastic about this dish that I am going out right now and get some pig's feet.

IT'S A FUNNY THING, but almost every time I talk about tripe I get the big ha! ha!—and I have found out the reason. The name TRIPE does it. Won't someone please coin a word in place of tripe? I feel sure I can sell you on the idea that tripe is a delicacy, but the tripe must be the fresh honeycomb tripe, not the pickled. There are ever so many ways of preparing it, and please remember that it is to be cooked in salted water for hours, same as pig's feet, but without herbs or vegetables.

Tripe a la mode de Caen is known all over France. When done this way it is an overnight affair such as baked beans. Then, of course, you can serve it just plain broiled, dotted with butter. The old Holland house in New York featured it many years ago. Yes! and about that time William H. Crane, the actor, starring in his great stage sucess "David Harum," had a weekly standing order in Rector's for tripe, clam bellies, and small white onions in a rich cream sauce. Crane was unquestionably the real epicure among the actors. Diamond Jim Brady pronounced tripe a la creole a delightful food and perhaps the most popular of all.

Fresh honeycomb tripe must be thoroughly washed in cold water, and then when you start it bring the water to a boil, add salt, and simmer it for four or five hours. Change the water several times. No matter how you want to prepare it, give it plenty of cooking for tenderness.

AFTER IT IS COOKED cut it in small strips, say one-quarter inch wide and about two inches long. Now all we have to do is to make a creole sauce. Cut enough tripe to make four cupfuls and then we will proceed with the sauce. Slice one green pepper, two medium-sized onions, one-half pound of fresh mushrooms. Cook these vegetables for a few minutes in one cup of good stock or canned consomme. When cooked add the pulp of a No. 2 can of tomatoes, one small can of tomato puree, and one-half cup of minced cooked ham. Stir well and simmer for 10 minutes. Season sauce with one teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon pepper, a light pinch of cayenne pepper, one-half teaspoon of paprika, and one teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce. Add the tripe, heat and mix well in the sauce. Just before serving drop in a tablespoon of butter.

GREENERY IN LIVING ROOM

SMART USE OF ACCENTS GIVES HOME DISTINCTION

By Elizabeth Boykin

FRESHNESS and distinction are achieved by new color combinations and tints and by smart use of accents rather than by anything spectacular in the furniture—a safe rule to follow if you want your basic furnishing to be of a style that will not go out of fashion.

It's all very well to go in for patent leather curtains or quilted chintz walls if you're a very upity designer of interiors making a reputation on all the decorative exclamation points you can think up. But if you happen to be a woman creating a pleasant home to live in, you want more comfort and less amazement in your furnishings, more serenity and fewer didoes.

That's why we make a low sweeping bow to Joseph Mullen, one of the smartest designers of pleasant rooms that we know. He doesn't depend on capers to create a livable interesting place to be at home in. He begins with the personality of the person or family whose room he is decorating and develops a theme that he feels will frame that individual or family most becomingly. Usually he depends on the more enduringly beautiful styles of furniture, eighteenth century English for the most part with an occasional accent of its twin sister Regency—achieving freshness and distinction by new color combinations or tints.

We were especially pleased the other day to see what he did in the home of Mrs. James Willmot Ingram, a lovely little white haired person who wears sweeping satin hostess gowns with the air of a great lady.

THIS HOME we present today for the ideas it offers to the rest of us in solving decoration problems. For the formula is simple in the extreme yet achieves an effect of tranquillity and charm.

The living room and dining room were carpeted in a soft gray broadloom (not taupe but a much lighter tone though still in the practical range) and the walls were tinted in a very pale gray, a perfect tint for sunny rooms. White woodwork and white venetian blinds established a rather crisp accent. Side curtains of yellow were finished across the top with a figured chintz in a lovely range of tones—a ground of gladioli (the peach to apricot toned variety) splashed with soft yellow flowers and very dark green leaves.

The same fabric was repeated on a pair of wing chairs flanking the fireplace . . . the yellow turned up again in cushions for the deep gray sofa and in seats for side chairs . . . the gladioli tone was repeated in the begonias and fresh gladioli that Mrs. Ingram always has about her . . . the dark green appeared in the pots of trailing ivy and in the huckleberry leaves that she used for accent. Furniture in traditional mahogany made a substantial basis for the design of the room with accent achieved by the use of blond occasional tables, a pickled pine desk and blond wood picture frames.

Mrs. Ingram's bedroom was as feminine as her petite figure in trailing satin. Powder-pink walls, an off-white rug, white woodwork and white sheer curtains established the background colors. The bed was upholstered in a dull light green textured fabric and set in a niche made by two closets in corners of the room. An easy chair in the same green was made luxurious by a round needlepoint cushion. Dusty pink moire appeared for window valances and dressing table skirt while the spread was of the same shade of pink in taffeta. Here again abundant ivy contributed to the design of the room and white porcelain and crystal added accessory notes. A pair of flower prints framed fan shape hung over bed and chest.

MUSIC and Music MAKERS

Mass Worship Of Hollywood Screen Stars

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.

ONE of the fascinating phenomena of the past few years, among the younger fry, has been the establishment of movie "fan clubs"—all dedicated to deathless devotion to the idol of the members. These idols never have clay feet, they can do no wrong, they are the absolute perfection no elder skeptic believes can exist in this daffy and malformed world.

Young girls start and foment this mass worship of screen godlets. They are the youngsters who collect photographs of the stars, keep scrapbooks and often correspond with the objects of their idolatry. Obviously, no picture company would fit an eyebrow to help these "clubs"! My mate, who once toiled spasmodically for the outfit which pays Fred Astaire his weekly insult, saw this business from the inside, and the red-headed president of Freddy's club, a Jersey lass, was a familiar office figure, getting out the mimeographed magazine of the doting sodality. With a Joan Crawford film on a big Broadway screen, Mrs. Tone's local soviet has burst, faintly, into the public eye.

MARIAN DOMMER, its 22-year-old prexy, hotly denies that the membership is moronic. They just love Joanie-woanie! The sorority gets out a magazine six times a year, under the patronage of the great Beverly Hills matron herself. Dues are 50 cents an annum, and Miss Dommer says it costs her $250 a year of her own to keep the budget balanced. Hear her!

"She is the greatest personality in the world!" says Miss President. "We are not just movie fans—we are her friends." When asked if they would follow another star, such as Garbo, if Joan retired, the answer was no. "Maybe the club would," said Miss Dommer, "but I wouldn't. That would be the finish of me!" And need I add that her favorite actor is a man named Tone—Franchot Tone, I believe?

The utter devotion of thousands of young girls to a shadow on a screen is a wondrous thing. If swing music doesn't get them, a film star must.

BETTY LAWFORD, the lovely blonde who for more than a year has plunged into a tub of soap bubbles for a scene in "The Women," has has finally wearied of bubble bathing for the cash customers, and has quit her job. She never caught cold, to be sure, but even such high art can ultimately become a blithering bore. Betty heads for Florida, and many suggest that the long courtship by Radio Pundit Ted Husing is about to culminate in a hike to the altar.

—o-o—

SOCIETY CHATTERBOXES here think that the most tireless, and one of the best, dancers now loose on our swankier floors is a British woman named Lady Lister-Kaye, who is said to wear down a half-dozen partners an evening. She is elderly, but indomitable. Dozens of our dozing debutantes, whose public pose is acute languor and boredom, acquire nervous breakdowns just watching her.

WAVES OF patriotism beat upon our famous Chinatown. The latest symptom from Mott and Pell streets is the news that the Chinese are going to give up their fancy New Year celebration, with its firecrackers and dragons, and send the funds to their embattled co-patriots in the homeland. And when a Chinese gives up his green paper dragons on New Year's day — that's love!

FRANCES FARMER, film beauty now in "Golden Boy," is fashion's Golden Girl of the hour. Masses of local clothes—architects are designing duds around her and her lithe, long-legged type . . . Incidentally, her film-actor husband, Lief Erikson, loves her so much that he has entered the cast of her show, playing a tiny bit under the name of "William Anderson."

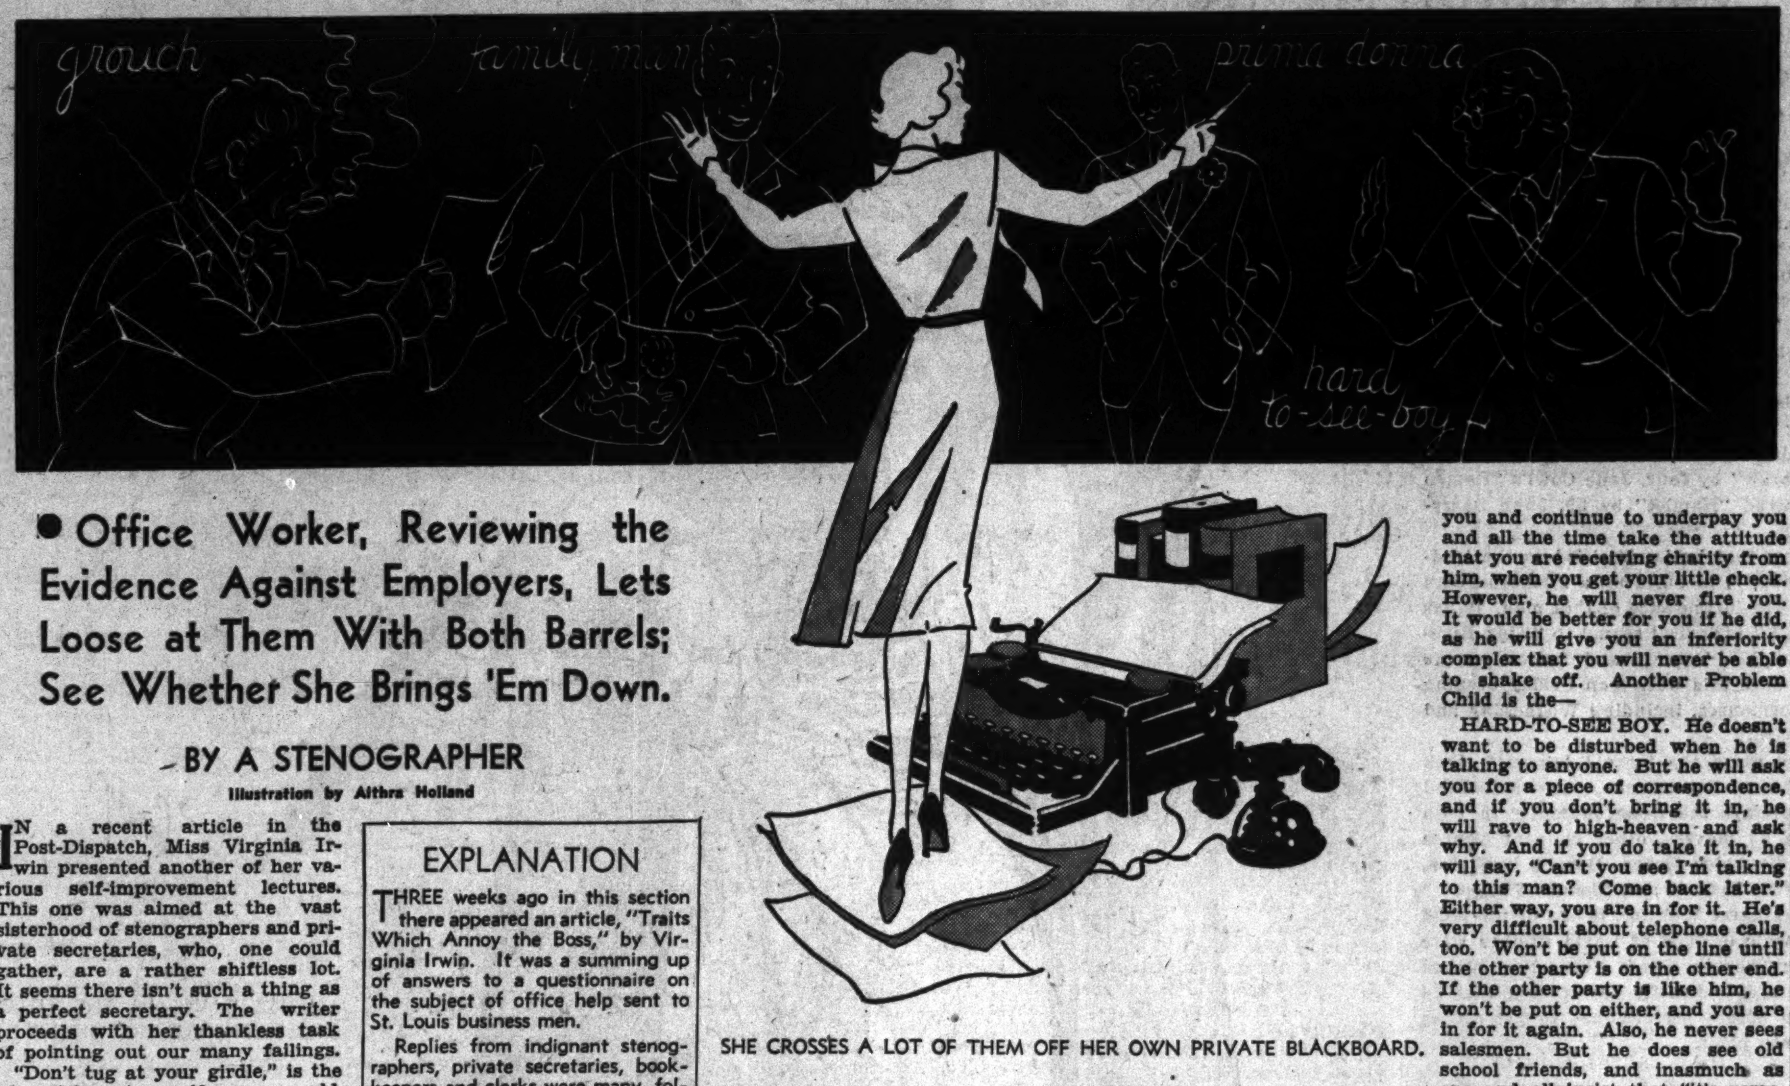
THE LAST WORD ABOUT BOSSES



SHE CROSSES A LOT OF THEM OFF HER OWN PRIVATE BLACKBOARD.

● Office Worker, Reviewing the Evidence Against Employers, Lets Loose at Them With Both Barrels; See Whether She Brings 'Em Down.

BY A STENOGRAPHER

> EXPLANATION
> THREE weeks ago in this section there appeared an article, "Traits Which Annoy the Boss," by Virginia Irwin. It was a summing up of answers to a questionnaire on the subject of office help sent to St. Louis business men.
> Replies from indignant stenographers, private secretaries, bookkeepers and clerks were many, following publication of the article. The general idea expressed was that the bosses themselves were somewhat short of perfect.
> Excerpts from some of the letters were printed last week in another article, "Stenographers Are All Keyed Up." One letter, however, was so complete that it seemed worthy of standing alone. Here it is. It is definitely "The Last Word About Bosses."

IN a recent article in the Post-Dispatch, Miss Virginia Irwin presented another of her various self-improvement lectures. This one was aimed at the vast sisterhood of stenographers and private secretaries, who, one could gather, are a rather shiftless lot. It seems there isn't such a thing as a perfect secretary. The writer proceeds with her thankless task of pointing out our many failings.

"Don't tug at your girdle," is the admonishment—as if you could keep those cheap girdles down any other way! However, the average stenographer's 20-cent lunch (plus four mills) usually keeps her tummy nice and flat without benefit of girdle. And every girl who isn't blind, deaf, or allergic to crowds, uses plenty of soap on herself and washes out her undies every single night—from the day she emerges from business-school, diploma in hand, to wrestle with the business world. And the other stuff about makeup, high heels, and inappropriate dressing, is not worth mentioning. Besides, all this has been said over and over again by Mrs. Post, Dale Carnegie, and every other altruistic soul, bent on making ladies out of us. But how about our bosses?

Of course, granted that they are the lads that write their names on our pay checks, perhaps they do have a right to harass our lives and ruin our nerves with their cussedness. But occasionally you find a man who complains that he can't keep a secretary. They come and they go, and innocently he wonders why. For his benefit, and because it's high time somebody exposed the facts, we ask him to pick himself out. He will find himself in one of the following classes, and it's possible that he may be in all of them. First, there is:

THE PRIMA DONNA. This fellow bounces into the office, whistling merrily. He positively radiates cheer. He beams with fatherly pride at one and all. He calls in his secretary, signs all of yesterday's mail, hardly looking at it, and intersperses his dictation with uproarious laughter. But suddenly all is changed. He comes back from lunch, snorting fire. He stamps both feet and yells at the top of his voice; after firing and rehiring most of the office force, and tearing up letters, he storms out of the office, leaving you limp and wan. Twenty minutes later, he returns in his other role, and resumes his spreading of sunshine and light. He isn't so bad, once you get used to him. At least he's less annoying than—

THE FAMILY MAN. He trots out pictures of Mama and The Kids. He calls you in at 4 p. m. and you sit, notebook in hand, pencil poised expectantly. But Mr. Family Man is not ready just yet; he wants to tell you about his daughter's baby's new tooth, and about Junior making the football team, and to ask your advice about doing his living-room over in knotty pine. At 4:55, he reluctantly turns to the business at hand, and dictates furiously for 30 minutes. "That last letter"—which is usually three pages long—"ought to go out tonight," he says. So while your supper gets cold and your date gets mad, you sit and type on and on, while your boss sits placidly smoking the foulest-smelling stogie sold. He's trying enough, but he isn't to be compared with—

THE HOMEWORK GUY. He will give you plenty of work to do—enough to keep you busy as a trap-drummer from 9 till 5, but in addition you have a list of chores to do in your spare time. You pay his gas, light, telephone, charge accounts at four different stores, insurance premiums, go to the bank for him, order his groceries, pick out most of his wife's clothes (which she will send back, of course), exchange articles purchased by his family, and do a hundred other little labors of love (?). If any of the "extras" are neglected for your regular office work, woe be unto you! But if you get behind with your filing, or your posting, or anything else, the air will be blue with threats of your dismissal. And if you stay overtime (and plenty of us have to, without even "dinner money"), he doesn't like that, either, as it puts him in a bad light with his confreres.

Usually it's the "little Big-Shots" who demand all this extra attention. However, we know of one prominent banker who is souring his secretary's disposition with his requests several times a day, that she bring him a glass of water. Not that she minds that so much—although she has plenty of work to do without these interruptions—but she complains that when she gives it to him, he takes just one little sip and hands it back to her. How we marvel at her self-control!

AND those grocery lists! What pains in the neck they are. Your boss tosses you the list (made out in his housekeeper's illegible hand) and skitters out the door. After deciding just what she had in mind when she wrote simply "soap" and also, "meat" you eventually come to the word that doesn't look like anything at all. It defies the analytical powers of the entire office. What to do! If you call his home, you will find that his housekeeper is hard-of-hearing, or cannot speak English very well, or doesn't remember what it was. And if Mrs. Boss should be called to the phone, she will complain later to her husband that she was roused from a much-needed nap because of your stupidity. Whatever you do, you are going to hear something pretty uncomplimentary about it Monday morning.

We know of one gentleman who has a hobby collecting liquor recipes. He offers them with magnificent abandon to all his friends, and his secretary types far into the night, to supply Mr. Boss's pals with potables.

These are mere samples of the things that try women's souls. And of course, we all know and despise the—

OLD GROUCH. Nothing ever suits this bird, and so it is useless to try to please him. He grumbles about everything and never praises you because he is afraid you will ask for a raise. He will underpay you and continue to underpay you and all the time take the attitude that you are receiving charity from him, when you get your little check. However, he will never fire you. It would be better for you if he did, as he will give you an inferiority complex that you will never be able to shake off. Another Problem Child is the—

HARD-TO-SEE BOY. He doesn't want to be disturbed when he is talking to anyone. But he will ask you for a piece of correspondence, and if you don't bring it in, he will rave to high-heaven and ask why. And if you do take it in, he will say, "Can't you see I'm talking to this man? Come back later." Either way, you are in for it. He's very difficult about telephone calls, too. Won't be put on the line until the other party is on the other end. If the other party is like him, he won't be put on either, and you are in for it again. Also, he never sees salesmen. But he does see old school friends, and inasmuch as one and all insist that "it's something very personal," it's often very hard to distinguish the difference.

It shouldn't be necessary to mention the next type, but they do exist. They are the—

PAY-DAY FORGETTERS. If you are the only girl in the office, it is often necessary to remind friend boss that although you are intensely interested in your work, you are in it primarily for what you get out of it. In other words, "How about my check?" Some girls have to dun their boss every week.

And there, Miss Irwin and all you wistful business men, are the reasons more and more girls decide on any other career except that of a stenographer.

Various Uses Of Sunlight in Medical Field

First Utilized Deliberately As Long Ago as the Third Century.

By
Logan Clendening, M. D.

THE sun always has been regarded as the giver and preserver of life. All primitive people welcomed the return of the sun at the time of the spring solstice, and held religious ceremonies in commemorating the event.

It was first used deliberately for the purposes of treatment as long ago as the third century, when Antyllus, a famous physician of the Roman Empire, recommended sun baths in the treatment of skin diseases and also to treat rickets. Avicenna, the great Arabian physician of the tenth century, recommended sun baths, and De Monville, the French surgeon, used red light in smallpox.

In recent times, however, the first widespread use of sunlight was begun by Bernhard, a Swiss physician living at St. Moritz. He noticed that Swiss butchers cured their meat by sunlight. In 1902 he made his first experiment by taking a patient who had an abdominal wound full of pus and exposing the wound to the sunlight. The effect was remarkable.

ALMOST at the same time, Rolleir, also a Swiss, began his famous treatment of tuberculosis joints in children by the use of sunlight. He selected a spot high up in the Swiss Alps.

He tells the story of the incident which prompted him to use sunlight; that he had a little dog from whose spine he had removed a tumor. He dressed the wound and was determined to keep it covered with a bandage, which the dog was just as determined to remove. He did this several times, and one day Dr. Rollier came on the dog by accident and found out the reason for his persistence. Instinct had prompted the dog to lie with the wound exposed to the sunlight and it was soon healed.

The first artificial sunlight was used by Dr. Niels Finsen. It is not remarkable that this invention should have been made by a man who lived far north in Scandinavia, where for long periods of the year the days are almost completely dark.

DRAMA MOTION PICTURES MUSIC

Much-Praised 'Richard II' Of Maurice Evans Arrives

Production Which Made Theatrical History on Broadway Last Season Comes to the American for Week—"Henry IV" to Be Played Once.

THE Shakespearean performance that was called the greatest within memory by the New York reviewers last spring will be shown to St. Louisans tomorrow night when Maurice Evans, young English actor, gives his representation of "King Richard II" at the American Theater.

Evans, whose introduction to this country came several seasons ago in Katharine Cornell's New York productions of "Romeo and Juliet" and "St. Joan," holds the Broadway record for Shakespeare and the world's record for "King Richard II." His 171 performances in New York as the King topped Basil Sydney's and Mary Ellis' total for "Taming of the Shrew" by four, Jane Cowl's "Romeo and Juliet" by 14, the John Gielgud "Hamlet" by 39, John Barrymore's "Hamlet" by 70 and so on.

What Evans hopes to do, now that he is classified as the leading Shakespearean actor of the day, is to build up a Shakespearean repertory group for this country. In furtherance of that plan, he has rehearsed "King Henry IV—Part I," historical sequel to "King Richard II," has played it in Philadelphia, Toronto and Detroit on the present tour and will perform it once this week—on Friday evening at the American. All other performances, including Wednesday and Saturday matinees, are of "Richard."

In "King Henry IV," Evans plays the fat old braggart, Jack Falstaff. Frederick Worlock, who, as Bolingbroke, deposes Richard and becomes King Henry IV, portrays the same character in both plays. In the company of some 43 players, other eminent figures are Lee Baker, Charles Dalton, Reynolds Evans, Donald Randolph, Lionel Hogarth, A. G. Andrew, Irene Tedrow and Eleanor Phelps.

The production, staged by Margaret Webster, is one of the most massive on tour this season. Scenic designs of David Ffolkes were copied from those at the old Vic Theater, where Evans first played "King Richard II" in 1934, and are so heavily constructed that 26 men are kept busy for 10 hours before performance to get arches and platforms of castle scenes into place.

"KING RICHARD II," one of Shakespeare's earlier plays, rarely has been performed in this country and New York had not not seen it for 60 years before Evans' version opened last spring. Some St. Louisans were acquainted with it in a Little Theater presentation in February, 1935.

In contrast to the hump-backed villain, Richard III, who has long been a favorite with blustering Shakespearean stars, Richard II is youthful, handsome, weak, vain and extravagant. Unable to make up his mind in great affairs of state and high-handed in lesser ones, he falls a victim of rebellious nobles headed by Bolingbroke, is deposed and slain.

To the play, Shakespeare gave some of his best and best-loved poetry. It is in "King Richard II," for example, that one encounters the tribute to England beginning "This scepter'd isle—this precious stone set in a silver sea," and the tragic reflection which is brought about by the speech, "Let us sit upon the ground and tell sad stories of the death of kings—."

Evans' rise to fame is one of the most unusual in the modern theater. A salesman in a London music house at 20, he was taking part in amateur theatricals. An invitation to play at the Glastonbury Festival was followed soon by professional engagements, the London stage and eventually the Old Vic, shrine of Shakespeare, where Evans played not only Richard, but Hamlet, Iago, Octavius Caesar, Petruchio and other classical figures. He is now 36 years old.

In addition to Romeo and the Dauphin in "St. Joan," Evans played Napoleon in "St. Helena" on Broadway. His tour is headed toward the West coast, where he plans to get other plays, "Hamlet" among them, in rehearsal for a return to New York.

Another distinguished acting group follows Evans' company to the American. This is the Abbey Theater Players from Dublin, Ireland, who were here three years ago. The repertory for the engagement here is: Next Sunday night, "Juno and the Paycock" by Sean O'Casey; Monday and Tuesday nights, "Silver Jubilee" by Cormac O'Daly and "Riders to the Sea," one-act play by J. M. Synge; Wednesday matinee and night, "Drama at Inish," by Lennox Robinson; Thursday and Friday nights, "The Plough and the Stars" by Sean O'Casey; Saturday matinee and night, "The Far-Off Hills" by Lennox Robinson.

"Juno and the Paycock," "Riders to the Sea" and "The Far-Off Hills" were given here in 1935. "Silver Jubilee" is a prize play and "Drama at Inish" a revival that was successful in a recent New York engagement. In the company are Arthur Shields, P. J. Carolan, Eileen Crowe, Maureen Delany, F. J. McCormick, Dennis O'Dea and others who toured before. Only Barry Fitzgerald, now in the movies and currently in "Ebb Tide" at the St. Louis Theater, is missing, among the first-string players.

The same "Tobacco Road" company that was here last fall comes back for the week of Feb. 27. An open date afterwards leads to the week of March 13, when Walter Hampden returns in "Ethan Frome," a play new to St. Louis. On March 21, Helen Hayes brings the long-awaited "Victoria Regina" to town.

Lunts in "Sea-Gull"

Anton Chekhov's "The Sea Gull," in which Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne will have leading roles, will open in New York on March 21, to alternate with the Lunts' present company, "Amphitryon 38." Both plays are tentatively set for a road tour and arrival in St. Louis by May.

"Petrified Forest" By Dramatic Students

Four performances of Robert Sherwood's "The Petrified Forest," under the direction of Eugene R. Wood, Little Theater actor, will be given by the advanced dramatics department of the Webster Groves High School in the school theater at 8:20 p. m. on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings.

A Minor Musical That Succeeds

By Colvin McPherson

MORE money could have been spent, more talent rounded up, bigger production numbers staged and more screen credits given, but keeping within the budget, "Everybody Sing," at Loew's, is about the best little musical that could have been made. It will do good for its producers and for Fanny Brice, Judy Garland and Allan Jones, who share its floodlights.

"Everybody Sing" is affable all the way. The dialogue is fresh, the music's good, the comedy's excellent. Unless you take notes you're likely .o forget what happened but you won't forget that Miss Brice is sensationally funny as a Russian housemaid, that Allan Jones sings more romantically and looks younger with every picture and that Judy Garland is a brightening star if there ever was one.

The audience is asked to imagine that Reginald Owen, a playwright, and Billie Burke, an actress, are heads of a household that is as near a combination of carnival and lunatic asylum as might be arranged. They have two daughters, Lynne Carver and little Miss Garland. A night club tenor, Jones, is working as chef in the house, to be near Miss Carver. Miss Brice is the aforementioned housemaid.

When Judy is kicked out of girls' school for putting swing into Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," she returns home, discovers the family without ready cash and decides to do her bit by singing in a cafe. The family finds her out, packs her off to Europe, but she jumps ship and goes into Jones' new musical show. At the final curtain everybody's in it, so there.

Absorption of the plot is not necessary for enjoyment of the effort. At every moment when things are slowing down, Miss Brice pops in, reads some dramatic lines, clowns or pretends passionate love and the show goes merrily on again. Miss Brice's "Baby Snooks" has a brief scene and in "Quainty, Dainty Me," the comedienne literally tears apart all the minuet dancers of all time.

Jones' song, "The One I Love," is the best in the show and he gives it the quality that used to bring visitors to the park every afternoon to watch him rehearse and get his autograph. Judy Garland no longer needs anyone to point her out as a discovery, as several of us were doing when she sang "The Balboa" in "Pigskin Parade." She definitely has "arrived" in the show world.

Arsene Lupin, who jumped off a bridge some years back, returns as a country gentleman in Loew's second picture. Eager to keep his past a secret, he has to get rid of an imposter who uses his name—his former name of Arsene Lupin, that is. Melvyn Douglas plays the part. Warren William is the detective who finds out his true identity, John Halliday is the owner of an emerald. As might be indicated by the team-work of these three gentlemen, "Arsene Lupin Returns" is intended to be very, very suave. It is. It is also quite dull.

Swing Your Lady.

HEARTY entertainment which has a hint of the off-color in it causes much laughter at the Ambassador. "Swing Your Lady," from a New York stage play which was good and rowdy, tells of the problems that perplex a wrestling promoter when he takes his grappler on a barnstorming tour of the Ozarks and finds only a lady blacksmith who will meet the bruiser on the mat on Decoration day.

Humphrey Bogart is the promoter, Nat Pendleton the exhibit of brawn and bone and Louise Fazenda the high priestess of the forge and anvil. Frank McHugh and Allen Jenkins go along with Bogart for the ride, the Weaver Bros. are promoters of the match and Elviry a community leader, Daniel Boone Savage of the wrestling profession Pendleton's eventual opponent. It all takes place down around Russell City and Plunkett, Mo., in the neighborhood of Joplin and Springfield, but don't go looking for such vales.

Pendleton, who was an A. A. U. and Olympic wrestler before he went into pictures, gives a performance that would certainly win an Academy prize in its field. An intelligent fellow when he wishes to be, Pendleton here makes his Joe Skopapoulous a big hulk with no thought but for Miss Fazenda. In the wrestling match, he gives Savage what unpopular opponents usually get in films, a good licking.

Whether "Swing Your Lady" is a libel on Southern Missouri or not, its hill-billy music, comedy and dancing are worth much as entertainment. The Weaver Bros. and Elviry, favorites of vaudeville, revive some of their particular brand of fun, and Penny Singleton—real name, and not the character in "You Can't Take It With You"—contributes the accent of swing. Although the picture abounds in bright remarks, the neatest bit of writing seems to be the dress rehearsal of the wrestling match by Pendleton and Savage. It's very good.

"Checkers," also at the Ambassador, is a race track tale which need not be related, since it so closely follows the conventional pattern. Out of deference to Hollywood, all tracks over the country should offer events called the Mortgage-Lifting or Home-Saving Stakes, or the Everything-Depends-On-It Stakes, and maybe it would be well to call one the Jane-Withers-Saves-the-Day Handicap. That's what "Checkers" has.

Radio City Reveals.

IN "Radio City Revels" at the Fox, Jack Oakie and Milton Berle spend a great deal of time trying to get Bob Burns to go to sleep. Bob is a hill-billy composer who is inspired only in his sleep, and they are a pair of parasite song composers who take his dreams down in musical shorthand and sell them to the world for fancy prices.

Oakie and Berle try everything. They bring in real sheep to count, they imitate the rocking motion of a boat, they give Bob sleeping tablets, they finally hit him on the head. In fact, they overlook nothing. Nothing except, perhaps, one sure cure for insomnia. That is several reels of "Radio City Revels."

With Oakie, Berle, Burns, Helen Broderick and Victor Moore, Kenny Baker and Jane Froman, who can sing, Ann Miller who can dance, and many other well-qualified enlistments, "Radio City Revels" would seem to have everything it needed for success as a musical comedy. Instead, it flounders all over the place and Radio City is a big place.

The producers haven't seen fit even to make clear the location of the whole thing — whether in a broadcasting studio or a theater. Such a finale as is staged, with enough glitter to be the trailer for next week's attraction, certainly wouldn't register on any radio set now on the market. This characteristic of the show is everywhere evident, an utter nonchalance about the audience out front. And from the reaction Friday evening, the audience already knew several of the jokes which amused the cast.

The luck of the second feature, "The Patient in Room 18," is no better. Patric Knowles certainly fails to make the team of Philo Vances, Perry Masons heretofore in films. The killing takes place in a hospital and theft of $100,000 worth of radium is involved.

With "The Buccaneer" at the Missouri is a new mystery comedy of the Torchy Blane series. Glenda Farrell and Barton MacLane, the girl reporter and the detective, are about to be married when her journalistic rivals concoct a fake murder mystery to humiliate her. It turns out to be a real murder, she solves it and flies away to the next crime in the series, which will be at the Cleveland air races, apparently.

"The Buccaneer," a work of Cecil B. DeMille, is excellent for historical pageantry, for Louisiana settings and for a few bits of acting, such as those of Akim Tamiroff as Dominique You and Hugh Sothern as Andrew Jackson. The romances of Fredric March as the pirate, Jean Lafitte, with Margot Grahame, an aristocrat, and Franciska Gaal, a serving-girl, are not of unusual appeal.

Municipal Opera Obtains New Jerome Kern Show

"Gentlemen Unafraid" to Open Season on June 3—Max Gordon Interested in Operetta as Production for Center Theater in New York.

THE world premiere of a new operetta by the top-ranking combination of Jerome Kern, Oscar Hammerstein II and Otto Harbach, announced yesterday by the Municipal Theater Association, gives Municipal Opera an event of importance to inaugurate its twentieth anniversary season on Friday, June 3. The production will run 10 days, as customary for opening shows.

Although many Kern musicals, written with the collaboration of either Hammerstein or Harbach, have been done by Municipal Opera in recent years—notably "Roberta," "The Cat and the Fiddle" and "Music In the Air"—this will be the first time the theater has obtained the premiere of such a show. The new piece is an operetta, called "Gentlemen Unafraid," which has its setting in the United States Military Academy at West Point at the outbreak of the Civil War.

Presentation here is in the nature of a tryout for Broadway. Max Gordon, leading New York musical producer, who was here last summer during the run of "Wild Violets" and highly praised the opera's facilities, is interested in "Gentlemen Unafraid" as a show for New York's big Center Theater, the house where he staged "The Great Waltz" three seasons ago.

Kern, Hammerstein, Harbach, Gordon's production staff and representatives of the Center Theater all will be here during the rehearsal period and at the opening, efforts are being made to obtain principals who may be used later on Broadway and New York reviewers, producers and other notables will be invited for the premiere, much in the manner they were for "Nina Rosa," when it opened the 1930 season.

Negotiations for the show, which have been carried on actively for the last several months and on both coasts, were aided greatly by Gordon's interest in the Municipal Theater and he is credited with persuading the authors to let the show come to St. Louis.

Kern, who has been associated with Hollywood studios recently, has written the songs of "Swing Time" for the Astaire-Rogers combination, those of "I Dream Too Much" for Lily Pons, of "When You're In Love" for Grace Moore, and "High, Wide and Handsome" for Irene Dunne in addition to the numbers he added to the original scores in screen productions of "Roberta" and "Show Boat." His record of composition for the stage is long and impressive, with "Sweet Adeline," "Sally," "Sunny," "Oh, Boy," "Stepping Stones," the Ziegfeld "Follies of 1916," "Have A Heart" and "Good Morning, Dearie" included.

The name of Hammerstein has been associated with the American musical theater for many years. Oscar Hammerstein II, whose late father stands alongside such great producers as Daniel Frohman, Charles Dillingham, David Belasco and Florenz Ziegfeld, has provided the lyrics or books, or both, for a large list of successful musical plays, including those with Kern. He collaborated with Harbach, whose fame is equally extensive, in the creation of "Rose Marie," "Song of the Flame," "Wildflower" and "Golden Dawn." He also collaborated in the writing of the popular operetta, "The New Moon." Other musical hits for which he alone wrote the book and lyrics are "May Wine," "East Wind," "Sunny," "Queen o' Hearts," "Tickle Me," "Madeline," "Good Boy," "The Wild Rose," "Free for All," "Always You" and "Gypsy Jim."

The remaining productions for the 12 weeks' season at Municipal Opera will consist of several other premieres of shows from abroad and revivals of the more successful pieces of past years, among them probably two other Kern shows, "Roberta" and "Show Boat."

Symphony Visits Chicago On Tour

THE St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's second tour of the season opens at Orchestra Hall in Chicago this afternoon with a program composed of Sibelius' Second Symhpony, the Ballet Suite from "Cephale et Procris" by Gretry-Mottl, Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" and the Polka and Fuge from Weinberger's "Schwanda the Bag-Piper."

Tomorrow evening the orchestra is at the University of Illinois, Urbana; Tuesday night in Peoria; Wednesday afternoon and evening at the University of Iowa, Iowa City; Thursday evening at Davenport, Friday evening at Cedar Rapids, Saturday afternoon and evening at Iowa State College, Ames; next Sunday afternoon at Des Moines and on Monday night, Feb. 21, at the University of Missouri, Columbia. Vladimir Golschmann will conduct all concerts.

The only soloist at any time will be Ilza Niemack, young American violinist, at the afternoon concert in Ames. Program selections for the tour include Tansman's "Variations on a Theme of Frescobaldi," Strauss' "Don Juan," the Polovtsian Dances from Borodin's "Prince Igor," the Overture to Von Weber's "Euryanthe," Tschaikowsky's "Pathetique" Symphony, the Waltzes from Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier," Dukas' "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," the Overture to Beethoven's "Coriolanus," Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" and the Prelude to Wagner's "Lohengrin."

Next regular concerts in St. Louis are on Feb. 25 and 26, when Gaspar Cassado, Spanish violoncellist, will play Schubert's Arpeggione Sonata, in A Minor, with the orchestra and Brahms' Second Symphony will be featured by the orchestra alone. The season's final tour is through the South, after the last subscription concerts here.

Work on 'Idiot's Delight'

Robert E. Sherwood, author of "Idiot's Delight," the 1936 Pulitzer Prize play, has gone to Hollywood to write the script for the motion picture version of the play. Clark Gable has been mentioned for a lead in the comedy, with Norma Shearer or Greta Garbo opposite him. Reports from the coast are also that the locale will be changed to China, instead of the Italian Alps, in order to take advantage of the current war situation, which is an integral part of the plot.

Waring Booked For Fox on Feb. 25

Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, who were at the Ambassador Theater last spring and have since appeared in a feature picture, "Varsity Show," are booked for the stage of the Fox Theater the week of Feb. 25. The Waring unit includes not only his musicians but a list of 52 entertainers, among them chorus singers, soloists, dancers and specialty entertainers.

In the company are the MacFarland brothers, formerly of St. Louis; Scotty Bates, Poly McClintock, Ferne and Donna Dee. Absent this time are the Lane Sisters and Johnnie Davis, who have entered into movie contracts in the last year.

Whether the Waring show will be the only one at the Fox this spring, or whether the Guy Lombardo and Horace Heidt aggregations will follow depends on the success of the week with Waring. Unable to reach a satisfactory agreement with the Musicians' Union during the winter for stage shows at the St. Louis, Fanchon and Marco have arranged to pay for a local "stand-by" band for the Waring week, an added expense that the theater operators say makes the engagement more or less of an experiment.

The Fox has not had stage shows except on New Year's eve, for the last four years.

Reason for Holmes' Visit to South Africa

Burton Holmes' illustrated lecture on South Africa, which opens his series a week from tomorrow night at the Auditorium Opera House, was prepared as a result of a line in his biography in "Who's Who in America." Under his name, Holmes read, "has traveled in nearly all countries except South Africa and lectured about them." He therefore set sail last May for South Africa and assembled the material he needed. His other lectures this season are devoted to Italy, the British Empire, Germany, Central and South America.

Gen. Johnson to Conclude His Radio Series Wednesday—Boake Carter to Go on 5:30 P. M. Schedule Feb. 28—Lum and Abner to Shift Networks—Eddie Cantor to Take Over Jack Oakie Program March 28 and Move It to Monday.

GEN. JOHNSON will conclude his series with his Wednesday night broadcast. Boake Carter's shift to a new schedule will not go into effect until Feb. 28, when he will have the 5:30 to 5:45 p. m. spot on the CBS net and KMOX Monday through Friday.

Lum and Abner, played by Chester Lauck and Norris Goff, will be shifted from the WJZ to the CBS net and KMOX Feb. 28 for a run at 5:45 p. m. three days a week. . . . Seventeen musicians have been added to the Saturday night Hit Parade orchestra, bringing it up to 48 players. . . . McKay Norris, who played on Broadway in "Tovarich", has been engaged for the Ma Perkins serial cast. . . . Frank Morgan, the comedian, has dropped plans for a trip to Europe to be a permanent member of KSD's Thursday night Good News of 1938 show. . . . Mrs. John Philip Sousa, widow of the bandmaster, will speak during Frank Simon's band concert Sunday, March 6.

Bing Crosby will try his hand at sports broadcasting March 5 when he will assist Joe Hernandez in covering the Santa Anita Handicap for the CBS net.

Jack Baker, the NBC tenor, has been made permanent tenor for the Breakfast Club.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Lady Astor and other women internationally known will take part in a "The Role of Women in the Modern State" program Friday, Feb. 25.

JOHN CARTER, who has replaced Nelson Eddy on Sunday's "Charlie McCarthy" program, was a contestant a while ago in one of the Sunday Metropolitan Opera Auditions broadcasts. He is a tenor, a native of New York and 25 years old. For eight or nine years he has been singing in New York in churches, at parties, in clubs and for a short time in vaudeville. His formal training in singing began only a year and a half ago. Eddy has left the program for a concert tour, but it is stated that he will be back on it by August.

Plans now being made provide for shifting Eddie Cantor on and after March 28 by having him take over the current Jack Oakie program and moving it from Tuesday to Monday nights at 6:30. Then Benny Goodman's program will be moved up into the Tuesday night spot vacated by the Oakie half hour. What will take the spot Cantor will vacate on Wednesday night is to be decided. . . .

Because a friend listened to the Court of Missing Heirs broadcast on a recent Sunday, Mrs. Winifred Haslar Watson, of Kansas City, Mo., will get $5000 left by her first husband. She did not know of his death in the East several years ago or his unclaimed estate. . . .

An agency is trying to line up a cast for a radio show to appeal especially to men, including Babe Ruth as master of ceremonies and a baseball star as a guest every week . . .

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION IN ST. LOUIS

A dramatic tribute to the pioneers of the medical profession in St. Louis and to their successors whose unfaltering devotion to a noble tradition has placed our city in the front rank of the world's great medical centers.

From Conde, the first physician, through Saugrain, doctor-scientist, Farrar, "father of the profession," the immortal Beaumont, the pioneer teacher McDowell...on down to the splendid universities and hospitals of our day...the story of medicine in St. Louis is a moving drama of courage and unselfish service...an epic of The Land We Live In.

Dr. William Beaumont
The practically self-educated army surgeon who practiced in St Louis from 1835 to 1853 and before that, in a little army outpost, solved for medicine and the world the mystery of digestion.

Correll, who plays Andy, typed every one of the 6,000,000 words. They have missed only a few broadcasts. Once, in 1930, their sponsor let them off one day when they were making a picture in Hollywood. Another time, they were snowbound when hunting in Northern Michigan. Unable to get to a studio, they wrote a biography of Amos and Andy and wired it to Bill Hay to read on the air.

ARTURO TOSCANINI'S Saturday concert broadcasts are being recorded for the NBC reference library. Forty 16-inch records will be required to cover his 10 concerts, an average of four to a program. Both sides are used, each side requiring 15 minutes for playing. Although the records are "masters" from which copies can be struck off, and there is considerable pressure on the NBC to cause it to make the record available to music lovers, no decision has been made. While the NBC makes such records primarily for its library, it did permit the making of copies of the recording of Edward the Eighth's abdication speech for public sale.

Radio sets have been installed in eight Chicago public schools, so that the WEAF network Your Health program, broadcast at 1 p. m. Wednesday, may be used to supplement instruction in hygiene. A program marking the fifth year of broadcasting to schools by WHAM's Rochester School of the Air was carried by the WJZ network last Wednesday.

UTILIZATION of waves which pulsate thousands of millions of times a second and are so short as hardly to be measurable is now a subject of laboratory research. The waves, which are electro-magnetic rather than radio, have been sent through a pipe nearly a mile long and can be reflected much as can light waves. At a recent demonstration, it was said that the waves, if transmitted on a frequency of 2,200,000,000 cycles, could carry nearly 1,000,000 telephone messages at the same time in a pipe, whereas the new coaxial cable developed for use in the television radio bands can carry only 480 messages at a time.

How Canada Balanced Its Budget And Conquered the Depression Despite Partial Crop Failure

OTTAWA, Canada, Feb. 12.

CANADIAN recovery throughout 1937 contrasts so sharply with the new "recession" in the United States as to raise the question of what forces were behind (one) the remarkable improvement in Dominion Government fiscal affairs, taking the national budget from heavy depression deficits to a state of practical balance; and (two) the increased and sustained economic activity resulting in larger payrolls and smaller relief rolls and a generally improved condition of the people themselves.

"Pump priming" was not practiced in Canada as a depression cure, and it was the consensus of informed men in and out of the Government with whom this writer talked that the absence of this artificial stimulation has been one of the most important factors in keeping recovery on a sound basis.

Incidentally, there was no control of crop production, no paying of farmers to limit acreage or not to raise livestock, and no destruction of so-called surplus farm products.

Money for Relief, But No Inflationary Spending.

This does not mean that the Canadian National Government did not spend money in large measure for relief of the unemployed and other destitute; it did, and is still doing so. But it does mean that the fiscal branch of the Government kept the ultimate welfare in mind and firmly set its face against inflationary spending where in its opinion the resultant burden of debt would involve possible danger outweighing any temporary public benefits.

So relief was largely in the form of direct doles, and public works and "work relief" were relatively unimportant.

In business circles there is no little surprise that trade and industry in the Dominion flourished right up to the end of the year, contrary to the sharply downward trend that started in the United States late in the summer and grew progressively more severe through the fall.

At the end of 1937 Canadian statisticians were pointing to a "physical volume" business record that went up steadily almost to the very last day of December until it stood about 5 per cent above that of 1929. According to the same standards of measurement, industrial production in the United States, which at the end of 1936 had reached a rate slightly above the 1929 average, fell sharply in the last six months of 1937 to an index rate about 20 per cent below that of 1929.

Canada Expects Depression in U. S. to Affect it Mildly.

The Canadians do not expect to escape the effects of this new American depression. In the banks, industrial offices and Government bureaus experts are anxiously watching the business statistics of the United States and of their own country. They have already noted in the early weeks of 1938 some signs of economic setback—mild as compared with what has happened below the border. They say that the national economies of the two countries—business and finance—are so closely interrelated that the smaller is certain to be influenced sooner or later by the trend of the dominant economy of the United States, but to what extent is always problematical.

Of all the factors contributing to business confidence probably the one of most effect just now is the Government policy that the national budget must be kept balanced.

The Dominion's fiscal year ends March 31, and at the end of December, with nine months of the fiscal year past, the revenues collected exceeded expenditures by approximately $40,000,000. That is, the Government's operations up to that time actually showed a surplus. Receipts from all sources were $402,283,466 and expenditures for all purposes were $361,866,832. And there was no trick bookkeeping in this statement, no separation of "ordinary" expenditures and "extraordinary" or emergency expenditures. Every expense item of the national Government, even including the deficit of the Canadian National Railways, was counted in the outgo.

Man Behind the Budget

DR. WM. CLIFFORD CLARK.

But the Ministry of Finance is not promising a surplus for the year. It expects some falling off in receipts, and the Government has had to assume this winter a new relief burden caused by the almost total failure of the 1937 wheat crop in Saskatchewan Province. The province normally produces 200,000,000 to 250,000,000 bushels and has grown as much as 350,000,000 bushels in a year. Due to the most severe drouth on record the 1937 crop was only 37,000,000 bushels. As this follows other drouth years, nearly half of the province's population of 900,000 is dependent entirely on outside aid.

The Federal Government has assumed entire responsibility for the people in the area most seriously affected and is now supporting at least 370,000 of them.

This wheat crop failure also has seriously reduced the revenues of the Canadian National Railways due to the lack of products to be hauled to market and the return volume of merchandise that normally would be shipped into that province in good crop years. The drouth, therefore, which would have come without the depression, has dispelled the prospect of a completely balanced budget this year. The railway deficit alone is expected to exceed $40,000,000.

Canadian Deficit Estimated at Seventh of That U. S. Expects.

Even so, the national treasury is certain to be better off than Finance Minister C. A. Dunning forecast in his budget message to Parliament last Feb. 25. He then estimated the deficit would be $35,000,000. Revenue exceeded his expectations, and expenditures, until the drouth emergency came, were kept well within the budget figures. The finance Ministry has not officially revised its estimate, but financial observers who two or three months ago were predicting a surplus now say that the deficit will not exceed $20,000,000 and may be as low as $15,000,000.

By way of comparison, the United States deficit for a few days more than seven months of the present fiscal year ending June 30 is more than $900,000,000, and for the full year is expected to exceed $1,500,000,000. To put the two deficits on a comparable basis according to population, the Canadian figure should be multiplied by 11.6 since the United States population of 129,200,000 is that many times greater than Canada's 11,100,000. In proportion to United States population this raises the Canadian estimate at its worst to $232,000,000, or just about one-seventh of that expected for the United States.

Men Behind Dominion's Sound Fiscal Policies.

Since the Government fiscal policy bears so importantly on the whole national economy of Canada it is of interest, before taking up the analysis of other forces behind the Dominion's recovery, to examine the make-up of the Finance Ministry. The present Finance Minister, Charles A. Dunning, who took office with the Liberal government of Prime Minister William L. Mackenzie King in October, 1935, was for years a successful farmer in Saskatchewan. He organized and for several years managed a co-operative grain elevator company. He was Premier of his province from 1922 to 1926, and in the latter year took the post of Dominion Minister of Railways.

At various times he held other public offices and was active in industry, serving as director of a number of large corporations. He first served in the office he now holds in 1929 and 1930. It is said of him that when Premier of Sasckatchewan he enforced a rule that the public debt of the province should not rise above a fixed conservative figure and that any proposed public undertaking that held a possibility of creating a larger debt was flatly rejected.

Behind the scenes, however, is the Deputy Finance Minister, Dr. William Clifford Clark, professional economist, educator and business consultant, to whom the business world of Canada gives great credit for Dominion's stable fiscal policy. He is sometimes called the "brain trust" of Canada, but never disparagingly. He was educated at Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario, and after postgraduate work in the United States he went back to Queen's as an associate professor of political economy. From 1923 to 1929 he was associated with American investment banking firms in Chicago and New York. Returning to the field of education, he was appointed Professor of Commerce and Director of Courses in Commerce and Administration at Queen's University. From there he went to his present position in 1932 when the Conservative Prime Minister R. B. Bennett was in office.

Private Industry Encouraged; Budget Kept Close to Balance.

When the Liberal party took over the Government in 1935, Dr. Clark was retained as Deputy Minister, although the head of the department was changed. Before that he had been largely instrumental in the establishment of the Bank of Canada as a central bank, with fiscal powers intended to stabilize Dominion monetary policy and promote recovery. The Government, incidentally, owns a majority of the capital stock of this bank and thereby controls it. Still earlier, he had served as financial adviser to the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa, in 1932, and to the World Monetary and Economic Conference at London, in 1933.

It is said of Dr. Clark that he has held resolutely to two major policies, first, that an actual balance of the government budget must be achieved as soon as possible, and, second, that private industry must be encouraged so that the volume of business and employment may expand. One of the functions of the Finance Department has been to resist the pressure of various groups for "pump priming" spending. "The budget can't stand it," is the answer to these pleas.

Not yet 50 years old, Dr. Clark looks more the university professor than the man of business or the politician. Of course he is not a politician; he holds his position not for political considerations but for demonstrated ability.

Per Capita Debt of U. S., Once Below, Now Above That of Canada.

The big depression had its two phases in Canada, just as in the United States. There was the Government's depression, affecting the public purse, and there was the people's depression, affecting the daily lives of all. The two were related, and the Government in seeking to cure the people's depression seems to have recognized that ultimate success depends on not making its own depression worse.

Canada entered the depression with relatively greater burden of national debt than did the United States. The per capita national debt of the Dominion in 1929 was $222 and of the United States, $139. The Dominion had not been able to retire its World War debt as rapidly as had the United States. The United States, however, has now passed Canada, having a per capita national debt of $286 compared with about $270 for the Dominion. This reflects the difference in the Government spending policies of the two countries.

How far down was Canada in the trough of the depression? This, of course, is a relative matter and there is no accurate measure for exact determination of the answer. Business men and Government officials in Canada probably will agree that, when the whole national economy is considered, the worst there was not quite as bad as in the United States. The Canadian Bureau of Statistics reports that at the bottom in 1932 production in the Dominion was 74 per cent of that of 1926,

By E. ROY ALEXANDER
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 12.

MUNICIPAL corruption has made one of its periodical appearances in the strangely unreal picture that is Miami—an incongruous note on a canvas where the gleaming buildings appear to have been designed by a decorative cake-baker, the skies are gorgeous azure and the waters of Biscayne Bay are bluer than the most extravagant representations of the chromo painter.

Everybody in Miami, where the season now is at its height, appears to be having a good time. The restaurants and beaches are crowded, the crowds throng the souvenir shops on almost every street, the handbooks, the gambling houses and the dog track are doing excellent business, the crowds stroll the streets at night under a dazzling and garish display of neon signs.

Yet all is not well. In this city where everybody seems bent on the best of all possible vacations, while visitors play, and the home town people bend their efforts to see that everybody enjoys himself—for a consideration, of course—the grand jury has been busy. Its report, made public 10 days ago, presents an amazing picture of graft and corruption.

Investigation Touched Off by Utility Man's Charge.

The official inquiry was precipitated by an extraordinary step in which the head of the local power company advertised in the two Miami newspapers the charge that one of the city's representatives had asked him for a $250,000 bribe to settle a long-standing dispute between the city and his concern, the Florida Power and Light Co.

"I won't pay a bribe," Bryan C. Hanks, president of the power company, headlined his display advertisement. Although he did not name the city's representative who approached him, he did profess willingness to tell what he knew to a grand jury.

This was startling. Hanks, lean and ruddy-faced former soldier, not only had violated an old Miami custom by refusing to pay under the rose for the privilege of doing business, but also had kicked over the grapefruit cart by broadcasting the fact that he had been "propositioned."

It called for action. Dade County authorities immediately impaneled a grand jury of tradesmen, farmers and small businessmen. In the 17 days at its disposal the investigating body went into Hanks' charge. It then began to range far afield. The results were surprising, even in a community where gambling, bookmaking, prostitution and all the rag-tag and bobtail activities of a "wide-open town" operate on a large scale, and cheerfully pay handsomely for the "rights."

What Grand Jury Found and Did; Officials Indicted.

The grand jury—

Indicted Mayor Robert R. Williams, his fellow City Commissioners, John W. du Bose and Ralph B. Ferguson, and Thomas E. Grady, the city's rate and tariff expert, on charges of conspiracy and exacting remuneration not provided by law, the latter a form of bribery punishable by a maximum of 10 years in prison;

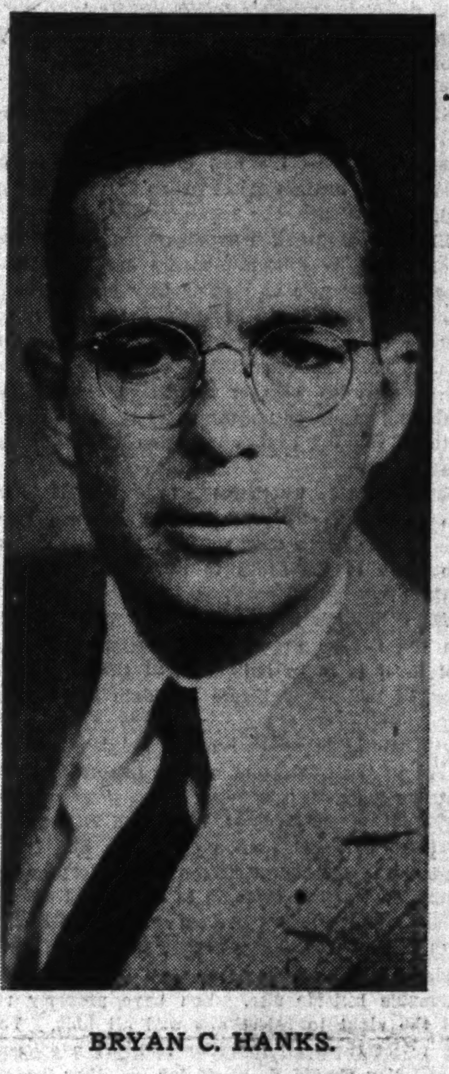
Declared it was convinced that the three Commissioners, including the Mayor, and the rate expert "were all involved in a conspiracy to sell out the interests of the people for their own selfish gain";

Found that Grady had accepted a total of $15,000 in fees for services to a local bus company in connection with a recent unsuccessful attempt to get an exclusive franchise from the city;

Learned that a firm of Miami lawyers is to get a fee of $150,000 from a New York syndicate in connection with the refunding of Miami's bonded indebtedness of $28,000,000, for which service the syndicate itself is to get the fat minimum fee of $740,000;

Reported it could find no evidence that city officials were connected with the operation of houses of prostitution;

He Said No in Big Type



BRYAN C. HANKS.

Reported that a well-organized bookmaking ring has practical control of that lucrative business in Miami, and that 80 per cent of the periodical arrests by Miami police were of bookmakers not allied with the ring, although the latter represent only about 15 per cent of the bookmaking activity in the city;

Indicted Carl F. Lambert, special city engineer, on the charge of exacting an illegal fee of $2800 to recommend a commercial water-measuring device to the City Commission; and—

An immediate aftermath of the grand jury's report was a movement launched by several citizens' groups for the recall of Mayor Williams and two Commissioners named in the indictment. Whether it will ever come to an election, however, is problematical.

Smart Rogues Preferred to Stupid Honest Men

One Miami merchant, who said he had been in the forefront of civic reform for the first 25 of his 38 years in business in the city, told the correspondent that he, for one, would not sign the recall petition. He remarked that in such an election it also would be necessary to name successors should the public officials be recalled, and that "the whole thing is too complicated."

"I've finally come to the conclusion," he added, "that you get better government out of rogues who are smart, than from honest men who are stupid. After all, we have to get the visitors down here or we get no business. They come to gamble, to bet on the races, or play in the small games. It makes it pretty hard to do anything about official graft unless it gets too wide open."

That is the feeling of many Miami business men whose enterprises depend on the tourist trade in the winter months. Observers of the situation say it also tells why this group, once the spearhead of civic reform movements, is now relatively inactive, the members not even serving on grand juries. Corruption, "within reason," has become an indispensable adjunct of government.

The electric light rate dispute, chief item of interest in the grand jury's report, dates back to 1925, when the City Commission, then of different makeup, enacted an ordinance giving the Miami Electric Light & Power Co. a franchise to operate in the city for 30 years, with the city having the option to buy the property at the end of that time.

Among the extraordinary provisions of the franchise was a clause providing that the annual rate base was to be $4,911,912, the agreed value of the property at that time, plus the value of any improvements made in succeeding years. No provision was made for taking depreciation into account.

Another generous provision was that the company should so fix its rates as to get as its fair and reasonable profit 10 per cent of the so-called contemporaneous rate base—that is, 10 per cent of the value as computed from year to year with improvements included.

Subsequently the local company was purchased by interests allied with the wideflung Electric Bond & Share Co. and became the Florida Power & Light Co. Through the years the company branched out through Florida so that finally it was claiming as its Miami rate base a total of $22,260,277 as of April, 1933.

In February, 1933, the City Commission took steps to lower its power costs by enacting another ordinance in which it set the contemporaneous rate base at $9,210,000 and the fair and reasonable rate of return at 7 per cent. This had the effect, by the workings of a schedule enacted with the ordinance, of reducing power rates an average of 30 per cent.

The power company immediately threw the case into the courts, where it is still to be decided, while the company places on deposit monthly a total of $40,000, to cover refunds should the new ordinance be approved. It is variously estimated that $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 is to be refunded to Miami users.

There is no state regulatory body in Florida for the control of public utilities. Instead the Legislature has delegated this power to most municipalities, among them Miami, to which has been given specific authority "to establish, impose and enforce water rates and rates and charges for gas, electricity and all other public utilities."

The answer of the power company to the regulatory ordinance was an injunction suit filed in the court of United States District Judge Halsted L. Ritter, who later was ousted from office by Senate impeachment for bringing his court "into scandal and disrepute" in connection with other matters.

After a preliminary restraining order had been issued, the case was heard on its merits and the final decree was entered by Judge William H. Barrett. He found that the rate ordinance was legal, that the rate base was not confiscatory, as alleged, but that the original franchise ordinance was invalid because the city did not have the legal power to enter into such a long-range contract.

Later Developments Leading to Hanks' Charges

After the rate ordinance had been declared valid by Judge Barrett, the company voluntarily reduced its rates to figures approximately those of the ordinance. In the meantime, however, it had no intention of submitting to the principle that the city had power to regulate its rates or to concede that the franchise ordinance of 1925 was invalid. Consequently it appealed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, where the case is now pending in New Orleans.

Meanwhile, since the company had acceded to the implied proposal that rates should be lowered, various interests began clamoring for a settlement of the lawsuit. Such a settlement would, obviously, have been all to the advantage of the power company, since it would leave undecided the question whether Miami could regulate its rates.

Many conferences were held between the company and the city and in May, 1934, when a settlement appeared imminent, a group of citizens obtained an injunction in State court restraining the City Commission from making any agreement except one based on the final decision of the United States Court.

"Negotiations for settlement of the Miami electric rate case have been terminated," the advertisement continued. "After a basis of agreement had been reached and declared satisfactory by representatives of the city in such negotiations with respect to the rate case, taxes and certain other unsettled matters, I was informed by one of the city's representatives, who was most active in the negotiations, that the settlement would only be effective on the secret payment of $250,-

Calls Foreign Policy Inconsistent.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE Woman's International League for Peace and Freedom recently addressed a few questions to the State Department. Among them were these: Why has the Neutrality Act not been invoked in the Far Eastern crisis; why has American policy differed so materially in the Spanish and Far Eastern situations; and are we to assume that the maintenance of the Open Door in China is the basis for present American policy there?

The answer was: "Our impartiality in the conflicts has been the same in both situations. Our rights, interests and obligations in China, however, differ greatly from those in Spain. In the one situation, it was thought that the application of the Neutrality Resolution was in the interest of this country and its nationals, and in the other situation, it was thought that such action would be unwise."

Apparently we, the people, are answered. Laws, then, are flexible, and may be applied or not applied as the administration thinks best for American "rights and interests"—a dangerous precedent. A divided nation, we were once taught, cannot stand. How can a foreign policy command international respect if it is neutral on one seaboard and non-neutral on the other? ALBERTINE H. MILLER.

I WANT the taxpayers to know that while the salaries of the Superintendent and others have been increased at Homer G. Phillips Hospital, the salaries of the menial help have been decreased from the meager sum of $65 to $55 per month, and some of this type of help have families to support.

The Problem of Idle Debutantes.

BEFORE the local gossips exhaust the subject of the idle debutantes and the air rifle—why not take a long view? Aren't we all guilty at times of idle amusement, which luck alone, perhaps, keeps within bounds lest it lead to disturbance of the peace charges?

The fair-minded public will admit that society at large is mainly at fault, that the cream of its young women, on the threshold of entrance into the great big wonderful world of truly grown-ups, are expected to do nothing else but dress divinely, groom themselves perfectly, dance all night, sleep all day, do everything mother and father command them, and never, never, never admit that they are bored to the actual breaking point.

St. Louis debutantes have been charged with being lazy. Certain other cities have a very different program for their buds. Preliminary Junior League activities demand certain regular hours of each girl's time during the debut year. The result is salutary in many ways. The debutante does not have the advantage of the young men in keeping late hours. He must snatch a few minutes' rest between breakfast after the ball and his appearance at his work, remembering that the girl who was so loath to go home at 6 a. m. may have her sleep until noon; in other cities, the girl has work that demands her early rising, and she is sensibly sympathetic with the man who escorts her, in his desire to arrive at a party within a half-hour of the time for which they were invited, and to be ready to call it a day at a reasonable hour.

It may not be feasible for the St. Louis Junior League to arrange a program for the debutante, but there is always the volunteer service, organized and directed by the Community Council, and not only ready, but really and truly anxious to enlarge its number of volunteers. It should be the "smart" thing for the debutante to have a bit of a job of work during her debut year, not for pay, but for sheer opportunity to show that she can make some kind of a contribution that is constructive. Please let us not score these youngsters too unmercifully. Let's give them a leg up. CLAY PIGEON.

A Widow's Taxes.

REFERRING to a notice as to sidewalk repairs which appeared in the Post-Dispatch of Feb. 8, I should like to make the following comment:

I am a widow, owning property which bears a mortgage. My taxes amount to $14 per month and the water license is $30 per year. My income from rent is $33 per month. Where do the City Counselor and the Public Service Commission think the property owners are going to get the money to pay for sidewalks?

The property owners of South St. Louis received sewer bills last October. My bill was $64. My parents paid on the Arsenal street sewer several times and in October I had to pay again.

I was fortunate enough to get part-time work by which I earned $3 per week to keep from starving. My age is 60 years, next birthday.

I think the property owners are to be pitied. Let the city officials lay off of the real estate owners so they can have a small chance to get their breath.

A WIDOW.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, Secretary of State Dwight H. Brown, Attorney-General Roy McKittrick, State Treasurer Robert W. Winn and State Auditor Forrest Smith,

Gentlemen:

As members of the Board of Permanent Seat of Government, you are responsible, under the State Constitution, for the care and development of the grounds and State buildings surrounding Missouri's magnificent State Capitol. How will you exercise that responsibility in the important matter now before you?

This question is being asked in all parts of Missouri as information about the site and design of the proposed new State Office Building belatedly reaches the voters. The importance of the answer you will give cannot be exaggerated.

Your answer will determine whether upward of $1,000,000 raised by Missouri taxpayers is to be misspent.

It will determine whether an inadequate building is to be built on a physically unsuitable site, which precludes expansion as needs require.

It will determine whether a carefully worked out plan for the development and beautification of the Capitol grounds, adhered to up to now, is to be cast aside with no explanation.

It will determine whether Jefferson City is to continue to set an example in city planning in Missouri or become the scene of a sorry setback to this most important work.

It will determine whether your own recommendation to the Legislature, as members of the State Planning Board, that the new building "should be properly related to the Capitol Group Plan," is to be ignored.

It will determine whether expert counsel—the judgment of nationally known planners and architects such as J. C. Nichols of Kansas City and Egerton Swartwout of New York, to name only two—is to be ignored in a matter obviously requiring expert opinion.

It will determine whether the design of the Missouri Capitol group will continue to be harmonious or is to be violated by the intrusion of an utterly foreign style.

It will determine whether the Capitol dome is to remain the chief structure on the Jefferson City skyline or whether a new building is to be raised on the ridge to the south to provide unfortunate competition.

It will determine whether the most costly building in the Capitol group to be erected since the Capitol itself is to be built without the release of pictures to the public before the date for closing bids.

It will determine whether public opinion is to be ruled out in the conduct of a most important piece of State business.

It will determine, in short, whether a vital public policy is to be decided upon after free and frank discussion and an honest attempt to collect expert judgment or whether there is to be official silence and evasion and willful disregard of valid protests.

At 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, you are to open the bids on the building as planned for the utterly objectionable hillside site. You have properly reserved the right to reject any and all bids. You should reject them all in order to avert a colossal blunder. You should do so, if for no other reason, because it has now been learned that the building as planned will not meet present needs and will not be adaptable to enlargement.

Keep the ground you have bought for parkway. The Capitol Group Plan calls for it. Erect a harmoniously designed building on State-owned property north of the Highway Building, where there is room for expansion and where the new building will not compete with the Capitol.

The new Office Building should and can be a pride of Missouri. If built as now planned, it will be a cause of regret as long as it stands.

BACK TO THE FIRING LINE.

After cloistered years in the Supreme Court, and from the deeper shadows of retirement, Justice Willis Van Devanter was called back to the firing line, so to speak, as provided by a recent statute. In this mail fraud and conspiracy case, tried in New York, the testimony was an oft-told tale of nimble wits and greedy dupes; of wagers on "fixed" races that were to yield fabulous returns at long-shot odds.

The locale was notorious Reno. A pillared bank performed the necessary service of converting the victims' securities into cash and lent a spurious touch of respectability to negotiations that otherwise might have stalled. The confidence men got the money, the itching palms a costly experience.

As the trial Judge, Justice Van Devanter was zestfully in command. Dilatory lawyers were brought up sharply, befuddled witnesses were taken in hand, the keynote of the whole affair was action, and from the dispatches one got the impression that the Court thoroughly enjoyed the job.

The wisdom of the act enabling retired Justices to return to duty when circumstances require has had a happy vindication. Among the elderly of the "Nine Old Men," Mr. Justice Van Devanter, again in harness, is young, ardent, colorfully competent.

THE DEBUT OF "SNOW WHITE."

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," which is Walt Disney's first completed full-length picture, has already broken a record and undoubtedly will break many more before it has run its course. It is in its fifth week at the Radio City Music Hall in New York and has been seen by more than 800,000 persons. Mr. Disney, it seems, is now in the big money—and for the first time. Mr. Disney has also made himself eligible for another sheaf of laurels.

More important than either the cash or the kudos that "Snow White" will earn for its inimitable creator is the effect it will have on future motion picture entertainment.

One of the complaints made against the moving picture by the more sensitive practitioners in the Hollywood studios is that the medium itself is made up of so many rigid elements that it cannot be artistically unified. The true-to-nature settings, the necessity for rapidly changing camera angles, the registered personality of so many of the actors, all tend to create a formula that can be disregarded only at the risk of producing something that the public will not pay to see.

Whether this is a valid complaint or not, it is nothing that need disturb Mr. Disney. He creates his own world with its own weather and populates it with whatever creatures suit his fancy. There can be no problem of inflexibility where one mind creates, as well as controls, all the elements with which it is concerned.

And now that it has been demonstrated that Mr. Disney's animated fantasies are just as acceptable in full length as in abbreviated form, it may be assumed that "Snow White" will have many successors.

We hope so, at any rate. If the movies are to be America's chief escape, one should be able to escape, with greater frequency, to realms much more fanciful and farther away than are supplied by most Hollywood producers.

LOANS TO SMALL BUSINESS.

As one of the many proposals designed to stimulate industrial and commercial activity, the administration is drafting a plan to facilitate loans to small businesses. It is expected that the plan will follow the principle employed in F H A transactions, the loans coming from the banks with the Government guaranteeing their repayment.

Small business has frequently complained of its inability to obtain long-term loans from the banks, and has pointed out that it stands at a disadvantage with large business because the latter can issue new securities to finance long-range undertakings. The big banking houses are glad to handle such paper in large amounts, but do not like to handle securities of small, little-known businesses.

Are banks, bursting with funds, being overly timid in financing small-scale enterprises? Are the purposes for which such enterprises ask for money sound ones? What is the explanation of the R F C's experience with loans to business?

The R F C was authorized in June, 1934, to lend $300,000,000 to business of all kinds, such loans to be made directly, in co-operation with banks or in participation with banks. The loans were to be "adequately," later "reasonably" secured, and were to be used for activities making for employment.

But, up to the end of 1937, only $98,000,000 was so lent. Why, if small business needed money, did it not utilize the whole sum thus made available? It was the contention of Jesse Jones, director of the R F C, that the willingness of his organization to lend to business had the effect of producing a more liberal policy on the part of the banks; but if this be true, why is it deemed desirable now to induce banks to lend money by guaranteeing the loans?

It may very well be that the proposed plan will be highly efficacious. It may be that it will stimulate the expansion of small business in desirable ways and help reduce unemployment, and certainly, if there is any possibility of that, we should all rise and cheer. But the experience of R F C and other considerations leave room for considerable doubt. In any case, a healthy skepticism on the subject will be proof against disappointment if the experiment does not live up to advance notices.

SEVENTY IS SEVENTY.

For a generation they have been calling him "The Sage of Emporia," but "The Show Man of Kansas" were a livelier, truer brevet for William Allen White. Who else in Kansas, who else in the cosmos, has so dramatized his seventieth birthday? He has made it a coming-out party, a triumphant bow to an admiring world.

Just the same, he is 70, as an indiscreet admission too faithfully attests. It is about that cliche "pedestrian." It has been bothering him for months. He knows the word as a noun, but in its incarnation as an adjective it is, he confesses, a weird, cryptic exotic.

How far is the dictionary from Editor White's desk? Probably at the other end of the room. That's where a dictionary always is. Even so, if Editor White were at flaming 50, say, or serene 60, he would have made the trip to the dictionary and learned that pedestrian as an adjective is neither an interloper nor a foreigner, but a proper part of speech and so approved by all the canons of lexicography.

But at three score and ten, the dictionary, wherever it is, is too far away. Everything is too far away, Messrs. Longfellow and Cicero to the contrary notwithstanding.

JAPAN'S REPLY.

Japan has given a conciliatory reply to the identic notes of Feb. 5 from the United States, England and France, but has refused to answer with a flat Yes or No the inquiry about the battleships of more than 35,000 tons she is reported to be building. Giving information about naval building, in the opinion of the Japanese Government, "will not contribute to any fair and equitable measure of disarmament," but it fails "to see any logical reasoning" in the assumption that failure to give such information indicates a scheme for building vessels above the limits of the London Treaty of 1936. This, of course, is far from an outright denial.

Despite this refusal, Japan does leave the door open to discussion of quantitative limitation. This does not meet the invitation of the three Powers to discuss "the question of the tonnages and gun calibers to be adhered to in future." Nevertheless, the proposal does incline favorably to further conferences, and indicates that Japan may shrink from embarking upon a runaway naval arms race. From this concession, small though it is, comes hope that the interchange of notes will yet result ultimately in averting a contest with the sky the limit.

Even the most jingoistic of the Japanese militarists must realize that if such a race developed, Japan would be at a hopeless disadvantage. National pride may insist upon parity, as Japan did at London in 1936, thereby breaking up the conference, but national assets of the Powers concerned are far from parity. For instance, the American Government's total revenue for 1937 was $5,293,840,000, that of Great Britain was $4,482,980,000, while that of Japan was only $830,400,000. The disparity is made even greater by the fact that Japan is engaged in a costly war whose end is not in sight.

A naval race would be disastrous for all the nations concerned, and particularly so for Japan. Tokio's answer still leaves a possibility that it may be prevented or kept within limits.

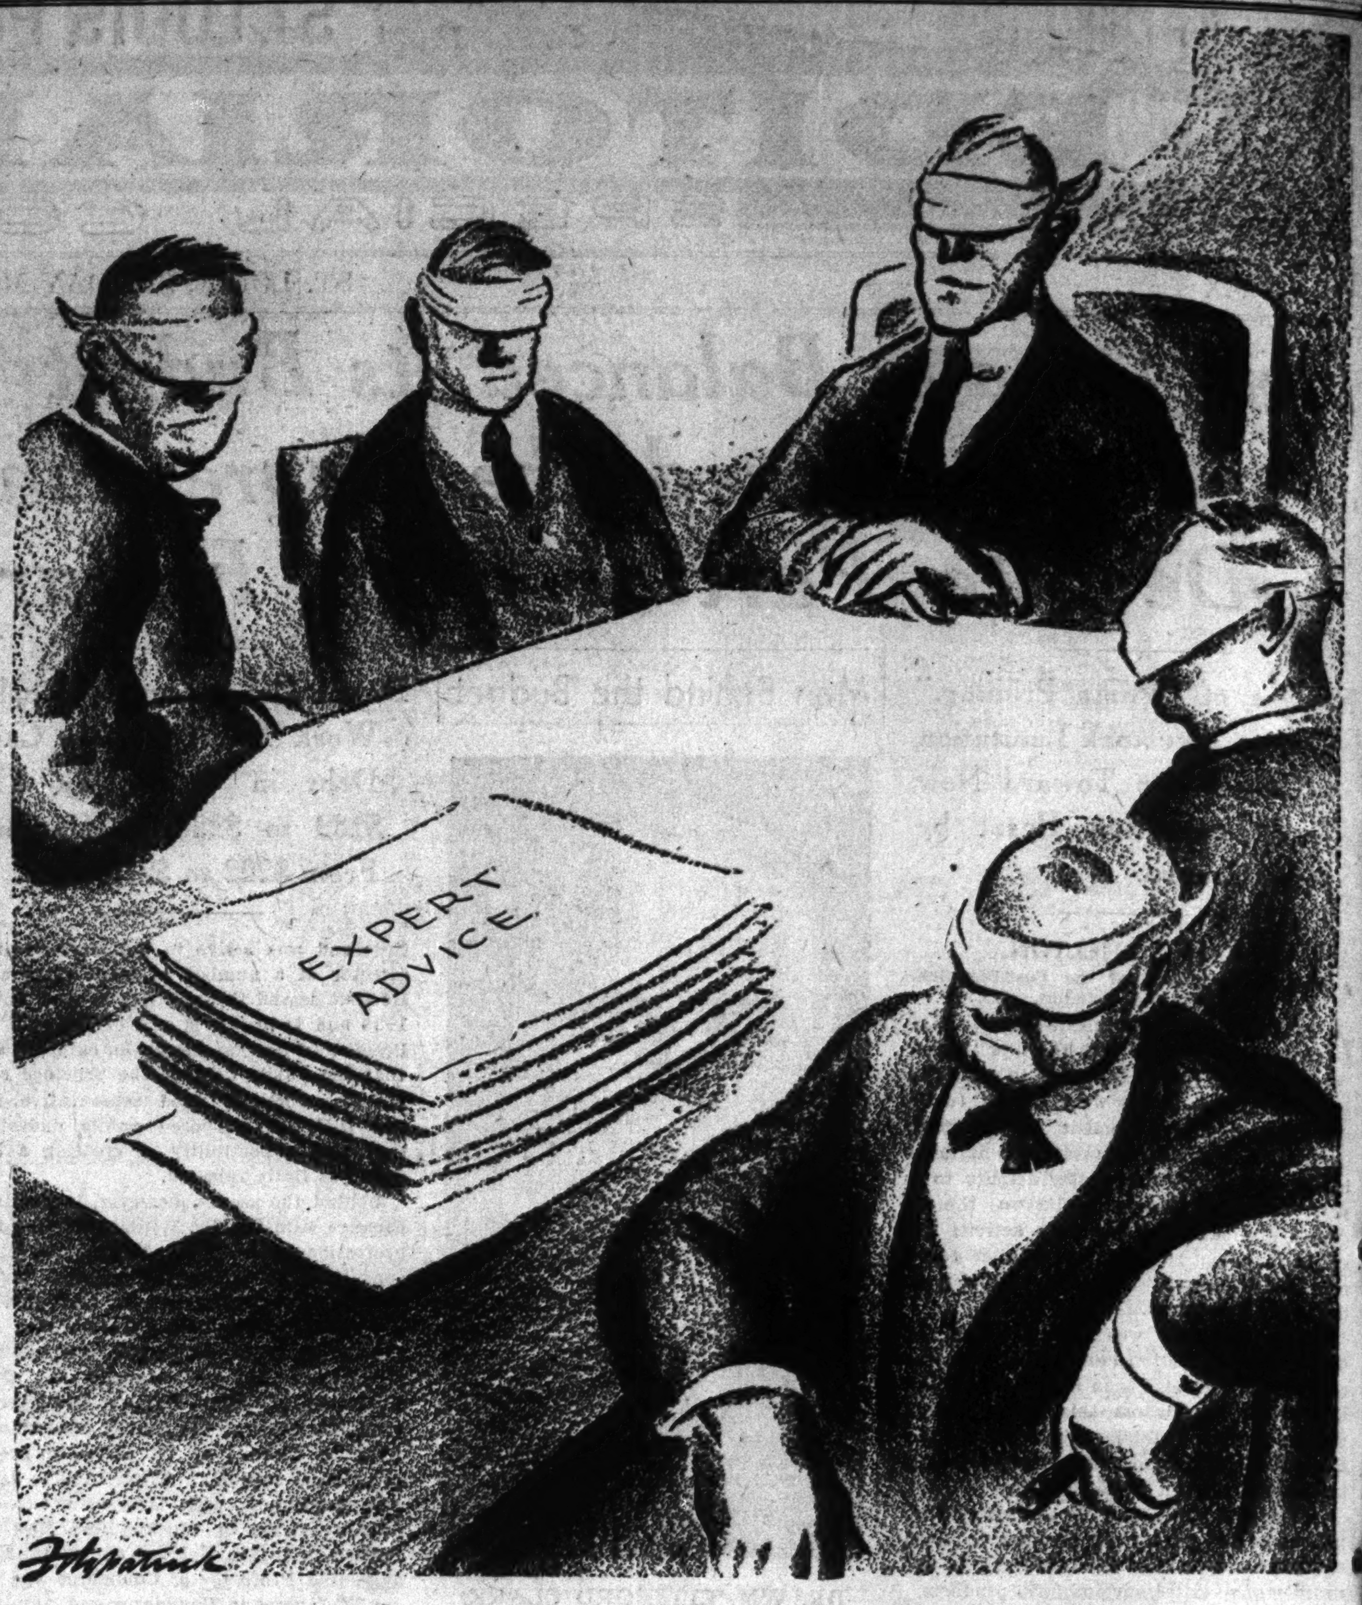
What the farmer needs, says Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming, is not curtailment of production but "promotion of consumption." The Senator, we think, has spoken the proverbial mouthful.



DECIDING ON LOCATION OF THE NEW STATE OFFICE BUILDING.

Coming: The Streamlined Home

America awaits the pre-fabricated bungalow, to be manufactured by mass-production methods, to solve dwelling shortage, says member of National Housing Committee; cites need in cities alone for 2,000,000 low-cost units to rent at from $10 to $30 a month; expresses opinion that we must build for rental rather than ownership.

Henry Goddard Leach, Editor, in the Forum.

NATIONWIDE home-building programs have been outstanding features of recovery in England and Sweden and other countries, and we are now canvassing the possibility of a similar era of building construction in the United States.

In casual discussions of building, one meets two shades of opinion. The old school believes that offering better homes to people who are not yet educated to appreciate them is wasteful and futile. It maintains that bathtubs used not for washing but for potato storage and coalbins serve no useful purpose. The new school, on the other hand, believes that people will be conditioned in a short time to appreciate the higher standards of living represented by geranium pots, pictures and bathtubs, almost as fast as they have already learned to drive streamlined automobiles.

The lag in our national recovery is largely a lag in housing. In 1925, we built 919,000 new dwellings; in 1937, less than 310,000. Thomas S. Holden, president of the New York Building Congress, said in a recent address:

"The dwelling unit of the Chevrolet quality at a price comparable to the Chevrolet price has not yet been produced. When it is—and it may be on the way—it will probably not be produced in small-scale operations, most certainly not by speculation, and also most certainly not by the Government. When the product is ready for its big potential market, we can begin to talk about really big volumes of new housing."

In Great Britain, the Government did not go into the business of building houses; it did subsidize municipally owned housing projects and, for a time, private enterprise, thus training large-scale private operations. From 1920 to 1928, 65 per cent of the 1,104,000 new houses in England were subsidized. From 1928 to 1932, these subsidies were reduced to 45 per cent of 752,000 new houses. From 1932 to 1936, it was necessary to subsidize only 18 per cent of the 1,113,000 new houses constructed.

In Sweden, housing has become as successful an industry as in Great Britain. One of the features of recent city architecture in Sweden are the huge modern flats for workingmen, flanked with balconies and flooded with sunlight. They are generously equipped with nurseries, libraries, gymnasiums and community laundries. Many of them are put up by co-operative societies.

The City of Stockholm has also gone into the business of suburban homes, not for rental but for ownership. The prospective suburban home-owner is advanced his materials by the city on a credit of about 90 per cent of the estimated value, this loan to be repaid in annual installments over 30 years. He makes a down payment of $80 and contributes the equivalent of about $270 in his own labor. The city delivers the materials and plans, and the owner has some technical assistance from an instructor who is assigned to a group of 50 new houses. His family falls to in the construction and sometimes the neighbors will help him as well.

The rural homes are but 30 minutes from the center of Stockholm. They contain twice the room space of apartments of the same price in town. They are clean and tidy. There are flowers in every home and, often, etchings on the wells. The lanes between the houses are bordered with grass and trees.

All this does not cost the Swedish taxpayer a cent, and, furthermore, the house-owner is not subsidized by the city. In all the history of this rural home development, only two houses have been sold by the Sheriff, and these were bought in at once.

The Stockholm plan calls for ownership. In the United States, the labor turnover is too swift, and workingmen shift too rapidly from city to city to make permanent ownership on a large scale practical. In urban America, we must learn to develop cheap housing for rental rather than for ownership.

President Roosevelt has proposed that Congress pass a new housing bill to encourage private capital to build cheap-rental dwellings and apartments on a large scale. It is proposed that the Federal Housing Administration be authorized to insure mortgages up to 90 per cent of the value of new dwellings appraised at less than $6000. The idea of the administration is that the cost of labor as well as materials in building can be reduced, and big builders be enabled to contract on a grand scale, backed by F H A insurance of mortgage loans. Labor may be willing to reduce wages per hour if guaranteed work over long periods.

The National Housing Committee, of which the editor of the Forum is a member, issued a report on the housing shortage for non-farm families in the United States. For those who can afford to pay $30 a month or more, according to the report, there is no shortage of housing; this group is well supplied already, with decent homes. For those who can afford to pay $10 to $20 a month in rent, there appears to be a shortage of 1,405,779 units. This is 69 per cent of the total shortage. There are needed 196,409 units for those who can afford only $10 a month and 435,370 dwelling units for families who can pay $20 to $30 a month. In other words, there is a latent market for 2,000,000 dwelling units outside the farming groups.

The problem before American business is to produce the Henry Fords who can construct these 2,000,000 units on a scale that will yield reasonable profits. The traditional costs of home construction are relatively higher than those of any other industry.

Today the value of land is on stilts, the cost of housing materials is on stilts, and labor likewise exacts the tribute of luxury. The land problem can be left unsettled for the present and mitigated by lease rather than purchase. New materials can be found for which the price has not been rigged. And, if labor recognizes its best interest, it will be willing to reduce hourly wages on construction jobs if offered contracts for the year instead of casual employment.

America's housing is still in the horse-and-buggy stage, but the era of streamlined homes will come. Fortunes have been made in cheap but beautiful automobiles. Fortunes will be made in cheap but attractive dwellings.

The President and the Press

By a Washington Correspondent.

SINCE Theodore Roosevelt's day, each American President has decided for himself what relations he will have with the Washington correspondents. It is therefore amusing to see the Literary Digest take seriously the proposal of a news commentator that President Franklin D. Roosevelt abandon his practice of letting the reporters question him orally at his semi-weekly press conference and revert to the Harding, Coolidge and Hoover system of requiring the submission of written inquires before the conference.

The argument is advanced for the written questions plan that President Roosevelt is likely to make an off-hand observation without considering the reverberations it will have in business circles.

As evidence, there is cited the President's remark that all holding companies should be abolished, in contrast with his later statements that he had meant only certain types of such companies.

Even the supporting "evidence" is at variance with the facts. The President's original holding company condemnation was made on Jan. 14 in a discussion of Wendell L. Willkie's memorandum asking administration co-operation with the public utility industry. The President had had ample time to think out what he would tell reporters. He had promised at a previous conference on Jan. 11 to discuss this memorandum at the next meeting, explaining that he wanted the memorandum before him while commenting on it.

Thus the President took more than two days to consider how he could give his views on holding companies to the country through the press. Had a written question been submitted, he would have had only several hours at most to consider his answer.

Some of Mr. Roosevelt's replies to oral questions have had a depressing effect on business. There is no assurance that some of his replies to written questions would not have the same effect. But more important than the possible effect on business is the right of the country to know what the President is thinking about at a particular time.

The President is not required to answer the questions put to him by the correspondents and he frequently laughs off their inquiries or gives noncommittal answers. He apparently enjoys the give and take with the press. Under the present practice, the reporters are free to comment on his refusal to answer, his reaction to certain questions and even his friendly or hostile relations with certain correspondents. Under the Coolidge system of written inquiries, a question unanswered was a question unasked; that is, the reporters could not tell the country that the President had declined to answer a specific question.

If President Roosevelt has been whimsical, capricious or has gone further than he intended in some of his replies, the country is entitled to know it. If he wants to revert to the written questions plan, that is his own affair, and the country will be so informed by those who attend the conferences.

The present system admittedly has its drawbacks from the point of view of the reporters. For one thing, the reporters are precluded by White House precedent from pursuing a question after the President has indicated his unwillingness to answer. The President's advantages, however, would be far greater under the written question system, and the country would lose an interesting insight into the workings of the presidential mind.

Some Voters Excluded.

TENNESSEE COURT UPSETS COUNTY UNIT PRIMARY LAW

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 12.—Gov. Gordon Browning's county unit primary law, aimed at restriction of Ed. H. Crump's Memphis voting power in Democratic primaries, was declared unconstitutional today by the State Supreme Court, and the popular vote primary laws restored.

The county unit law was the first of the Browning acts aimed at the Crump power in Memphis to reach the court and be eliminated. However, the court upheld the eligibility of 11 members of the Legislature, which passed the law, who had been challenged for accepting second State jobs, and invalidated the statute on other grounds.

The restriction of the unit vote of a county to one-eighth of 1 per cent of the population was an arbitrary and unconstitutional "debasing" of the franchise of the voter, the court held.

Citing Texas cases in which an attempt was made to eliminate Negro votes from Democratic primaries, the Tennessee court in a 4 to 1 opinion, said: "Neither, we take it, can the State without reason abridge this right in one class of voters and leave the right whole in another class of voters."

Some Voters Excluded.

The population restrictions serves "to exclude some of the voters from the party's primary, or of debasing the ballots of all the voters."

"In our form of government, a large vote in a constitutional election cannot be regarded as an evil; on the contrary, universal exercise of the right of suffrage must be regarded as an ideal support of democratic institutions."

"Devaluation of full participation in primary elections cannot be justified as a commonplace exercise of the police power," the court held.

"Restrictions must be based upon protection of 'innocent acts,' which if repeated may lead to pernicious ends, or offers frequent opportunity for fraud."

The county unit system was thus elided from the act, all other primary provisions upheld, and the primary laws restored under the opinion.

Browning-Crump Split.

Behind the enactment of the law was the break between Gov. Browning and the Crump machine in Memphis (Shelby County). The Crump machine gave Browning 59,874 votes for Governor and his Democratic opponent only 878. However, Browning received a still greater majority over the state than that given by Shelby County. The Shelby machine supported Browning's legislative program through early 1937, but showed signs of an approaching break.

After a conference in Memphis in September, 1937, Browning and Crump definitely split. Browning called an extra session in October, and enacted the county unit bill, to restrict the Crump power, and added an act to authorize the purge of registration lists for good measure.

Other Legislative Acts.

A State Crime Commission was also authorized over the opposition of Shelby County, but has not been established, and the jury provision in the State ouster law was repealed, giving the Judge jurisdiction in ouster suits.

The Court indicated today that these acts will possibly be upheld, due to the fact that the Court declared the challenged members of the Legislature eligible, and their votes valid.

The question involved in these measures, as in the unit bill, was largely one of eligibility of the votes cast to pass the bill. The Supreme Court reversed the lower courts on this phase, but ruled the unit bill out on other principles.

Crump forces contended today that the overthrow of the unit bill spelled Browning's defeat for Governor. State officials studied the court opinion with a view to possible appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

The Governor declined to comment on the possibility of another extra session.

'I Won't Pay Bribe' Starts Miami Expose

This statement was surprising in more phases than its unorthodox way of charging bribery. Almost as unusual was the open declaration that the city and the power company had been approaching a settlement out of court, although a State court had enjoined them from doing so. It showed clearly that the company did not want a Federal court ruling on the rate-fixing ordinance.

"A few days thereafter, the City Commission passed a resolution declaring the (settlement) negotiations terminated and instructing the City Attorney to proceed with the case now pending in the Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans.

"I have affidavits from other persons as to the necessity of payment of bribes to secure the settlement of the rates case and other matters. I am ready to bring the facts before a grand jury.

"This is my personal statement, made on my own responsibility as a citizen interested in honest and clean government."

State Attorney Takes Action.

Then into action went State Attorney George A. Worley, a lean former army flyer. On his motion a grand jury was impaneled. For the next 17 days the prosecutor, with his iron gray hair in disarray, was busy during the daylight hours presenting the story of Miami's corruption to the investigating body, which heard witnesses in its ornate quarters in Miami's 18-story City Hall and Courthouse building.

When the grand jury returned its indictments against the Mayor-Commissioner, his two associates and Rate Expert Grady, Worley announced that two other members of the City Commission, Alexander Orr Jr., a merchant, and R. C. Gardner, a plumbing contractor, were not involved in any way in the bribe solicitation.

Previously, Commissioner Gardner had issued a statement hailing, "The awakening spirit among the slumbering homefolk and expressing his willingness to resign from office if the other members of the commission would."

"I have been a misfit in our present political City Hall atmosphere," he said. "I have been classed as an old fogey by a good many men of influence in our city employ. They have been so dominated by curbstone City Hall parasites that they have an utter lack of responsibility to their only employer, the taxpayer."

None of the other Commissioners took up his proposal, however. After the indictments had been voted, Mayor Williams, a wiry man with graying hair, went to the Florida Supreme Court where he obtained a writ of habeas corpus to block trial on the charge of official corruption pending a determination of the habeas corpus application suit on its merits.

Hanks, who had been one of the first witnesses heard by the grand jury, declined to discuss with the correspondent the specific nature of the offer made to him. It is known, however, that he told friends the man who represented himself as an emissary of city officials first asked for $250,000 to settle the suit out of court, then came down to $190,000.

Bus Franchise Inquiry.

After disposing of the bribery inquiry the grand jury turned to the situation wherein the Miami Transit Co., now in business under a permit, had sought an exclusive franchise to operate its busses in the city. The proposal was rejected by the voters.

Without naming names, the grand jury found that one of the Miami transit companies had employed Rate Expert Grady, then on the city payroll, to make a survey of transit conditions, and for this service had paid him $5000. This the grand jury found to be "fair and proportionate."

After the services had been performed, the grand jury said, Grady was then employed by verbal agreement for another year at a fee of $10,000. "What services, if any, were rendered by Grady under this arrangement, the grand jury is not advised or informed," it stated.

Grady, a moon-faced man who has handsome offices in one of Miami's best office buildings and does a wide business in rate work, declined to comment to the correspondent, either on his indictment or on the innuendo made by the grand jury in its summary of its inquiry in the bus franchise case.

Miami is one of Grady's best customers and his services are in demand by the municipality, in connection with matters concerning power, gas and water rates, operation of the city's docks and so on. His fees from the city for 1937 are said to have totaled more than $27,000.

City Debt Refinancing.

The grand jury next turned to an inquiry into the re-financing of Miami's $28,000,000 bonded debt. Originally the credit of the municipality was pledged to pay 5 per cent on this amount in interest, the bonds to be retired in lump sums after a period averaging 30 years. No sinking fund had been set up to meet the day of reckoning, however.

A year ago Mayor Williams appointed a committee to look into the pressing matter of re-financing, but when the committee returned with its recommendations, they were pigeon-holed, and instead the commission adopted a program known as the "Taber Plan."

Under this plan, now being consummated, the city's outstanding bonds will be refunded by a new issue maturing serially over a maximum period of 30 years with interest ranging from 2 to 4 per cent and with amortization continuing from year to year by the serial payment of principal, doing away with the necessity of a sinking fund.

Soucy, Swartsfelter & Co. of Boston is head of the syndicate which has agreed to dispose of the bonds and Norman S. Taber & Co. of Cleveland, from which the plan gets its name is financial adviser in the deal, its fees to be paid by the refunding agent.

For this service and the privilege of bidding as the bonds are offered for public sale, the refunding agents are to get 3 per cent of the par value of all refunding bonds, which will be a minimum of $740,000.

Grand Jury's Comment.

On this fee the grand jury made no comment, but it did lift its eyebrows at the revelation that the Miami firm of Casey, Walton & Spain was to get a fee of $150,000 in the transaction, while the New York law firm employed to pass on the validity of the bond issues and other matters was to get only $15,000.

"Whether the (Taber plan) proposal was good or bad, there is no doubt that the same was railroaded through without proper consideration of any expert advice other than that of Mr. Taber, over the protest of members of the committee and two members of the City Commissioners, and without the dissenting members having an opportunity to study and analyze the proposed plan," the grand jury said.

"While the jury can find no direct or positive evidence of corruption in regard of this, we are, however, suspicious of the circumstances surrounding the making of the proposal to the City Commission.

"The first we hear of this syndicate is a wire from them that they are not interested in competitive bidding, and an answer to that wire, by a local attorney, that this was a 'sweet proposition.'

"We are also suspicious of the extraordinarily large legal fee paid to a local firm of attorneys employed by the syndicate of brokers whose proposition for refunding was accepted by the city. . . . It appears that the only substantial service rendered by these attorneys was in the negotiating with the three city commissioners to secure their approval and adoption of the syndicate's refinancing plan.

"The amount of this fee, part of which has already been paid, is significant when compared with the fee of only $15,000 to be paid the bond attorneys in New York for validation proceedings."

The lawyer who denominated the bond deal "A sweet proposition," was L. O. Casey, head of the law firm of Casey, Walton & Spain, occupant of a spacious suite in one of the finest of Miami's gleaming office buildings.

Casey died several weeks ago, but Miller Walton, Georgia-born partner, explained to the correspondent just where his firm stood in the matter.

"Mr. Casey meant what he stated," Walton, a slim, youngish man, said. "It was a sweet deal. Miami's bonded indebtedness was rearranged so that the city could pay it off without inconvenience, and there was a good fee in it for all concerned. It is true that this firm will get a fee of $150,000—for legal services. While we admit that it is a large fee, we think we have earned it."

The remaining partner in the firm is husky Frank O. Spain, who formerly was an end on the Florida University football team. Still active in the promotion of amateur sports, he frequently acts as an official in Southern football games.

Miscellaneous Findings.

Apparently the grand jury went hastily over other matters on its agenda, but it did examine many persons active in the underworld, and seemingly it was from their testimony that it made the deduction that the bulk of the Miami bookmaking business was controlled by the syndicate. It was unable to find any evidence of similar domination of bolita, the numbers racket, which is patronized by thousands, or of prostitution.

It had nothing to say about the games, variously denominated as lotto, bingo and otherwise, which flourish in the area, particularly in Miami Beach, where persuasive "cappers" persuade the visitor to take a hand. These games are played in large halls, open to the sidewalk on the street side, where hundreds sit in stalls and try their luck. The game is one of many activities which gives to Miami the aspect of a county fair, put on by Coney Island promoters and staged in surroundings designed by a movie production department.

Who's Who of Indicted.

Mayor Williams, most prominent of those indicted by the grand jury, has been a Commissioner since 1935 and was elected Mayor by his fellow Commissioners after the May election of last year. He is 43 years old and, so he told the correspondent, has no occupation except being Mayor, for which he gets $150 a month plus an annual contingent fund of $2000 for entertainment and the like. His only other public office has been that of Justice of the Peace. At odd times, he said, he has worked in the real estate business.

Voluble and precise of speech, the Mayor, in a discussion of his indictment, attributed it to the fight he had made on the power company and to his insistence either on an equitable settlement of the rate suit or its adjudication by the Federal courts. Just now, he said, he is in favor of fighting it out in the courts.

Commissioner Ferguson, who has a lucrative practice as an osteopath, declined to comment on the indictment.

Not so Commissioner DuBose, a lawer, who has told friends he will be a candidate for Governor in 1940.

DuBose, who has held office in Jacksonville as Assistant City Judge, Probate Judge and Justice of the Peace, declared heatedly that the whole thing was due to the opposition of the power company and announced he would fight them to the last ditch. A large man in the late 50s, he is a practical politician. Whether the power companies are on his side in the campaign makes no difference anyhow, he said, "because they don't control any votes, anyhow."

Like Mayor Williams, he declared that the charge of attempted bribery made by the grand jury was without foundation in fact. Going the Mayor one better, he asserted it was all a frame-up.

SCHOOL BOARD GROUP TO PLAN FOR NEW BUILDINGS NAMED

Dr. David C. Todd to Head Three in Drawing Up Long-Range Scheme for Construction.

A special committee of the Board of Education to draw up a long-range plan for construction of needed school buildings was appointed yesterday by President Edward A. Ferrenbach. It comprises Dr. David C. Todd, chairman, who is a member of the National2 School Housing Committee; Dr. Rudolph Hofmeister and John A. Fleischli.

Its creation was authorized by unanimous vote of the board last Tuesday on a motion by Mrs. Haymer Lowenhaupt, as the result of reports by Building Commissioner George W. Sanger and Superintendent of Instruction Henry J. Gerling that nearly one-third of the school buildings in use did not meet modern fireproofing requirements and were otherwise unsatisfactory.

Personnel of a delegation to make a junket to the convention of the American Association of School Administrators, opening in Atlantic City Feb. 26, was announced by Ferrenbach. In compliance with the board's vote, he included himself and also chose Vice-President John J. Sheahan and three former presidents, Dr. Francis C. Sullivan, James J. Fitzgerald and Dr. Solon Cameron. The board appropriated $200 each for their expenses, in the hope they could have the convention brought to St. Louis next year.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY WORK

The Children's Aid Society, a United Charities agency, provided full maintenance and care in foster homes for 655 children in St. Louis and the county during 1937, its secretary, Herschel Alt, reported yesterday.

The number was 39 fewer than the year before. The number of children newly accepted for care during the year was 112, less than half the total for the year before. Alt said the money available to the society in recent years has been less than half of what would be required to meet the full need. Its expenditures last year were $126,539, of which $107,397 was received from United Charities.

CO-OPERATIVE MEDICINE AND MEDICAL SOCIETY

Public Service Co. Employes' Mutual Benefit Association Under Investigation.

The Employes' Mutual Benefit Association of the Public Service Co., whose 4000 members pay $1 a month for medical and hospital care, is one of several health associations under inquiry by the St. Louis Medical Society.

Chief complaint against the Public Service Co. is that the corporation, rather than the employes' group, is practicing medicine. Attempts by the Medical Society to examine the books of the Employes' Mutual Benefit Association have been politely ignored, Dr. Max J. Bierman, chairman of the Medico-Legal Committee, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday.

The 11 salaried clinic physicians and the 50 doctors who visit ailing members of the association at their homes, are all members of the Medical Society.

How Association Operates.

The employes' association, now in its twenty-fifth year, was formed by a small group who felt they could not get adequate medical care. Now 93.3 per cent of the eligible street car, bus and shop employes are enrolled. The $1 a month which they pay is matched by an equal amount paid by the company.

That not only covers medical and hospital care for members but also medical care for their dependents. Operations performed on wives and children of members are paid for by the association, but not the hospital bills.

Members and their dependents receive care for all medical conditions except maternity cases and venereal diseases. In addition, a $500 benefit is paid on death to survivors of members of the association. The organization also pays $1 a day sick benefit up to 150 days.

Half of the association's income goes to pay medical expenses. The other half covers an insurance policy. The insurance company pays death, sick and injury benefits.

Provision for New Members.

New employes of the Public Service Co. receive physical examinations and an additional examination after a month's work if they wish to join the mutual benefit association. Families of members receive physical examinations each year or oftener if they wish.

When a member or someone in his family becomes ill, a telephone call is made to the association's office at 3903 Park avenue. A physician who has an office in that district is dispatched to the home. He treats the patient or sends him to the clinic. The doctor's bill, $2 for a day call and $3 for a night call, is paid by the association.

If a specialist is needed, the patient is referred to one. His bill, adjusted to the economic level of the patient, is paid by the association. The average salary earned by members of the association is $135 a month.

If a member wishes to go to a physician of his own choice, he may do so but must pay his own bill.

Vaccinations, Inoculations.

During the summer vacation period, children of members receive vaccinations against smallpox and inoculations for typhoid fever and diphtheria. The summer period is also used for tonsils and adenoid operations.

A ward is set aside for the association at St. John's Hospital, with a rate of $14 a week per patient. Those who wish a private room pay an extra charge.

Average age of members has increased from 39 in 1923 to 46 last year because younger employes are the first to be let out as the company's business declines.

Sick and injury benefits totaling $14,216 were paid to 535 members last year. Last year not one member withdrew from the organization and 181 new members enrolled.

During the year 39 members died. They had paid in $7052 and they and their beneficiaries received $23,301.

Chief Surgeon Is Head.

Receiver Henry W. Kiel of the Public Service Co. is ex-officio president of the mutual benefit association, but the actual head is the chief surgeon, who has held that position since the organization was formed. Any complaints are decided by the directors, 13 of whom are appointed by officers of the association and 13 elected by the membership at large. The directors collect dues at each Public Service Co. station.

The Medical Society has asked Attorney-General McKittrick to lend the use of his name for filing of a quo warranto proceeding in the Missouri Supreme Court to test the legal right of the Missouri Pacific Hospital Association, a corporation, to engage in the practice of medicine and surgery in its hospital here. The society also has under investigation physicians co-operating with the Wage Earners' Health Association.

EDEN ON DICTATORS AND DEMOCRACIES

Says Friendship Between Two Systems Must Not Become Impossible.

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, England, Feb. 12.—Friendship "between democracies and dictatorships must not become impossible," Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told a rally of the Junior Imperial League today.

"We do not wish to see a lasting cleavage of the democracies ranging themselves against dictatorships," he said, while at the same time acknowledging wide difference in purposes of the two political systems.

Eden conspicuously avoided specific discussion of Europe's current problems, but he criticised "pessimism and fatalism," asserting there was "no reason for pessimism."

"Amid the shrill conflict of rival ideologies our peoplie hold to a middle course," he went on. "Neither extreme makes an appeal to us."

He cautioned against any assumption by other countries that "we are decadent." "Wrong deductions about this country have done great harm in the past," he said. "They can do still greater harm in the future."

Praising the League of Nations ideal, Eden said that "disappointment after disappointment would seem to have weakened the fabric of the League but its foundations remain—its spirit is inspiring us more and more today."

There have been newspaper reports of division in the Cabinet on policy toward Italy. Early friendship talks were forecast last week, but the Daily Express says today the Cabinet is in disagreement, that "Prime Minister Chamberlain wants to expedite matters" but Eden "thinks perhaps more haste the less speed."

Eden is understood to have made withdrawal of Italians with the insurgent army in Spain a condition for resumption of Anglo-Italian friendship.

TRUSTEES DECIDE TO RAZE ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY HALL

Rebuilding Would Have Cost $250,000 Request for New Structure Expected.

By the Associated Press.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Feb. 12.—A request to the Legislature for a special appropriation for a new University of Illinois campus building was expected today to result from the decision of the University trustees to dismantle University Hall.

The old structure, closed as unsafe Jan. 24 after plaster and steel beams fell in a classroom, could not be rebuilt for less than $250,000, the trustees announced.

The trustees decided to raze the building after hearing the report of W. S. Wolfe of Detroit, special engineer employed by the board to make a structural survey of the building.

The proposed new building would be used mainly for classroom purposes.

Alumni leaders have discussed a million-dollar Illini Union building on the present site of University Hall, a proposal which may come before alumni directors in a meeting March 2.

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY
JOHN G. NEIHARDT

PERFECTION WAS HER JINX

THIS PROUD HEART. By Pearl S. Buck. (Reynal & Hitchcock, New York.)

"THIS PROUD HEART," Pearl Buck's first novel with a plot laid outside China, proves conclusively that her gift is not limited to the portrayal of Oriental life. Her material is human nature, and, contrary to the modern trend, her characters are of a stature that makes them worthy of sympathetic study. Such a one is her present heroine, whose only fault lay in her humbly realized superiority to all about her.

As a little girl Susan Gaylord had wept from loneliness to hear people call her "a strange child." As she grew older, she learned to dread the admiration, humbly or querulously given, which set her apart from her friends and family. But she knew herself to be capable of all things, and as she went about the keeping of her husband Mark's house, the making of a dress or the modeling of a head in clay, she sang exultantly, "Oh, that will be glory for me!" But soon she found that from Mark she must hide her joy in sculpture, as from David Barnes, her teacher, she must conceal her contentment in being Mark's wife and housekeeper. Nevertheless, when Mark died of typhoid, he died in bewildered unhappiness because he had not been able to possess her completely, artist as well as woman.

Blake Kinnaird, whom she later married, asked of her only passionate love, and, himself an artist, resented her greater talent. Willing, as always, to compromise with the inadequacies of her loved ones, Susan sacrificed herself in many ways to make him happy, but deny her desire to carve and model she would not, with the inevitable result that they separated. And Susan, who was capable of so many things, found herself forced by the mediocrity of those about her into a narrower scope. "Women were not her close friends because she did what they did and too much besides." Her sister had never loved her because of her overshadowing perfection. Her little daughter shrank from her embraces "because her own slight warmth was not enough for her mother's too rich loving." She had been too much for Mark and Blake and David Barnes. "She was too much for everyone, and none could fill her and each knew it and went away."

Because, like Maugham's "Of Human Bondage," such a novel must be largely autobiographical, it is deeply moving. But it also appeals so strongly to the mind that the first half, at least, is as intriguing as a detective novel. Uncannily, we learn to apprehend Susan's changes of mood before we are told of them. When she descends from her attic at the end of a day of absorbing work, we feel with her the melancholy need of human companionship. We know the exact moment when, satiated with art, she will plunge into her housekeeping and when, satisfied in her need for homely tasks, she will return to artistic creation. The author has succeeded even in imparting Susan's tactual sensations when fingering the object which she will reproduce, and also the tempo and shock of the sculptor's mallet swinging down on the chisel.

Pearl Buck's style is more strong than beautiful, but the story has an emotional surge, quite independent of style, which carries it swiftly toward a conclusion of the heroic proportions and inevitability of classic tragedy.

The Strangeness Of Life

BURMESE SILVER. By Edward Thompson. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

HERE is an adventure story with a difference, although the plot in outline is not remarkable. With 18 months to live, Clive Powell resigns from the Indian Civil Service in order to seek out an old friend discharged from that service years earlier, now Raja Gabriel, chief of a nation of head-hunters in northeast Burma. The journey itself is difficult, and upon arrival in Buddhawbe, Powell walks in on an intrigue which involves the treasure in silver and jade to be found in Raja Gabriel's hills.

This, on the surface, is an ordinary situation, but Mr. Thompson is not an ordinary writer. What competent author of adventure tales would neglect the opportunities offered him by the thrills of that perilous journey? Yet this author's version of it flows as smoothly as a description of a quiet stroll around the block. The difficulties are slurred over, the emphasis is always diverted from outward dangers to the inward experiences of the man Powell. In the same manner, throughout the book this remarkable Mr. Thompson deliberately understates the thrills, "spoils" his effects.

For one observes after a while that he has not intended to write a thriller at all. "Burmese Silver" is the story of Clive Powell who has 18 months to live. Like a philosopher who ornaments his desk with a human skull, to remind him always of the great fact of death, Powell carries about with him through all his adventures the mental image of a death's head; and the skull is his own. To such a man, physical adventure is nothing, his inner life everything. So, to Powell, it is not the difficulty of the journey to Buddhawbwe that matters, but his friendship with Gabriel. What is important is not that the silver and jade are saved for the empire, but that Powell's own integrity is saved for himself.

That is the attitude which makes this book remarkable, giving to every line the flavor of life's strangeness. And Mr. Thompson, while he seems to be writing a tale of fantastic adventure, is actually engaged in exposing those realities whch lie behind the casual masks of living.

A Nightmarish World

IT IS a strange and extravagant world that Edmund Gilligan creates in "Boundary Against Night"; a world peopled with tortured souls given to declamations of violence and beauty, punctuated by bursts of loud, ironic laughter. There is a nightmarish quality in the novel, and like a nightmare its irrelevancies seem fraught with some frightful and important symbolism.

The characters are more representative of forces in a distintegrating society than actual people. There is Coventry, blinded by the war, a Boston arsitocrat, kindly, intelligent, wandering forlorn in a dissolving world, with his love for Laura, vaguely drawn but altogether lovely, his only sure tie to life. There is Hargedon, the handsome, lewd cop, driven by desperation into a police strike. There is Napoleon, a police captain, filled with a brooding love for his fellow men, tortured by visions of a moral darkness coming upon the world. There is Felix who brought his amputated arm home from France to bury in the family cemetery. There is a horde of prostitutes, petty criminals, frightened shopkeepers, and there is a pursed-lipped, meager-voiced Calvin Coolidge bobbing like a balloon on a thin string of platitudes above the incredible din caused by a handful of men leaving their beats.

"Boundary Against Night" is a powerful book filled with scenes of eerie beauty, but one could wish that all the characters weren't quite so enigmatic, and that a few people were left to die in their beds. Edmund Gilligan has a great deal to tell and a style that sometimes rises to magnificence and sometimes trembles on the verge of bathos. Despite its lack of discipline, its insufficient character development, this is a first novel of importance and significance.

When a Lady Was King

WHEN Elinor Mordaunt, indefatigable traveler, came by ketch to the Trobriands, cannibal islands, the word went around that the king of all the "dim-dims" (white people) had arrived, and they called her Sinabada, which means lady king. It was all right with her. She could order the cannibals around, and that was something, but there were drawbacks — the many pigs that they brought as presents. There was already a king, but he was getting old. A discussion arose as to which should reign. It came down to a question of stature. The two stood back to back, and Mrs. Mordaunt won by half an inch and was acclaimed Sinabada. The regular king sulked a little, but was placated with two tins of bully-beef and a pink handkerchief. To show that there were no hard feelings on his part, he gave the lady king two white fowls and a pig.

Going about among the islands, Mrs. Mordaunt had as porters 20 jailbirds borrowed from the Resident, all murderers. She might have had thieves, but she did not care to risk them, thieving being a habit and murder, for the most part, an incident. Crowned with flowers, Sinabada reigned over the 60 islands for a couple of months, attended by the 20 murderers, until she grew tired of reigning. Then she went away.

The only thing she regrets about it all is the loss of a pink pearl. On one of the islands she met a Turkish pearl-buyer whose wife was very ill. Mrs. Mordaunt nursed her and saved her life. In gratitude the Turk gave her a magnificent pearl. Lacking a better place for it, she sewed it into one of her garters and lost it while pushing through the bush next day.

There was another loss when a far too tidy steward threw overboard the precious orchid plants she had collected in the New Guinea and Dutch Islands. But always she gained more than she lost, for the book that she calls her autobiography, beginning with her childhood in England, is packed with pearls and orchids of remembrance, collected in her journeyings by land and sea.

Remembering her afflictions, Mrs. Mordaunt concludes that nature never intended her to go gallivanting about the world alone, but it is not to be doubted that she will keep on going to the end. Closing her story, she says she is going away, but only to Africa, and will be back tomorrow.

Tomorrow all the stay-at-homes, in whose stead she journeys, will be waiting to welcome her.

Two Novelettes By Ferber

NOBODY'S IN TOWN. By Edna Ferber. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York.)

ONE of the most American of writers, Edna Ferber has always been primarily interested in the heroic and romantic past of our country. She has envisioned the development of the nation in terms of the pioneer tradition. The flux and change present in today's civilization, therefore, have bewildered Miss Ferber and made her decidedly pessimistic.

This attitude of mind is most obvious in the second of the two novelettes in this volume. The theme of "Trees Die at the Top" is the general unworthiness of the effete and capricious modern generation which is a beneficiary of the struggles and labors of valiant forebears. A trip to California made by Jared Content and his family upon a luxurious fast train is skillfully compared with a cross-country journey undertaken in 1849 by Jared's grandfather. The contrast of the characters of yesterday's and today's travelers is certainly pointed. The effect of the whole, however, is marred by a decidedly acid tone of moralizing upon the deficiencies of the young and by a one-sided exposition of both scenes.

A less prejudiced and more significant presentation of life is made in the first story, "Nobody's in Town." After a scanting reference to the superficial society women who believe that "nobody that counts" can possibly stay in New York in the summer, Miss Ferber forgets her rancor in her interest in the mysterious existences of the great city's submerged thousands. Here is a series of vivid character sketches of a group of people whose lives by chance touch one another: the Italian garbage man on his wedding eve, the old Irishman proud of his job at the water works, the Negro maid who supports a Harlem genius, the scheming vegetable dealer, and the janitor's daughter playing at being a romantic lady. In the tense, hot atmosphere of the summer streets emerge the dramas which are hidden beneath the commonplace exterior of the city.

In both of these novelettes Miss Ferber has shown a decided skill as a painter of miniatures. The brief flashes given of the pioneer venture tell the story of the heroic journey better than many a full-length novel could have done, while the portraits in "Nobody's in Town" are skillfully suggestive, showing the struggles and aspirations of whole lives. It is not in ironic comment or appraisal of the contemporary scene that Miss Ferber's strength lies, but rather in the creation of real situations and living characters.

Notable Spanish Novel

THE Spanish civil war has had one important literary result: acquainting American readers with the work of Ramon J. Sender, who has been enthusiastically hailed as one of his country's greatest contemporary writers. Four of his books, all dealing with war and revolution in Spain, have appeared in English since the conflict began. Whether the strife portrayed is of the past or the present, all these writings have been freighted with immediate significance.

This time, Mr. Sender goes back to the rebellion of 1873, to portray satirically the dilemma of a sober English liberal when confronted by revolution. Mr. Witt is middle-aged, and married to a Spanish beauty almost a score of years his junior. When the revolt begins at Cartagena, where he has been a consulting engineer for 15 years, Mr. Witt is vaguely sympathetic with the rebels, but remains aloof, watching the fighting from a distance through his field-glasses. Jealousy over his wife's relations with rebel leaders soon compounds his confusion. Until the end, he remains perplexed, repressed, helpless.

The portrait is so patly in keeping with the Spanish loyalists' disappointment over the British Government's actions, in the non-intervention fiasco and otherwise, that it would seem to have been aimed directly at the present situation. This is not the case, however, for the book was completed in November, 1935, some eight months before the civil war began. Mr. Sender's novel thus takes on a prophetic aspect which does credit to his judgment and skill at character analysis. So accurately did he cut the cloth for his "Victorian liberal" that the suit fits the Mr. Witts of today.

It is perhaps easy to read more into the book than the writer intended or could have known. Disregarding its political implications entirely, however, it is still a well-developed character study and a realistic account of war and its bystanders.

He Couldn't Find His Youth

BLACK AND BEAUTIFUL. By Marius Fortie. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

MANY men find their escape from the humdrum reality of modern mechanical civilization in vague wish-dreams pegged to such glamorous names as Samarkand, Tahiti, Zanzibar. Now and then the lure of such faraway places becomes irresistible to a Rimbaud or a Guaguin. Disappointment generally follows. Modern man cannot escape his neuroses by going primitive any more than the chick can go back into the shell. But there may be exceptions.

Marius Fortie seemed such an exception. At the turn of the century he left his native Italy to plunge into the jungles of East Africa. For five years he led his safaris through the wilderness, battled fever, thirst, insects and wild beasts, dealt with suspicious native chiefs and embittered white Government officials, established new trade routes, and planned an economic empire. His best friend was an Ethiopian chieftain; his values and standards became those of the jungle. Then, in a sudden fit of revulsion caused by a woman's chance jest, he cast the whole structure aside, drove his Ethiopian comrade from his camp at the point of a gun, abandoned his plans and his career. The West, the white man's civilization, was calling.

Thirty years later he returned, unsatisfied and unfulfilled by life in America, to search out the few threads that might connect prosaic middle age with glorious youth, to look for his wives and the progeny he had scattered so lavishly, perhaps to die on the trail. Things had changed in the jungle. The old-time safari had given way to railroads and motor trucks; the hard German rule had been exchanged for an officious British mandate; the natives were being ruined by taxation, the men drawn away from their homes to work in mines and on roads, whole villages moved in clumsy efforts at combatting disease and improving administration, domestic and tribal relations snarled by pompous courts whose judges did not understand the language of their petitioners.

Dreams cannot be dreamed again, and the second African experience was in no wise a reliving of the first; still Fortie did not find it particularly disappointing. Many of his children were living, with families of their own; some of his friends survived, growing old in dignity; the adventurous life of the safari held the familiar enchantment. He returned to write this book about his life, and to ask that white men keep their fingers out of the lives of the blacks. It is unfortunate that the logic of history and economics will make his plea ineffectual.

In Ancient Rome As Now

MARC ANTONY, His World and His Contemporaries. By Jack Lindsay. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

TWO books of recent issue illustrate again the old saying: the more things change, the more they are the same. The setting is Rome; the period that of Caesar and Augustus; the authors, John Buchan, otherwise Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, and Jack Lindsay, an Australian of classic bent. Both work from the same set of facts. Both present evidence to support substantially the same conclusions, but their two books could hardly be more different.

Buchan ignores no data, his reasoning processes are accurate, his intuitions recommend themselves, and he remains urbanely liberal, inclined to the Right; of the two, he is the more content to let the story speak for itself. Lindsay, equally conscientious, is definitely of the Left. He makes a Marxian synthesis, and if it lacks material in spots, he is frankly not averse to trotting out his inferences and arguments even to the third and fourth degree.

It is impossible to read of Rome when the Republic was dying and the Empire was still to come without recognizing fairly detailed analogies with conditions today. Some of the more florid prophets of 1938 have alluded to the fact. Briefly, the wealthy become wealthier and more powerful while the poor grow poorer and more desperate. The machinery of government falls so far short of meeting the needs and easing the social pressures of the times that the question is up of making it do or trying something else. Continuing, one might pose Henry George with the Gracchi or Dr. Townsend with Clodius. It would be forcing the parallel to match the master politicians, Caesar and Roosevelt, or, for that matter, the orators, Marc Antony and John L. Lewis; but the general correspondence of the patterns of then and now, established by Buchan and Lindsay, cannot fail to impress.

Buchan centers on Augustus, avowedly to demonstrate that he was no mere successor of his great uncle, but a man of solid contributions of his own—a genius not of any extreme, but of the golden mean of commonsense. Lindsay is more interested in Antony. Both agree, albeit unoriginally, that the record cuts Cicero down to size, leaving him little but his rhetoric, and both agree that neither Caesar nor Augustus can by any stretch be imagined into a Mussolini.

Of the two, Buchan provides the easier, pleasanter reading, but Lindsay is the more provocative and stimulating.

Rich Experience, Rare Skill

THE SWORD AND THE ROSE. By A. W. Smith. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

SINCE Mr. Smith is a Sandhurst graduate, was wounded in France, served as a volunteer with Denikin's White Army in Russia, and then rejoined his old regiment for several years of duty in India, it is not surprising that he should have some interesting tales in his knapsack. In addition, he is one of those rare individuals who can write intelligently, interestingly and skillfully of things based on rich experiences. That is proved in the first three paragraphs. There isn't a dull sentence or an overwritten one in the 464 pages devoted to his story of the officers and men of the Herefords, famous British regiment of the line.

The tale opens in the officers' mess, where even the candles are "soldierly, lean and erect, like Files on Parade," and knives, forks and spoons are "rigidly dressed by the right." The officers, just back from the Army of Occupation in Germany, are discussing their impending tour of duty in India. Outstanding among them are: Col. Plant, a holdover from Boer War days; Maj. Horder, truculent and hard-drinking martinet, who has no friends; Maj. Vivoro, big game hunter; Capt. Reyne, gentleman-officer with a handsome income; Capt. Clamp, who won his saber on a Flanders field; Lieut. Boykett, who fooled the medical board and stayed despite the head wound that menaces his sanity; Lieut. Mansfield, most promising of the subalterns; Lieut. Pribram, debt-ridden cad and shirker.

The story is without conventional plot, and yet it is more than a series of episodes. The interest lies in the way the regiment ties together the lives of the officers, their families and the men. Each is presented in a most convincing manner. For this reason it is quite easy to see why Vivoro, with his high ideals, chooses death from the claws and fangs of a tiger after his friend's wife has led him into an affair with her. Boykett, striving to carry on, comes to an unhappy end. Pribram, after making a donkey of himself, goes down to obscurity.

Horder meets death and Mansfield distinguishes himself in a thrilling fight with tribesmen in the hills. The battle, which is the dramatic highlight of the book, is described with a simple realism unsurpassed by Kipling. The whang of bullets, "spouting gouts of dust into the air" and chipping splinters from the rocks as the Herefords fight for their lives, should make the reader flinch and crawl a little deeper into the protective depths of his armchair.

—Robert Randolph.

He Finally Saw Himself

MEN ARE NOT STARS. By C. A. Millspaugh. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York.)

MR. MILLSPAUGH'S sensitive first novel offers the portrait of an artist as a man—an arrogant, egotistical, and mercurial man—as seen through the eyes of his young son. Daniel O'Riordan, the father, had been an intractable rebel from the beginning of his artistic career. He was in revolt not against conventional technique but modernism. He persisted in executing mammoth historical canvases too huge for ordinary walls and too commonplace (though he believed them too original) for the taste of critics and patrons. The critics, O'Riordan snorted, were blathering idiots. "The world was inimical to Genius. Genius was born to suffer at the hands of men as ordinary mortals were born to suffer at the antenna, spines and barbs of insects." The O'Riordan family accepted implicity the father's estimate of himself.

Each summer the family followed a custom established by O'Riordan before his marriage. They made a tour of the rural regions, the headstrong artist (with difficulty and occasional temperamental outbursts) humbling himself to limn the portraits of people he despised. The proceeds of these excursions insured food for the winter, and, more important, materials for the epic paintings that never attracted the attention of those whose opinions counted. The wife and children were subjected to poverty and ridicule, but their faith in Daniel's genius and its ultimate recognition never diminished. The barn-like studio in Chicago to which they returned each winter was enlivened by the visits of other artists and writers, some successful, others embittered by the shadow of failure.

O'Riordan was sustained through many successive disappointments by his overweening ego, but as he grew older his doubts multiplied and he learned that "men are not stars or sunlight; they, like that moon, need outer loveliness to shine on them." Desperately, when he sensed his family's increasing disillusionment, he sought that "outer loveliness" he needed to illumine his own art and life. When he at last admitted that his talent had never been more than second-rate, he achieved victory through apparent defeat and earned once more the respect and affection of his family.

Mr. Millspaugh's writing has an engaging Celtic fluidity about it, skillfully combining simplicity and poetic fervor. A few of the minor characters, such as the Duchess and Mabel Geers, are slightly caricaturized, but all the O'Riordans are convincing and engaging. They deserve a place among the memorable families of fiction.

THE JAPANESE PREDICAMENT

JAPAN DEFIES THE WORLD. By James Augustin Brown Scherer. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

DR. SCHERER, former president of the California Institute of Technology, has spent much time in Japan. Fresh from a Virginia college, he first went there 46 years ago as English instructor in the Japanese Imperial Government School at Saga. He wrote his first book on Japan just after the turn of the century, and he has been writing and lecturing about the Japanese more or less continuously ever since.

This equipment would seem to qualify Dr. Scherer for a timely discussion of Japan's place in the sun, now that the eyes of the world are anxiously on the Orient again. In any case, a report by him now is entitled to a thoughtful reading.

The gist of the author's thesis is that the people of Japan have been sold out by a small group of Fascists within the military who captured control of the Government and now run the war machinery to suit themselves. This Fascist force, he informs the reader, was at work through the shogunate for 650 years up to 1868, when it was temporarily overthrown in a civil war, which restored the Emperor to nominal power. Today it is again in full control, the hidden Mussolini being Gen. Jiro Minami, Governor-General of Korea.

If Gen. Minami is the villain of the piece, it also has its hero in the eyes of Dr. Scherer. He is Gen. Jinzaburo Mazaki, a friend of the author, who is described as representing the Japanese military at its best. A firm Emperor-worshiper who has refused to bow before the Fascist-industrialists, this exemplary leader was punished by the plotting minority which saddled him with responsibility for the uprising in the army two years ago this month.

So long as the Fascist clique controls and the Mitsui, Mitsubishi, Sumitiomo and Yashuda families maintain their monopoly of manufacturing in general and of munitions making in particular, so Scherer's thesis runs, the ordinary people will be oppressed and the Japanese war machine will threaten the peace of the world.

Many informed students of internal Japan would find this analysis less than adequate. In the first place, the long reign of the shoguns was feudal rather than Fascist. Second, the breakdown of the military is not so simple as it is made to seem. There are many splits, each group differing from the others in the extent and rapidity with which it would push forward Japanese conquest. Third, the villain and the hero cannot be so certainly pointed out. Among Mazaki's followers, for example, are those whose intense urge to nationalistic expansion is obviously a menace to Japan. Again, the Japanese people habitually accept what is thrust upon them. The inference that popularly achieved release is in the offing is hardly justified by history or present conditions.

But, read with this yardstick at hand, Dr. Scherer's book has its good uses. It is written engagingly, and there is a wealth of first-hand reporting of the author's varied experiences with the Japanese mind. (Emperor-worship, suicide, the geishas, the peasants, the controlling families are treated in separate chapters.)

And there can be no doubt as to the author's intentions. They are the best. He hates organized butchery and yearns for a world from which it will be banished. That is why he is stirred by what he finds in "his" Japan.

—Irving Dilliard.

A Distinguished History

PREPARED under the sponsorship of the Virginia History Committee in response to a demand created by the restoration of Williamsburg and other historic shrines, this work has had the benefit of unusual facilities in research and collaboration. The scholarly attainments of the author, whose previous works include "The Founding of Maryland" and "American History and Government," his association with the Yale University Press, and the fact that each chapter was printed in advance for international review, guarantee the high authoritativeness of the work. Its 600 pages are meticulously annotated and indexed.

Dr. Andrews traces the evolution of American government, in the framework of Virginia, from the grant to Sir Walter Raleigh to the establishment of the first colonial Legislature in 1619. Thereafter the commonwealth emerges a guiding force in the American scene, as colonial hardships and desperate military struggle give place to economic and cultural development, and these in turn to the tragedy of civil war which Virginia struggled so valiantly to avert. It is here and in the account of the dreadful Reconstruction days that the author, while no less the historian, becomes perhaps too feelingly the advocate. Bringing the record down to the present, he shows Virginia in the forefront of political experiment in her efforts to improve local government by introduction of city and county manager plans, and reviews the progress made in educational and health programs.

Scattered through the book are sidelights upon current situations which will pique the reader's interest. Farmers of today, for example, will chuckle, reading of the colonial debate over "cessation" or "stint" production of tobacco, when it was asserted that "the Exorbitancy of Planting hath swelld the Quantitie so much above the Consumption that . . . the Planter is noe way able to live by his Labour." To this view Lord Baltimore objected that "cessation" would deprive the commonalty "of their liberty, which they conceive is their birthright as Englishmen, of planting what quantity they please." Verily, there is nothing new under the sun! Some may be startled to learn that George Washington, as President, signed a bill for reasons he thought valid, while expressing doubts as to its constitutionality.

Notice of this work may be closed fittingly with the author's comment upon Jefferson's political philosophy, ringing with a prophetic fervor for our own day. Jefferson regarded "nothing in law or legal procedure, however buttressed with precedents or ancient in practice, sacrosanct, if on the one hand, it tended to work injustice to individuals or groups, or, on the other, grant special favors to individuals or groups."

—Marie Bliss.

The Profession Of Thieving

THE PROFESSIONAL THIEF. By a Professional Thief. Annotated and Interpreted by Edwin H. Sutherland. (The University of Chicago Press, Chicago.)

OFFERED as a sociological textbook, the first eight chapters of this unusually readable volume are given over to a description of the profession of thievery by the late Chic Conwell, pickpocket, shoplifter and confidence man. In the underworld, Conwell informs us, thief is an "honorific term" applied to persons of special skill and training who make their living by "grifting (stealing) by non-violent methods." As so defined, thieves are responsible for only some 10 per cent of all robberies. The rest are the work of amateur and psychopathic "grifters" who have no status in the profession.

Police and prosecutors, we are informed, make their records by convicting "boot and shoe (amateur or psychopathic) grifters." The professional thief, frequently arrested, is rarely convicted, for the reason that he has the protection of the "Fix," a person or persons, found in every city, whose full-time job it is to weaken some link in the long chain of the law between arrest and conviction.

To the thief, the law is a system of "predatory control, a social disorganization." According to Conwell, most police are "burglar coppers" who "simply do not want to catch thieves except to get some money from them." Society is the thief's bread and butter, and he rejoices in its welfare because it contributes to his. His principal rackets "are the cannon (picking pockets), the heel (sneak-thieving from stores, banks and offices), the boost (shoplifting), penny-weighing (stealing from jewelry stores by substitution), laying paper (passing illegal checks, money orders and other papers), and the shake (extortion from persons engaged in, or about to engage in, illegal acts)."

Prof. Sutherland concludes with a discussion of thievery as a "social institution—a group way of life" with its own "techniques, codes, status, traditions, consensus and organization." He insists that there is no such thing as "organized crime" in the tabloid sense, though thieves do work in "mobs" of two or three and do assist each other with tips, loans, and so forth. He traces the genesis of thievery to the collapse of feudalism, pointing out that the ensuing industrial system has left an ever growing "leisure class without money," dependent on its wits for a livelihood.

Stocks Move into Higher Ground Beset on Advance by Frequent Profit-Cashing and Slack Trade

Carrier Shares Provide Backbone of Upturn, Interest Being Heightened by Reports of Probable Early Rate Increase Decision.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Stocks edged their way into higher ground this week, beset on the advance by frequent profit cashing and lack of trading interest.

Carrier shares furnished the backbone of the upturn, interest in them heightened by grapevine reports the Interstate Commerce Commission would soon render a decision on rate increases. Wall Street was inclined to believe it would be favorable.

The march ahead was slow, with transfers averaging less than 700,000 shares daily. Traders were apparently awaiting clearer portents of business and political trends, and held commitments to a minimum.

Sleepy as the market was, brokers were heartened by the fact volume tended to accelerate on the advances and die away when selling intervened. There were few occasions when offerings threatened to attain any important figures.

Total sales during the week amounted to 3,052,051 shares, compared with 12,777,920 a week ago and 12,777,920 a year ago. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 30,822,892 shares, compared with 84,474,646 a year ago and 95,132,264 two years ago.

Rail Bonds Advance.

Railroad liens advanced steadily in an otherwise lethargic bond market, with some of the gains in the secondary group running 10 points or more. Domestic corporates managed to edge ahead, while U. S. Government issues finished about where they began.

Railroad stocks gained 1.2 points in the week as shown by the Associated Press index of 15 rail stocks. The next best gainers were the industrials, 30 issues being up 1.1, while the 15 utilities dropped .1. The total 60 stocks advanced .8.

In the bond averages, all groups were higher for the week, the 20 rails, as in the stock section, gained most, the advance being 2.3 points. Ten industrials advanced .3, ten utilities, .7, 10 foreign bonds .4 and 10 low yield bonds .5.

Basic commodities tended to slope downward, the Associated Press index of wholesale staple prices breaking through to its lowest level since November, 1934. In the futures markets wheat and corn were about unchanged to a little lower, while cotton pulled ahead a trifle. Domestic lead and zinc were pushed down in the face of unfavorable January statistics.

Although the securities marts failed in action, the week provided a crowded budget of news normally calculated to affect prices.

Of chief importance among the headlines was the new wage agreement between U. S. Steel Corp. and the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, branch of the C I O.

Providing for the present scale of hours and wages, the pact left the way open for changes with a stipulation for new negotiations on 10 days' notice by either side.

Steel Price Is Cut.

Another development affecting steel was a slash of $4 a ton in the price of certain sheet products used by the automobile industry.

The usual indices were of unconclusive character.

Railroad freight car loadings for the week ended Feb. 5 were higher than seasonally expected. On the other hand, electric power output dropped to a new 1937-38 low. Retail trade, as reported by Dun & Bradstreet, increased 2 to 8 per cent over the preceding period, but was unchanged to 3 per cent below that for the like period of 1937.

Auto Output Change.

Automobile output, far under 1937, was up less than seasonally, but manufacturers were represented as revising to higher levels their 1938 production estimates as the used car situation eased perceptibly.

Stocks of crude oil and gasoline were boosted, the gasoline reserves going to a record peak.

Steel mill operations rose to 30.7 per cent of capacity from 30.5 per cent.

STOCKS STEADY AT MONTREAL

MONTREAL, Feb. 12.—The stock market maintained a steady keel at today's opening. Trade was light but sentiment was improved.

Closing of most United States markets tended to restrict volume to small lots. Unchanged to firmer prices showed for Canadian Pacific, Montreal Power, Canadian Car preferred, International Nickel, General Steel Wares and Quebec Power. Off a bit were Canadian Car common and Imperial Oil.

EXCHANGES CLOSED IN OBSERVANCE OF LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.

THERE was a general cessation of business throughout the financial district today in observance of Lincoln's birthday. All security and commodity markets were closed.

The St. Louis Stock Exchange and Merchants' Exchange were closed because of absence of trading at New York and Chicago.

There was no session of the St. Louis Butter, Egg and Poultry Exchange.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY UP FOR SECOND WEEK

Steel Output, Cotton Manufacturing and Total Freight Carloadings Gain.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Industrial activity turned up this week for the second time since the recession started last summer.

The gain, however, was moderate. The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index rose to 70.4 per cent of the 1929-30 average from 70.2 last week and compared with 99.5 a year ago.

Steel mill operations, cotton manufacturing and total freight carloadings were the principal gainers. Automobile production and electric power output, after adjustment for seasonal variations, slumped to new lows for the past two years or more.

The improvement in the movement of railroad freight resulted largely from a sharp rise in shipments of less-than-carlot industrial items. Full carlots in the miscellaneous classification, however, advanced little from last week's low level.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted components based on the latest available statistics and with 1929-30 as 100, compared as follows:

	Latest week.	Prev. week.	Year ago.

NEW CROP COTTON OVER 9C LAST WEEK

Best Level Since Last September Reached Before Realizing Sales.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Trade views on progress of the conference report on the farm bill through the House and Senate accounted for fluctuations of more than $1.50 a bale in cotton during the past week. There was no session Saturday.

Sharp rallies carried new crop positions above 9 cents and to the best levels since September before enough realizing and Southern selling appeared to cause partial reactions. May contracts, which had advanced from 8.54 to 8.89, closed Friday at 8.81 against 8.58 a week ago.

Rapid House action in adopting the conference report inspired general buying on expectations the provisions of the bill would apply to the 1938 crop in holding acreage down to production of about 10,700,000 bales.

Even more trade attention was given to the Smith amendment to the report, designed to hasten the payment of 2 cents per pound of the bounty due growers on their 1937 production when compliance with the 1938 administration program is proven.

Active March liquidation prior to first notice day on Feb. 23 continued and open interest in the near month was reduced by about 185,000 bales during the week, leaving 320,000 bales still outstanding in that delivery.

COTTON AT NEW ORLEANS CLOSES 5 TO 8 POINTS UP

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 12.—Cotton futures opened two to four points net higher here today under trade and speculative buying induced by the belief that congressional action on the farm bill would be completed early next week.

March contracts opened at 8.90c, May 8.96c, July 9.03c, October 9.10c, December 9.11c and January 9.13c.

Towards the end of the first half-hour the market was steady, four to five points net higher on active positions.

Cotton futures closed at net advances of 5 to 8 points. March, 8.94; May, 9.01; July, 9.08; Oct., 9.13; Dec., 9.14; Jan., 9.16.

Prospects for prompt passage of the farm bill were the main influences behind the better feeling.

DOLLAR WEAKENS IN EXCHANGE MARKET

Unfavorable U. S. Business and Internal Crisis in Germany Are Cited.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The weakness of the dollar during the week, in comparison with leading European currencies, was believed in foreign exchange circles to be due to two widely-divergent factors—the unfavorable business news in the United States and the internal political crisis in Germany.

For some time, the movement of currencies has been against the dollar. The recession has revived much speculation abroad as to whether Washington would again become inflation-minded. There has been repatriation of foreign funds formerly placed in this country, particularly in guilders and sterling.

On the political side, the German crisis has lessened European tension over war somewhat. The dispute in the Reichswehr between the old-line military leadership and the Nazis has been harmful to the development of German influence.

The upward trend of the franc, against the dollar, was also helped out by widespread covering by "short" interests.

Cotton Trade Restricted.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 12.—Holidays in other markets restricted business in cotton futures today. Trading was mostly of a professional character with little change in values. Final prices were unchanged to one point net higher.

Commodity Prices Dip to Lowest Level in More Than Three Years

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Commodity prices slid deeper into new low ground this week, slumping to the lowest level in more than three years.

Agricultural staples alone, under the leadership of cotton, were able to breast the receding tide. Moderate declines in wheat and corn were more than offset by gains in oats, rye and cotton.

Every other important commodity group chalked up a new low for the year.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 important wholesale staples dropped to 71.12 per cent of the 1926 average from 71.73 last week and compared with 90.05 a year ago.

Livestock Prices Mixed.

Livestock quotations were mixed; cattle dipped sharply as prospective supplies loomed larger, while lambs were marked up fractionally. Hogs were unchanged.

After a modest upturn the week before, non-ferrous metals reacted as zinc and lead producers slashed prices in an effort to scare up new business. Lead quotations were cut twice, when the first reduction failed to bring in any orders. Antimony was pushed up slightly.

Textiles continued to recede. Although cotton cloth held at its recent level, wool gave ground as inventories mounted and sales dried up. Silk nudged ahead a fraction.

Other industrial raw materials were uneven; recessions in turpentine and linseed oil outweighing upturns in rubber and bituminous coal.

Commodities destined for the housewife's market basket were cheaper. Sugar, cocoa and butter dipped, while eggs and coffee moved up.

What Index Shows.

JUNIOR GOLD STOCKS HIGHER AT TORONTO

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, Feb. 12.—A group of the junior golds stepped into the stock market spotlight today, moving in volume at higher prices while other groups moved sluggishly. The holiday on the New York market had a curtailing effect on the trade in the industrials and the interlisted leaders remained around Friday's closing prices. In the penny golds there was a turnover of 300,000 shares in the first hour.

Omega, Augite, Maralgo and Bankfield gained 3 to 10 cents. Bard Rock stood out among the medium price issues, advancing 10 cents on a trade of more than 50,000 shares.

Changes in the senior golds were limited to small fractions. The close was up for Pickle Crow, O'Brien, Little Long Lac, Kerr Addison, Leitch, Kirkland Hudson and Uchi.

Consolidated Smelters registered a point decline and International Nickel and Noranda were steady.

WASHINGTON BUSINESS NOTES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Department store collections on open accounts dropped from 47.1 in November to 45.4 per cent in December, and installment account collections dropped from 16.6 to 16.4 per cent, the Commerce Department reports.

The Census Bureau reports shipments of floor and wall tile increased 15.5 per cent in quantity and 17.7 per cent in value during 1937 to 47,604,204 square feet, worth $15,641,143.

Because of a year-end slump to 22.7 per cent, manufacturers of commercial steel castings averaged operations at 61.3 per cent of capacity in 1937, a decline of 2.2 points from 1936, the Census Bureau says.

NON-FERROUS METAL GROUP TONE EASIER

Lead and Zinc Prices Cut During Week—Export Copper Fairly Steady.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The metals trade experienced a busy week, highlighted by the amicable settlement of the wage conference in steel and the easier tone in the non-ferrous group.

Lead and zinc were reduced ¼ and ½ cents a pound, respectively, and there were rumors the domestic copper price might be further reduced unless there was a decided pickup in demand.

Export copper held relatively steady for a time, reflecting armament buying and purchases against currency depreciation, but later the foreign market eased also. The latter was coupled with the reaction at London, the German situation and the new Cabinet crisis in Rumania. The domestic copper price was held at 10 cents by both producers and smelters.

Lead experienced two successive reductions of ¼ cent a pound, the second after the first failed to stimulate buying interest. With stocks accumulating there were intimations that possibly a third reduction might be made to revive consumer interest.

Zinc declined ¼ cent, reflecting the rapidly increasing stocks and poor inquiry. January statistics showed an increase of nearly 24,000 tons in smelters' stocks, following a rise of more than 22,000 tons in December.

Tin prices fluctuated irregularly over narrow limits and finished the week net unchanged. Trade opinion was that the international committee at its meeting next Friday would announce a reduction of 5 to 10 per cent in export quotas.

Antimony was unchanged in a routine market.

BAR GOLD, SILVER AND MONEY

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Money ½ per cent. Discount rates: Short and 3-month bills 9-16 per cent.

MONTREAL, Feb. 12.—Silver futures opened five points off. Bids: March, 44.60; May, 44.50; July, 44.30.

Montreal Prices Off Slightly.

MONTREAL, Feb. 12.—Stock prices turned slightly downward at the close of the short session today. Losses, however, were narrow on a dull market.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 12.—Apathy of buyers, together with the holiday in the United States markets resulted in the smallest volume of business in Winnipeg Grain Exchange pit in many months today. Light outside selling sent futures ⅛@⅜c lower at the close, May $1.27½, July $1.19 and October 99⅝@¾c.

Dealings were concentrated in the October position, but trading generally was at a standstill. Easier overseas markets and unsettled weather conditions in the United States winter wheat belt, traders said, virtually drove away any hope of reviving investment demand in the wheat pit.

Although Germany was reported inquiring for United States hard winters and United Kingdom millers were said to have purchased 260,000 bushels of white Pacific wheat today, demand for Canadian grains was negligible.

Cash wheat and coarse grain demand was entirely lacking. Spreads were unchanged.

WHEAT CLOSES LOWER IN LIVERPOOL MARKET

Liberal Offerings of Australian Grain and Week-End Realizing Factors.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 12.—Opening quiet and lower in the wake of disappointing American markets, wheat futures receded further today under liberal offerings of Australian wheat and week-end realizing. Prices at the close were ⅜@½ penny lower.

Demand was absent despite the sale of two River Plata cargoes to Germany late yesterday and one white Pacific cargo today to a local miller.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The United States dollar recovered ⅛ of a cent in terms of the pound today. At 5.01 15-16 to the pound in final trading the unit compared with 5.02¼ for sterling in New York over night.

French francs were off a little at 151.50 to the pound against 151.31 yesterday.

EXPORTS OF WHEAT FROM AUSTRALIA WORRY TRADERS

U. S. Grain Men Hoped to Get the Business—Prices Are Lower on the Weeks' Business.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Big exports of wheat from Australia to Europe are just now dazing traders the world over, and incidentally are holding United States wheat prices down.

For at least the time being, Australia is harvesting dollars wholesale as a consequence, and American wheat exporters who had expected to fill the bulk of Europe's breadstuff needs at this time find themselves mainly astonished lookers-on, correspondingly out of pocket. The chief suggested reason is that China and Japan are so busy fighting each other that any adequate outlet for Australian wheat in the Orient has not only been made impracticable but has made Australia's wheat prices the cheapest in the world.

Wheat Lower on Week.

Faced by such a difficulty, Chicago wheat specialits are emphasizing statements that if importing nations are to maintain the quality of their flour, substantial quantities of hard wheat will be required for mixing with Australians soft varieties, and that United States better quality strong wheats should sooner or later meet with increased demand.

Compared to one week back, Chicago wheat prices at close Friday were ¼@⅜ of a cent lower, corn ¼@⅜ up, oats unchanged to ¼ advance, rye showing from 1⅝ decline to ¼ bulge, and provisions varying from 22 cents setback to 7 cents jump.

Adding to troubles of American exporters of wheat is the fact that the Australian official crop estimate has been increased to 170,000,000 bushels. This is about 10,000,000 bushels larger than preliminary returns and 20,000,000 bushels more than last year. Besides, forecasts now are that India will have the largest wheat crop achieved in several years.

The Moisture Situation.

On the other hand, moisture of late for domestic winter wheat has been almost entirely confined to areas where least needed.

However, the growth period of the crop taken as a whole does not begin for about a month. A majority of traders consequently are inclined to belief that although dust storms may be reported from time to time it is still too early for definite forecasts except that the southwest will start with a great shortage in seasonal precipitation, and will make generous rains imperative if another curtailed crop is to be averted.

Corn values are being lifted a little by lightness of receipts and by unfavorable weather.

Oats tend to follow corn. Rye has not responded well to moderate export buying.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Feb. 12.—There was little action in the future market the past week. The few sales consummated were in the May option and the extreme range held to ½ cent. At the start of the week contracts changed hands at 96 cents and 96¾ cents, then trading came to a standstill until the closing session when sales were made at 95⅞ cents and 96 cents.

In the cash grain market red winter wheat was little changed from the previous week's close. No. 3 ranged from 97¼c @97¾c in the final session, compared with 97½@98c a week ago. Corn strengthened a little, with No. 3 yellow ranging 57¼@59½c, compared with 57¼@58½c the previous week-end.

How Canada Balanced Budget Despite Crop Failure

Sound Banking System.

The more favorable state of undeveloped natural resources in Canada, the greater ease of converting practically untouched reserves into usable wealth, may have had something to do with this. But any informed Canadian comparing the conditions in the two countries is certain to mention that Canada's banks remained sound, with no failures, while those in the United States were crashing on every hand, resulting finally in the closing of all banks by President Roosevelt as one of his first official acts.

A high Government official pointed out to the writer that the bank failures in the United States, and the official limitations of withdrawals, not only wiped out or "froze" a vast amount of reserve purchasing power but also caused a great deal of forced liquidation which further depressed prices. If this condition had existed in Canada, he said, the severity of the depression no doubt would have been intensified.

In an article published in 1932, the Post-Dispatch explained the differences in the banking systems of the two countries and gave the reasons why there had been no failures in Canada. Unity, efficient management and strict governmental supervision were the reasons. There is only one banking system, that authorized by the Federal Government, instead of the dual—national and state—systems in the United States. Instead of a multitude of small, independent banks there are only 10 chartered banks in the Dominion, each having many branches.

These two factors—readily accessible undeveloped natural resources and a sound banking system — are mentioned only as having helped Canada to withstand the shock of the depression. The fact remains that both the Government and the people underwent a severe depression.

Depression in Both Countries.

National income in Canada, what the people received from employment and business, fell from $6,702,000,000 in 1929 to a low of $3,193,000,000 in 1932, being in the latter year just 52.5 per cent of what it was at the peak. In the United States the drop was from $81,034,000,000 in 1929 to $39,545,000,000 in 1933 when it was 48.8 per cent of the peak. For 1937 Canada recovered to $4,900,000,000, standing at 80.7 per cent of 1929, and the United States came back to $67,500,000,000, at 83 per cent of 1929. These figures, which are approximations, are Governmental estimates.

A significant fact, however, is, that Canada's increase in 1937 was 10 per cent above that of 1936, while the corresponding increase in the United States was only 5.5 per cent.

Canada's foreign trade declined from $2,500,000,000 in 1929 to less than one billion dollars in 1932 and again in 1933, a considerable proportion of the reduction being in price rather than in physical volume. For the United States the decline was from about ten billion dollars in 1929 to slightly more than three billion dollars in 1932.

But export trade in the national economy is far more important to Canada than to the United States. Indeed it is vital. For years Canada has normally produced a surplus of about 50 per cent in goods and commodities, this surplus being sold in the world markets. To state it another way, about one-third of the national production has been exported. In the United States exports are only about one-tenth—sometimes less—of the total production, hence the domestic market is relatively more important.

Comparison on Relief.

Unemployment and relief reached huge proportions in Canada. Determination of the exact number of unemployed was difficult here, as it was in the United States. The 1931 census listed as gainfully occupied 3,927,000 persons of the age of 10 or older. At the depth of the depression the Dominion Government was extending relief to 1,500,000 persons. The same proportion in the United States would be about 17,500,000, and actually maximum relief rolls in the United States went somewhat above 20,000,000.

The gain in employment as recovery progressed was not accompanied by a corresponding reduction of relief rolls. By the end of 1937 when the Canadian Bureau of Statistics index for total employment stood at 120, on the basis of 1926 representing 100, there still were 1,000,000 Canadians on Dominion relief roles. About half of these, however, were in the drouth-stricken families of Saskatchewan and adjoining provinces, so that actually not more than 500,000 were receiving relief because of the depression. At the same time, relief roles in the United States, which had declined materially, were again approaching the maximum because of the new depression.

As to Employment.

The comparative employment indexes in the United States and Canada in the late months of 1937 are strikingly in contrast. In Canada, using 1926 as 100, the index for manufacturing was 110 in January, 1937. That is, there were 10 per cent more employed in manufacturing than in 1926, but this took no account of the increase in population. This index climbed through 1937 until it reached a high of 118 in October. From this it receded only slightly, standing at 117.7 at the close of the year.

In the United States, using the 1923-1925 average as 100, the index on Jan. 1, 1937, stood at 98.6. It climbed to a high of 103 in July and then started falling off, and at the end of the year was down to 94.

In Canada, automobile production and freight car loadings held their 1937 gains right up to the close of the year, while in the United States, as is well known, both declined sharply in the late months of 1937 as compared with those of 1936. Canada's automobile production last December was slightly greater than in the corresponding month of 1936, and car loadings were on a par with those of a year earlier. Since Jan. 1 there have been slight declines in these two significant branches of industry.

For the last week of January, for instance, car loadings as compared with the corresponding week of 1937, declined 5.6 per cent in Canada, and 15.3 per cent in the United States.

How Government Faced Problem.

What acts of the Canadian Government, legislative or other, should be given credit for the country's recovery, and particularly for its capacity to hold the ground gained in the face of the new United States depression? Or to what other factors should these economic gains be attributed? Was there a New Deal comparable to that in the United States?

Probably the Canadian approach to the problems of the depression is best defined by a statement made by the Minister of Labor, Norman Rogers, in a public address he made after he took over the cabinet position in 1935 under the Liberal Prime Minister, Mackenzie King. He said:

"There is no greater fallacy than the current assumption that governments can end a depression by their own efforts. Final victory over the depression can only be won by a carefully planned campaign in which the leadership of government is supplemented by the co-operative effort of industry and commerce. For the Government to adopt a plan of public works schemes as a means of spending a way out of the depression is a false and dangerous procedure."

Rogers formerly was professor of political science at Queen's University.

Sales Tax of 8 Per Cent.

The Government tackled its own separate depression with two fundamental propositions in mind, first, that relief should be extended to the jobless and helpless, and, second, that the budget must be balanced in fact. Taxes were increased. The income tax, about comparable to that in the United States, was increased in the higher brackets, but the most drastic action was the increase of the sales tax to 8 per cent. This tax, which may be described as a manufacturers' sales tax, collected at the source, is now the largest producer of Dominion revenue. Then the Government sought to encourage industry and trade so as to increase the productivity of its various taxes, the sales tax, the income tax and the import duties.

The pre-depression budgets of the Dominion Government were under $400,000,000, the total expenditures for the fiscal year 1929, for instance, having been $388,805,000. In the same year revenue from all sources was $460,151,000, and the Government had a surplus of $71,346,000. For the next fiscal year, ending March 31, 1930, there was a surplus of $47,740,000.

Deficits from 1931 On.

Effects of the depression then caused expenditures to mount and revenue from ordinary sources to drop. Annual deficits thereafter were as follows:

Fiscal year ending March 31.	Deficit.
1931	$ 83,848,000
1932	114,234,000
1933	220,634,000
1934	133,497,000
1935	116,133,000
1936	159,989,000
1937	77,852,000

For the current fiscal year, nearing its close, the deficit, as has been explained, is not expected to exceed $20,000,000.

The greatest outlay of the Government in any depression year was $532,585,555 in the 1935-36 fiscal year. The following year was only slightly less and it will be about the same for the current year.

Comparative Spending.

Two significant facts are apparent: First, that the Canadian Government's expenditures were not increased in anything like the degree by which United States Government expenditures were raised; in the United States where the 1929 budget was $3,299,000,000 the increase to a budget of $8,781,000,000 for 1936 was 166 per cent, and the Canadian increase from 1929 to 1936 was 37 per cent. Second, that Canada's balancing of the budget is being accomplished not by drastically cutting expenditures, which are only moderately higher than before the depression, but by gradually bringing revenues up.

Canadian observers regard the proposals of the United States Government early in 1937 to reduce drastically its depression spending as having contributed to the new setback, and the absence of this deflationary influence in Canada as having been helpful to their country.

Finding New Markets.

As to the forces helping to overcome the people's depression, the views of many persons in and out of the Government may be summarized as follows:

Since Canada's prosperity comes so much from the outside (exports being normally about 30 per cent of total production) the development of new world markets was important. By the Ottawa agreements of 1932 Canada found new markets within the British Empire through trade preferences. This replaced some of the American markets lost to Canadian products by the Hawley-Smoot tariff and the spread of the depression in the United States.

The Government at the same time took aggressive steps to cultivate trade with nations outside the British Empire, sending trade commissioners far and wide, and encouraging Canadian industries to seek new markets.

Later new trade agreements with England and the United States were very beneficial. Canada's foreign trade has grown and the so-called favorable balance has been restored, that is, the excess of exports over imports has been around $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 annually.

Helped by U. S. Fiscal Policy.

The departure of the United States from the gold standard and the devaluation of the dollar helped Canada decidedly. While the United States remained on the gold standard the Canadian dollar was at a substantial discount. It required $1.25 of Canadian funds to pay $1 owed in New York, and a large volume of Canadian obligations was payable in New York or other external financial centers. Moreover, the unfavorable relation of the British pound to the dollar hurt the Canadian exporters. A large volume was paid for with British pounds and a pound would buy less than $4 instead of the normal $5. Parity of these currencies was restored when the United States abandoned the gold standard.

Great impetus was given the Canadian gold mining industry by President Roosevelt's action in increasing the price of gold from $20.67 to $35 an ounce. The value of gold mined in Canada has increased from $61,000,000 in 1934 to $145,000,000 in 1937. Exports of gold bullion to the United States were $25,000,000 in 1934 and $80,000,000 in 1936. New mines are being developed and "gold shares" are the sensation of the day on the Toronto and Montreal stock markets. Just how much of this Canadian gold is purchased by the United States Treasury it is impossible to say.

Restrictive Laws Absent.

The absence of "restrictive" legislation as affecting industry and commerce was commented on widely here and in Toronto as having aided recovery. At one time Canada started to emulate the Roosevelt New Deal. Strangely, this was under the Conservative Government of Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, in 1934 and early 1935.

The Dominion Parliament passed laws providing for minimum wages, limitation of hours of work, one day's rest in seven in all employment, social and unemployment insurance, debt adjustment for farmers, farm marketing agreements, and for a trade and industry commission. All but two were knocked out by the courts and the British Privy Council as "unconstitutional," that is, as outside the scope of the Dominion's legislative power. Virtually none of this legislation was ever put into effect, and it is clear that whatever progress Canada made was without the benefit of this type of legislation.

It was not surprising to find Canadian business men giving thanks for being free of the New Deal type of government control. But in the inner circles of the present Liberal Government the attitude seemed to be to let business alone as much as possible, to regulate for the correction of abuses but not try to "direct." In fact, the left-wing liberals have declared the present Government is not Liberal at all.

Views on U. S. Policies.

Men in business and Government were particularly critical of the undistributed profits tax in the United States. "Stupid" was the description given of it by more than one. They pointed out, too, that in Canada they have no capital gains tax as in the United States. The opinion was freely expressed that the undistributed profits tax had helped to bring on the new depression.

Corporations, of course, are subject to an income tax, but this is a straight 15 per cent of net operating profit. There is no differentiation according to size.

Government officials commented also that there is no official "scolding" of business in Canada. They thought the strictures against business by President Roosevelt and other high Government officials and the uncertainty of their policies had adversely affected trade and industry.

Effect of Soldiers' Bonus.

Disbursement of the soldiers' bonus in the United States in 1936 is regarded as having contributed to the present depression. A Canadian financial expert said it created suddenly a large amount of purchasing power that industrial managements seemingly failed to realize would not be recurring. He thought that production schedules geared to that artificial stimulation and to the further stimulation caused by rising prices resulted in excess inventories in many lines early in 1937.

A Canadian bank economist noted in the summer of 1937 that installment sales in the United States were increasing at a greater rate than the national income and pointed out that this was an unhealthy condition.

It was impossible to obtain reliable statistics for comparison of the volume of installment sales in Canada and the United States, for all lines of merchandise, but the general opinion in banking and Government circles was that it was considerably less in Canada. In recent years installment sales of new automobiles in Canada have been from 30 to 45 per cent of the total, as compared with upward of 60 per cent in the United States.

The Government has followed an "easy money" policy; that is, a deliberate plan of keeping interest rates low for the benefit of borrowing farmers, industries and the Government itself. The Bank of Canada, as a central bank, and the Government's fiscal agent, has proved useful for this purpose. The Government has refunded practically all of its old bond debt at lower interest rates. It has retired the last of its tax-free bonds.

Some measure of business stimulation comes from the Dominion Housing and Home Improvement Acts. Under the housing plan private lenders are encouraged to make loans up to 60 per cent of cost for construction of new homes and in approved cases the Government will lend what is ordinarily termed "second mortgage money"—enough to provide total financing of about 80 per cent of the appraised value of the completed property. It is provided that the interest rate on the total finacing shall not exceed 5 per cent. The security is one first mortgage running jointly to the private lender and the Government according to their respective interests.

Under the home improvement plan Government loans are made for major home repairs and improvements much as was done under the F H A plan in the United States.

There is not the internal warfare in organized labor in Canada that the United States has had in the last two years. Labor is not fully satisfied with what the Government has done, and P. M. Draper, president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, largest of the national labor organizations, said to the writer that he thought the Government's statistical picture of conditions was too optimistic. It was his opinion that the machinery for collecting data was not as adequite as that of the United States.

Labor wants some of the social legislation of the New Deal, some of that invalidated by the Privy Council. It wants more public works employment, and less of the dole, to take care of those on relief.

Canada has had an old-age pension act since 1927 under which no contribution is required by the individual. It provides for Federal assistance to the extent of 75 per cent of pensions paid by provinces which enact their own acts. Most of the provinces have come in under this act.

Constitutional Revision Planned.

Following the ruling that the Bennett New Deal laws were unconstitutional, a commission was set up to study the whole question of Dominion-Provincial relations. The Constitution of Canada is the British North America Act, an act of the British Parliament setting up the federation of Canadian provinces. It confers certain specific powers on the provinces, and in knocking out the New Deal laws the Judicial Committee of the British Privy Council, comparable to a Supreme Court, held that the Dominion Government had undertaken to act in fields assigned to the provinces.

The commission studying Dominion-Provincial relations is considering ways of amending the British North America Act so as to enlarge the powers of the Dominion Parliament, particularly in the fields of social and labor legislation.

The fact that nearly half of Canada's exports are sold in the United States is cause for both business and the Government to view the new depression in the states with concern. Newsprint is the Dominion's largest manufactured product and at one time 90 per cent of it was sold in the United States, more recently 80 per cent.

Points of Difference.

In any comparison of the two countries it should be kept in mind that there are important differences in physical aspects and in population and industrial characteristics. The rural population of Canada is 47 per cent of the total compared with only 36 per cent in the United States. This means that Canada, as a nation, is closer to the land and should be less subject to the social effects of technological changes in industry.

In natural resources, already mentioned, Canada has immense untouched reserves, especially in forests and minerals, affording opportunities for new enterprise. The sparse settlement of much of the large area has held these back from as rapid exploitation as has taken place in the United States. A natural resource may be developed to provide the magic "new industry" that many economists have said would end depression. Actually, the United States, by its monetary policy, has given Canada a new and important industry in its gold mining, as shown by figures already quoted.

Sources of Income.

Fisheries and fur production also are important industries in Canada depending largely upon the undeveloped state of the country for their success and virtually untouched by mechanical invention.

Tourist travel, largely originating in the United States and attracted to Canada by its newness and physical features, is counted as one of the country's great assets. Expenditures of tourists in the Dominion in 1937 are estimated at nearly $300,000,000. In 1936 the amount was $255,000,000, and after deducting $99,000,000 spent by Canadians abroad, it was calculated that this business gave the country a favorable balance of $156,000,000.

Confidence is general in the soundness of Canadian national economy, and the view is widely held that barring adverse influences from the outside, especially from the United States, the country's economic progress will continue.

Another Legislator Declines Job.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 12.—Representative V. E. Phillips of Kansas City notified Gov. Stark today he would not be able to serve as a member of the Statute Revision Commission from Feb. 15 to May 15 because of the pressure of business. Phillips is the fourth legislator out of 46 designated by the Governor to decline to serve. Three groups of 16 legislators, each headed by Senator Phil M. Donnelly and each working a three-month shift, will start work here Feb. 15.

Awarded the title of "Oldsmobile Salesleader," he also shared in Oldsmobile $10,000 cash award which was divided among 100 Oldsmobile "salesleaders" from all over the country.

Faerber has been with the Grebe Motor Co., Inc., Oldsmobile dealer at 3600 South Kingshighway, for the past 13 years, and has consistently ranked as one of its leading sales producers.

CHET MILLER, ONE OF THE four racing drivers who are driving the new Hudson "112" cars on long test runs all over the country, stopped off in St. Louis the past week. He was on the final stretch of 15,000 miles of driving his "112," the low-priced car recently announced by the Hudson Motor Car Co. He, "Babe" Stapp, Ira Vail and Ted Horn, all noted Indianapolis 500-mile race drivers, have been averaging more than 500 miles a day since they left Detroit last month to put the "112" model through all of the road and climatic conditions encountered by motorists. While here, Miller had his "112" on display at the Hudson & Terraplane Sales Corporation, the local distributer, and spoke to employes of the corporation and dealers, telling about his experiences on the test run.

Miller, who is a member of the Champion 100-Mile-an-Hour Club, made up of drivers who have completed 500-mile races at Indianapolis and averaged more than 100 miles per hour with relief, plans to enter the race next May with a European-made Maserati car, which has a 91-cubic inch, six-cylinder engine developing 185 horsepower and costs around $14,000. "Wild Bill" Cummings, the 1934 winner, and Wilbur Shaw, the winner in 1937, also expect to drive European cars in the coming race.

V. L. MURRAY, ASSISTANT general sales manager for the Pontiac division of General Motors, will be here Tuesday to confer with W. P. Wilson, zone manager, and his staff with reference especially to new and used car sales and service. Following the session, the zone staff will hold meetings for dealers and salesmen throughout the zone. Murray said in Detroit yesterday that Pontiac hoped sales and advertising plans would generate sufficient business in the next few weeks to recover some of the business lost this winter. "The auto industry can be depended on to do everything in its power to lead the country back into a buying state of mind," he said.

DISTRIBUTERS AND DEALERS to the number of 128, from Western Missouri and Southern Illinois, attended a meeting held at Hotel Melbourne Friday by the Barnsdall Refining Corporation. The purpose of the meeting was to explain the campaign for the corporation's new "one hundred per cent pure Pennsylvania motor oil" and to discuss the advertising plans for the year. Speakers included G. F. Racette, vice-president and general sales manager, J. V. Razier and A. R. Streuble.

APPOINTMENT OF THE BERNARD Motor Co., 2607 Woodland road, Overland, as a Hudson-Terraplane dealer is announced by W. S. Milton, zone manager for the Hudson Motor Car Co. G. R. Bernard is president of the firm, which is displaying a complete line of Hudson and Terraplane cars and has a stock of parts and equipment for service.

A STEADILY INCREASING number of Studebaker dual control cars for teaching safe driving are being put into use by educational institutions, A. A. A. clubs and dealers. These cars have duplicate steering wheels, service braking systems, clutch and accelerator pedals, emergency brakes, starters and rear vision mirrors. The gear shift lever is forked so that the instructor can guide the novice's hand in shifting.

W. K. BRAASCH HAS BEEN made sales propotion manager for the Pontiac division of General Motors, succeeding S. C. Bray, who has become the Pontiac dealer in Tampa, Fla. WARNING THAT WHEN THE choke is out the fuel mixture is very rich and washes off oil on the pistons and cylinder walls, so the choke should be pushed in as soon as possible after the engine starts, the Chrysler service department also advises a car owner to keep the engine turning as slowly as possible without stalling until the heat indicator shows that the motor has reached the right operating temperature. Racing an engine in getting it started and operating does serious damage.

FUEL ECONOMY OF 67.04 TON-miles per gallon of gasoline was recordded by a 1½-ton Chevrolet truck, driven by Harry Hertz from Ottawa, Can., to Mexico City in 12 days recently, a summary of the log kept by Stanley Reed, the A A A observere, shows. According to Reed's log, the truck averaged 252 miles per day on the 3022 mile-trip at an average speed of 31.04 miles per hour. A total of 208.73 gallons of gasoline costing $40.46 was used. The truck carried a payload of 4000 pounds and the gross weight was 9260 pounds. The gasoline cost per mile was $.01339 per mile. As 2.92 quarts of oil were used, the total mile per gallon cost was $.0145. The total ton mile-per-gallon cost was $.00313. No repairs or tire changes were made.

A MECHANICAL MAN THAT talks, walks, sings and plays the accordion has been constructed in Detroit by John and Patrick Rizzo, brothers, who are employes of the Dodge division of the Chrysler Corporation. In a public performance, the mechanical man, who is called "Big Louie" and stands six feet two inches in his size 16 shoes, walked through the audience, telling the story of his creation and playing the Intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana." The brothers worked on "Big Louie" for six years, spending a total of 20,000 odd hours making the electric motors which give the manikin its mobility, the complicated gearing which makes his movements appear lifelike, the radio speaking devices and remote controls which give him a voice, the accordion, the wig, shoes and even the 55-inch chest suit of tweed clothes.

ONE OF THE LARGEST AND most elaborately appointed super service and display stations of the type recommended by the Ford Motor Co. thus far erected in the Middle West has been opened by the Fred Evens Motor Co., Ford dealer, at 7717-25 Forsythe boulevard, Clayton. In addition to a fully equipped service department designed for motorists' convenience and for speeding lubrication and maintenance and repair work, the building includes an eight-window half-oval show room in which cars can be displayed under the most favorable lighting and spacing conditions.

MORE THAN 80,000 SQUARE feet of floor space has been added to the parts and accessories department of the Pontiac factory at Pontiac, Mich., making a total of 245,000 square feet devoted to this department. More than 16,000 separate parts are stocked. Pontiac dealers throughout the country are installing new motor and safety testing departments to carry out the factory's preventive maintenance plan, which is designed to insure satisfactory car operation and avoidance of unnecessary repairs.

STUDIES OF TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS by the Problem Committee on Highway Illumination of the American Roads Builders' Association emphasize the value of lighted roads. On one well lighted section of a heavily traveled highway, the accident rate was 3.10 per million miles by day and 2.61 by night. But on a less heavily traveled but unlighted road the average accident rate per million miles was 2.5 by day and 8 by night. A study of the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway showed that there was a 250 per cent increase in the night accident rate with the lights out of service as compared with the rate for an equal period with the lights in service.

WHAT HAPPENS IN A CAR axle under load is determined in th Chevrolet factory laboratory by 12 gauges, which measure any deflection by any part of the axle under any given load condition. In using the gauges, a weight is hung on the end of a drive shaft to simulate a maximum load on the drive shaft under actual driving conditions. Then all movements or deflections of the drive shaft, pinion and ring gears and axle shafts are read simultaneously. The accurate checking results in improvement of bearings mounting.

IN A RECENT TEST BY THE A. A. A. Contest Board of a new high-speed Christie tank built for the British army, the tank was paced by Ira Vail, the racing driver, in a Hudson Terraplane car. The car's speedometer showed that the tank traveled over rough ground at 53 miles per hour. In service, the tank will carry machine guns or light cannon.

TOTAL CAR EXPENSE OF $425 for a 5000-mile driving tour of France, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, Germany and Belgium is reported by Cyretta Morgan, president of the Michigan Association of Teachers of Speech, and three companions. The cost included transportation from Detroit to Quebec, Canada, boat passage for her Chevrolet car, foreign license plates, three drivers' licenses, foreign insurance, garage rent nearly every night, gasoline and oil and transportation from Montreal to Detroit on the return trip.

A STEADY INCREASE IN NEW and used cars sales in January is reported by Buick. Domestic deliveries in the last 10 days of the month were 3815 compared with 3033 in the second 10 days and with 2492 in the last 10 days of January, a year ago. Used car deliveries by Buick dealers were 24,660 in January against 23,567 in January, 1937.

ST. LOUIS LOOKS at the AMERICAN SHOW

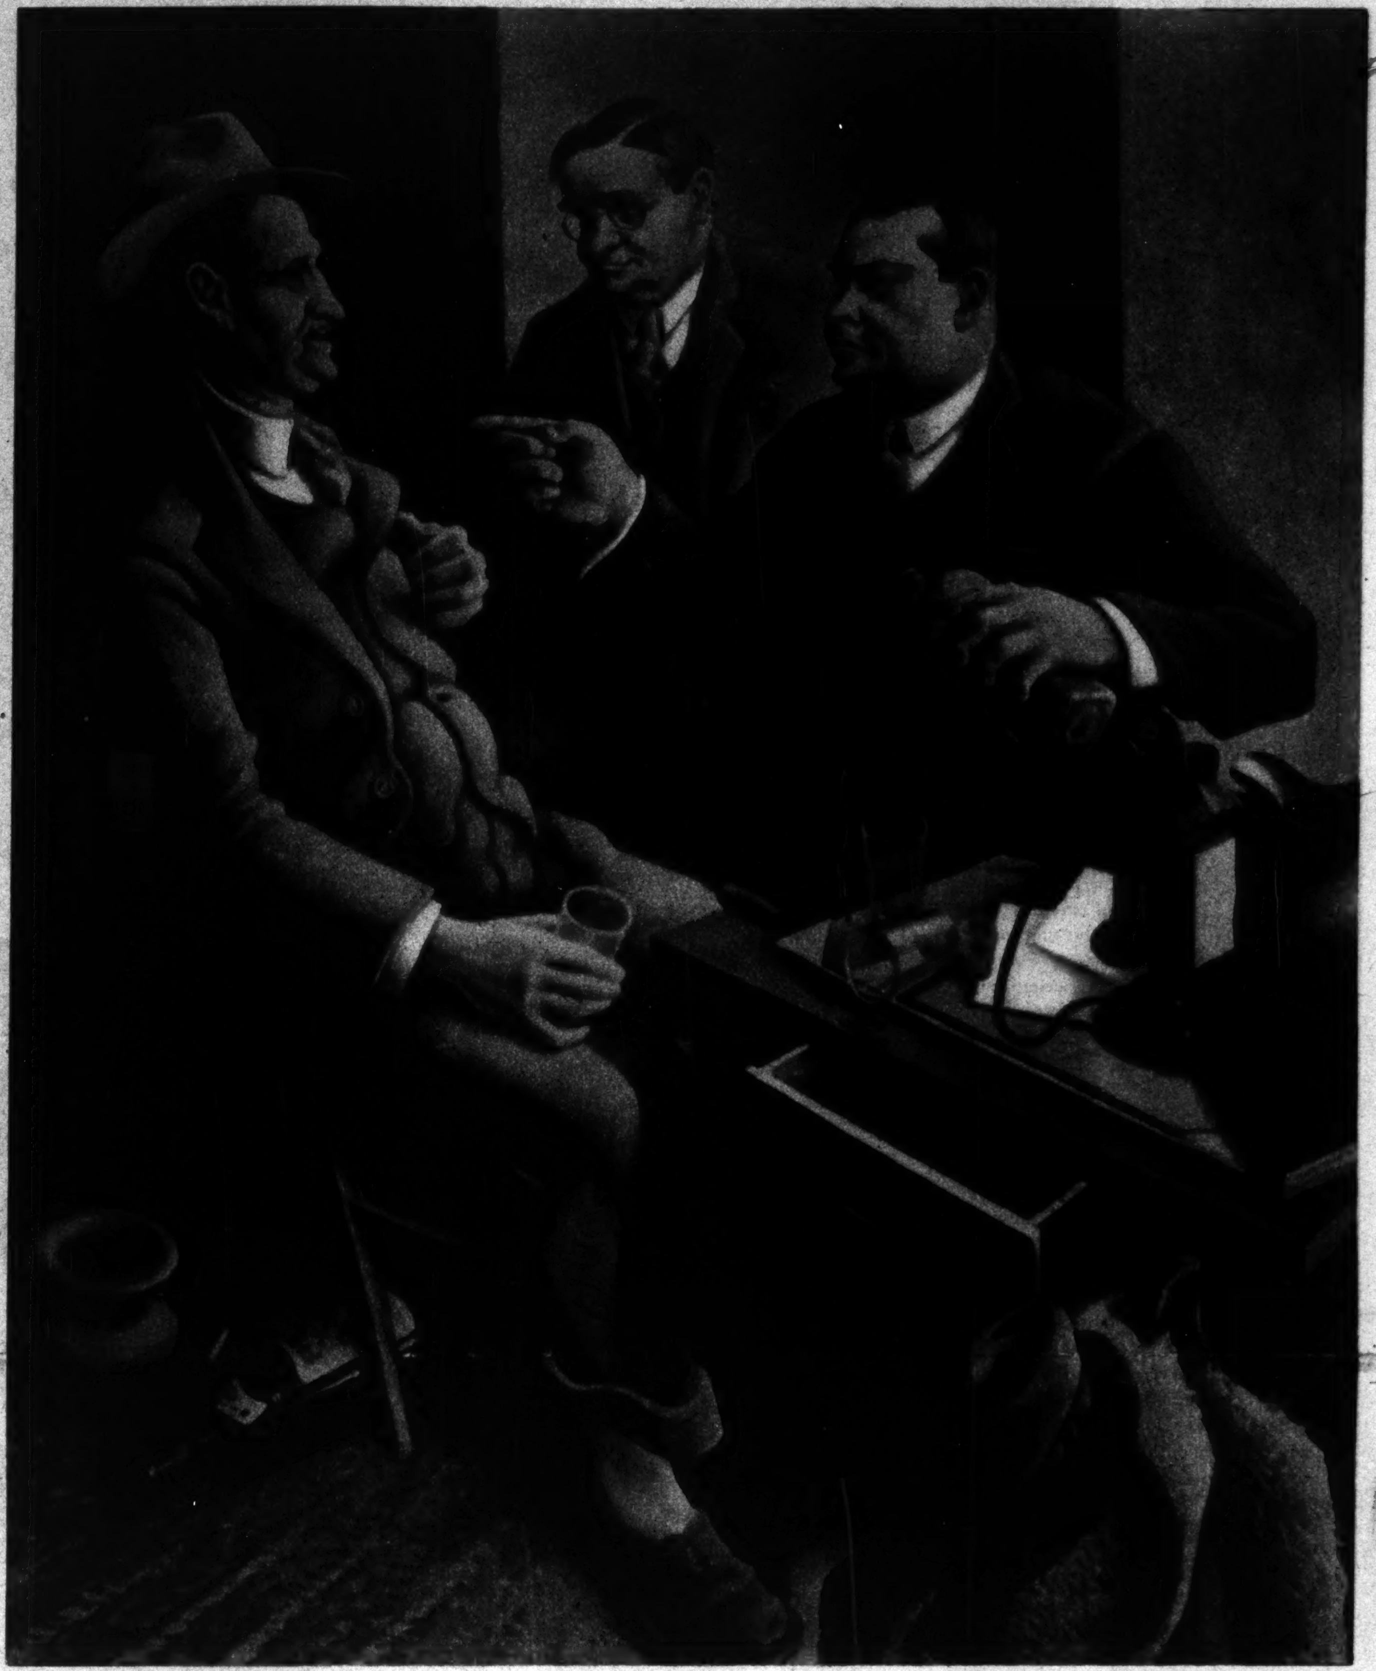
Reproductions From the Thirty-Second Annual Exhibition of Native Art at the City Art Museum.



"Preparing the Bill," by Thomas H. Benton.

MEYRIC ROGERS, Director of the City Art Museum, writes: "On the whole the present exhibition may be said to indicate a continuation of the tendency toward a modified naturalism noted in the last few years. The extreme and experimental approach has given place to straightforward simplification of observed facts . . ."

The four pictures reproduced here present four personal styles which fall within this general definition. Ernest Fiene's "Haying Scene," with its balanced composition and solidly constructed forms, reflects the tendencies of French landscape painting after Impressionism. "Preparing the Bill," by Thomas H. Benton reveals the application of the artist's rhythmic style to contemporary politics. Durr Freedley reduces the forms in "Blackbird" to essentials and reproduces them with sensitive line and controlled palette. Yasuo Kuniyoshi, born in Japan and long a resident of the United States, is an instructor at the Art Student's League, New York. In "Flowers" he records his observation with harmonies of color and tone.

PUTTING SCIENCE'S APPROVAL on the 'BOUNTY' MUTINEERS' DESCENDANTS

AT LEAST two great American phobias have just been carefully, sympathetically and neatly dynamited by Harry L. Shapiro, associate curator of physical anthropology in the American Museum of Natural History. They are the common fear of race mixture and of cousin marriage as dangerous in themselves, if not abhorrent before heaven. When Shapiro gets through with them in his "Pitcairniana" in last month's Natural History (the museum's magazine), there isn't much left of either.

Besides those two a third, though hardly a direct target, does seem to suffer a little in the line of fire. It is that persons who more violently than most rebel against intolerable situations—or revel in luxurious ones—are bad at heart, and that the all-seeing genes are going to visit their sins upon their children unto the third and fourth generation.

Anthropologist Shapiro found nothing to bear that out in his study, the most thorough and scientific ever undertaken, of the fourth, fifth and sixth generation from the mutineers of the "Bounty." (Of some pertinence here, a study of child "delinquents" in Chicago slums indicates that it is likely to be an abnormal person, possibly subnormal, who behaves "normally" in an abnormal environment). And, as two movies and unnumbered books attest, never were revolt and revelry shown more dramatically than in those mutineers—nor regeneration more clearly than in their descendants on Pitcairn Island.

Nine mutineers, six native men and 12 native women set sail from Tahiti on the Bounty in September, 1789, and found refuge from British law on Pitcairn. When the Topaze of Boston put in to Pitcairn for water in 1808, one mutineer was left alive. All the native men and all but two of the mutineers had died by violence in the first 10 years.

So far it was exactly what one would expect of the men who, led by Fletcher Christian, had seized the Bounty and set its commander, Lieutenant William Bligh of His Majesty's Navy, adrift in an open boat with 18 "loyal" sailors for the epic voyage of 3618 miles over unknown seas—41 days—to the Dutch East Indies.

The 25 mutineers, average age 26, had returned to the lotus land of Tahiti, and 16 of them had preferred to remain there and let the Admiralty do its worst, which it got around to only a few years after Christian and his companions found a refuge on Pitcairn safe from all but themselves. Edna St. Vincent Millay puts it deftly in her "Epitaph for the Race of Man":

Alas for Man, so stealthily betrayed,
Bearing the bad cell in him from the start,
Pumping and feeding from his healthy heart
The wild disorder never to be stayed
When once established. . . .

Disorder began when a mutineer, his mate lost in a fall from a cliff, demanded a native's wife in her place. Its source perhaps went back to the native men's discovery that, though they had gone along as friends, they now were only slaves. It fed upon another discovery: One of the Bounty's men, once a distiller, found he could make a potent and fiery drink from the roots of an island plant. It progressed, through changeful schemes of feud and realignment dictated by envy, jealousy, and race hatred, until Edward Young, saved by his hold on the native women, was left alone with John Adams, less commonly but more properly known as Alexander Smith, who had survived critical wounds in the island warfare.

H. M. S. Bounty—from a painting.

The others had triumphed over the adversities of nature and the elements, had hewed a home and a livelihood out of the rocky island, only to find, as Miss Millay has it again—

You shall achieve destruction where you stand,

Young's death—of natural causes—left John Adams after 1800 the sole protector of 10 native women and 25 children, offspring of the mutineers. Perhaps because he was fundamentally a God-fearing man, perhaps because no rivals remained to fight with, regeneration began with him. In the hut of Fletcher Christian's widow he found the King James Bible and the prayer book from the Bounty. Laboriously spelling them out and learning to write—he had never written more than his name before—he passed on his learning to the younger generation, brought them up in enduring piety, and even, when the Blossom dropped anchor at Pitcairn in 1825, had its captain legally marry him and his then aging mate.

AND as the islanders prospered in the faith, so did they increase—to 87 in 1831, when they removed to "the sweet and poisonous blandishments" of Tahiti and then, their numbers depleted by disease, returned for a fresh start on Pitcairn, and to 187 in 1856, when they migrated 4000 miles west to the larger Norfolk Island. A few at a time, homesick, returned to little Pitcairn—one mile by two—so that by 1865 it had 45 inhabitants. With rare additions from the outside, they had increased to 202 when Shapiro, after studies on Norfolk and repeated attempts to reach Pitcairn since 1923, achieved his objective in the Templeton Crocker expedition of 1934-35.

On the British side, the parent stock had the physical fitness demanded by the sea in days before steam. Otherwise the mutineers were classified by Shapiro as average, with a touch of the minor nobility. Their Polynesian mates had been selected on standards which—though perhaps not identical in words—presumably would have passed muster with the biologist.

Such "new blood" as had come to Pitcairn had been mostly English. One of Christian's sons married a mutineer's widow and another married a Tahitian woman taken to the island in childhood, but those were the last marriages back to Polynesian stock until 1934, when a Pitcairn youth returned with a native bride from the "neighboring" island of Mangareva. Three Englishmen and three Americans joined the island population in the last century. Shapiro counted 13 such "foreigners" there now—including one sent there for benefit of the island school—but they hardly figure in biological study of the Pitcairn stock.

In a degree of inbreeding which, in the last generation, on one arbitrary scale devised by Shapiro, approaches that of a brother-sister marriage, he was able to put his finger on only two specific characteristics which might have been affected by it, only one a defect, and that one perhaps not even due to heredity.

"The Pitcairn Islanders are distinguished by being one of the most intensively inbred human groups of which we have specific information," he writes. "After several generations of cousin marriage the population is now all inter-related in intimate degrees of kinship. The genealogy of one subject, for example, contained the name of Fletcher Christian seven times, Edward Young six times . . .

"Now, inbreeding arouses among most Europeans a feeling of doom and horror. They envisage cousin marriage as leading to dire results and easily recall numerous examples of disastrous consequences from such matings . . . But in the mild taboo which society imposes on first cousin marriages, the instances in which no harm to the offspring can be detected are usually overlooked. For, as animal and plant experimentation has shown, inbreeding need not necessarily be injurious.

"That it often is may be attributed not to any mysterious evil inherent in consanguineous mating but to latent defects of which the offspring receive a double dose, thus bringing to expression characters present in the family line. Where the stock is sound, inbreeding does not necessarily lead to degeneracy as it is ordinarily feared.

"And for human groups the Pitcairn Islanders demonstrate that inbreeding does not necessarily carry ruin in its train. As a matter of fact, the islanders are physically sound and healthy. They show no evidence of endemic diseases or of congenital stigmata . . . "

Statistically, the anthropologist found indication of a higher frequency of twins on Pitcairn than elsewhere, and he was inclined to think that twinning might have been a tendency in one of the original stocks enhanced to a "double dose" by inbreeding.

POSSIBLY, too, he considered, inbreeding might have been a factor in the present "uniformly bad" dentition of the islanders, in contrast to old accounts of their beautiful teeth. Edward Young of the Bounty at 24 had lost his front teeth, possibly in a fist fight, but if it were a congenital defect, then "it is easy to see how the intensive inbreeding practiced on the island could soon have spread the defect to all the families of the community." On the other hand, there was the utter lack of dental care until recently, and the milkless, somewhat limited diet, which would require expert analysis to determine whether it is actually the cause in part or whole.

"When plant or animal breeders wish to invigorate certain stocks," he explains, "they frequently resort to cross breeding. The progeny tend to be larger, more fertile and generally sturdier. This phenomenon is sometimes known as heterosis, or hybrid vigor. In certain instances the burst of vigor in the first generation gradually ebbs away in the later generations.

"Long before heterosis was defined by modern genetics, students of human population advanced the hypothesis that the efflorescence of culture and the mingling of human stocks were causally related. It is ironical that Gobineau, one of the sources of modern German racial ideology, should also have maintained that civilization arises only from the mingling of races. But in common with other racial hypotheses of culture, this, too, is extremely difficult to prove."

So, in the records of the Blossom's surgeon, who measured the grown sons of mutineers and native wives in 1825, Shapiro found they averaged 5 feet 10—three inches taller than the average of their fathers by Admiralty records, and about two and one-half inches taller than Tahitian men or average Englishmen. Shapiro found that the island average had receded today to about 5 feet 8 inches—"ebbed away," perhaps—still, however, above the average for either parent stock.

In fertility also he found evidence of heterosis. The first hybrid generation produced an average of more than seven children to the couple and the second, more than nine, but this also ebbed to three by the fourth generation. Women born in the 20 years 1815-39 had more than 11 children, on the average, up to the age, for the mothers, of 45 years, while modern women had no children after 35. But this apparent decline of hybrid vigor, the anthropologist pointed out, almost certainly involved factors outside heredity, and "in the absence of necessary information it would be hazardous to offer a genetic explanation."

CONTRASTING patterns of inheritance were illustrated in other characteristics. The typical English head is long and narrow; the Tahitian head is shorter and broader. The Pitcairn Islanders picked up the narrowness from the English side and the shortness from the Tahitian—almost precise figures for the respective averages of the two diverse lines of ancestry.

But in nose width the islanders struck a medium between the 35 or 36 millimeter nose of the English and the broader Tahitian nose, about 43.4 millimeters. The Pitcairn mean was 38.5, a little biased toward the English side of the family; perhaps, the anthropologist surmised, because of slight preponderance of British ancestry. This sort of inheritance is called a "blend," but miscalled, he points out, for although the trait, like many others, appears as a single entity to the observer, in the actual mechanics of heredity it is the resultant of several hereditary tendencies—" a multiplicity of genes."

"Blending" showed again in skin color, for the islanders are generally intermediate between the dusky Polynesians and the fair English, though the range extends from blonds to brunets nearly as dark as the native ancestors. Since dark hair and dark eyes are genetically dominant, they are most common on the island, but fair hair and blue eyes still occur. Generally, he found that not one of the islanders might have passed as a Tahitian, but many of them would pass as English.

Mentally, he found only one or two below par, hardly significant in a population of more than 200, especially as balanced against a considerable number of outstanding personalities—whom he recalls with evident affection. Perhaps the keynote of his study is struck with most significance for human beings not in his impressive facts and figures, but in his personal record of an evening in Pitcairn, the yearly children's "exercises" under the kerosene lights at the island school on December 27, 1934. He tells about it in his book, "The Heritage of the Bounty":

"I liked the informality and enthusiasm of the adults who were enjoying it all very much, helping the songs a little by humming softly. But it was a funny and touching scene. A kind of brave attempt. This little human striving suddenly finding expression on a tiny speck of land with countless miles of ocean all around it. It suddenly became incredibly fragile and defenseless as an ant hill threatened by the heel of huge, unthinking forces beyond its ken."

The CO-EDS Who Tried Outwitting the CAMPUS COPS

By KEITH KERMAN
Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

CHAMPAIGN, Illinois.

TO THE eyes of most people, the University of Illinois has undergone no material alteration since the night of Friday, January 14, 1938. There are the same buildings on the campus—although one, venerable University Hall, had to be abandoned the other day because of an acute attack of disintegration, characterized by falling plaster. There is substantially the same array of professors, instructors, deans and so on, laboring at the job of administering higher education to some 10,000 young men and women. There is, to all appearances, the same 10,000 young men and women streaming in and out of classrooms; there is no noticeable difference in the number of bare headed lads wearing enormous, fuzzy, gaily-colored ear muffs. And the commerce in malted milks, beers and three-decker sandwiches goes on as before in the refreshment places along the fringes of the campus.

But to a little band of young men, the university and the world which it temporarily represents have been drastically and unhappily altered by the events of that Friday night a month ago. Because of the alarums and excursions of that occasion they are under a cloud of official disfavor, shorn of prized privileges.

They are the Dekes, members of Delta Pi Chapter of the national social fraternity Delta Kappa Epsilon. The fact that this chapter has taken a prominent part in the life of the university since the group received its charter in 1904, and the fact that the national organization, from whose membership have come two Presidents of the United States, is one of the most highly esteemed of its kind, have not served to soften the blow that has fallen on the group here. Though they live in one of the most commodious and elegant residences of the scholastic community, the Illinois Dekes are, as far as school authorities are concerned, definitely domiciled in the dog house.

This lamentable state of affairs has resulted from an episode of the kind that faculty members officially frown on—and properly so, of course—but that many of them, remembering their own undergraduate days, must chuckle over privately. It was an episode involving the classic tip: "Cherchez la femme"—in this case, "les femmes." Due to somebody's novel idea of having a mass snow ball fight at 2:15 a. m. and to a subsequent epidemic of gallant amnesia among Dekes and other fraternity men, the cherchez-ing seems to have been rather unsuccessful.

Perhaps it would be simplest to blame the whole thing on the sophomores, because they gave a formal dance, the Sophomore Cotillion, the night of January 14. It is true that the sophomores have a cotillion every year about this time, and then it is customary to blame the sophomores for practically everything untoward that occurs.

The Dekes took the opportunity offered by the cotillion to give a formal dinner party. The idea was that the members of the fraternity who were going to the dance and the girls whom they were escorting would dine at the chapter house and then go on to the ball. Such affairs are usual and have the sanction of university authorities if they are chaperoned.

The Deke dinner had approved chaperonage. It was attended by about 20 young women—almost all of them students in the university—and their escorts. At 9 o'clock or shortly after, the party broke up, the chaperones leaving and other pairs starting for the dance.

From this point on, there is a great deal of uncertainty as to the course of events. About 11:45 a university policeman, making his rounds, saw, he reported, a young man and a young woman come out of the Deke house. Uncertain as to how he should regard this, he sought higher authority and was informed that all woman guests were supposed to have left the house long before. Hastily collecting two colleagues, the policeman returned to the fraternity house, and the three officers distributed themselves around the premises, determined to apprehend any girls and their squires who should emerge thereafter.

A couple did emerge before long, saw a policeman waiting for them, and hurriedly retreated into the house, which immediately entered a state of siege. At that time, says the Daily Illini, student newspaper, there were six girls in the house. The university police couldn't come in after them, because there was no evidence of law violation. But a girl stepping off the premises could be seized by the police and charged with violating university regulations. The "Code on Student Affairs," a compilation of university rules, includes in its 65 pages of shalls and shall nots this prohibition: "Undergraduate women shall not visit a fraternity or men's house unchaperoned." Things looked pretty bleak for a co-ed discovered leaving the D. K. E. house that night.

A recent photograph of the University of Illinois Chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon. In the next to the bottom row, President Lessel is the seventh from the left.

But any girls who might be in the house couldn't delay their departure very long or they would be in difficulties with another rule. Because of the Sophomore Cotillion, one of the big dances of the year, girls who were supposed to be attending the dance were not required to be at home—in sorority or lodging house—until 2:30 in the morning. But if they were not in by that time, they would be locked out. And being locked out usually entailed quite unpleasant consequences.

The situation was growing moderately desperate for the young women in the Deke house—everybody but the Dekes says they were there, all right—when telephones began to jangle in several nearby fraternity houses. The youths who answered were told that they and all their brothers in residence were invited to gather right away in Fraternity Park, a small plot of ground in the rear of the D. K. E. residence, and engage in a jolly snow ball fight. What else they were told is not on record.

Response was immediate. In a few minutes between 50 and 75 men were swarming about the rear of the Deke house. Probably half of them were from other fraternity houses, half were members of Delta Kappa Epsilon who had sallied forth from their citadel to play in the snow with their friends. Some of the merrymakers wore slacks and sweaters, some wore such nondescript garb as could be pulled on quickly over pajamas, some recklessly exposed the bosoms of white dress shirts to flying snow balls.

To be quite candid, the snow ball bombardment could hardly be described as terrific; there weren't very many thrown, and these were just between friends, not directed at the gallery of policemen. But there was a great deal of milling about, much confusion and shouting, a lot of tramping in and out of the Deke house.

THE light hearted riot scene began a little after 2 o'clock and lasted not more than 10 minutes; within half an hour the crowd had dispersed—and so, it was ultimately discovered, had the besieged girls. Even with the illumination provided by moonlight and snow, the scene was enacted in an uncertain light, in which it would not be too difficult for six young women whose evening gowns were concealed by men's overcoats, hair by men's hats and feet by men's shoes or galoshes, to mingle with the crowd of men until they could slip away to taxicabs waiting a couple of blocks distant.

That, at least, is the plausible explanation of their vanishment. It was several hours later, however, before the police concluded that something of the kind had happened, and wearily abandoned their chilling vigil.

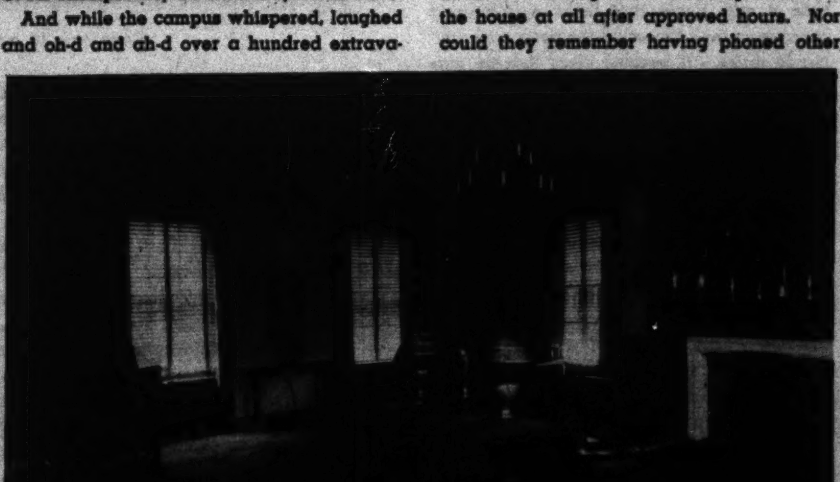
It was no more than a couple of trices after that before the principal disciplinary body of the university had a report on the nocturnal high jinks. The disciplinary body is the Committee on Student Affairs, made up of faculty members and headed by Dean C. M. Thompson of the School of Coommerce.

And while the campus whispered, laughed and oh-d and ah-d over a hundred extravagant stories, a sub-committee of the faculty group began to dig for facts.

The three policemen, a dozen Dekes, several members of other fraternities and a co-ed were questioned by the investigators. The co-ed, who lives in Champaign, was questioned because her automobile had been standing near the fraternity house. She said she had attended the dinner, but had left with others, about 9 o'clock, and gave a plausible reason for not taking her car away at that time. Two policemen, it is understood, testified (none of the testimony in the case, incidentally, was given under oath) that they saw women in the fraternity house.

None of the Dekes admitted knowing who the women were. In fact, none of the Dekes admitted knowing there were any women in the house at all after approved hours. Nor could they remember having phoned other fraternity men to come over and play in the snow. The other fraternity men questioned also disclaimed knowledge of any girls being involved in the frolic. One said there had been a phone call inviting his comrades to a snow fight, but he didn't know who the caller was. "Wasn't it rather silly to go out and toss snowballs about 2 o'clock in the morning?" he was asked. "Well, maybe it was," he answered, "but it didn't seem so at the time."

In conversation with this correspondent the young men of D. K. E. were equally noncommital. For example, one said: "I came home a little after 1, and went right up to bed, without noticing anything unusual. Some time afterward I had the impression there was a commotion of some kind outside, but"—quite solemnly—"I'm a very heavy sleeper." Another walked to a rear window and pointed out Fraternity Park below. "If there was a snowball fight that night," he said, "I suspect that's where it would have taken place."



The D. K. E. living room.

AFTER a week or so of evidence taking and evidence weighing, the disciplinary committee announced its decision. It found the D. K. E. chapter guilty of a violation of regulations concerning "unchaperoned mixed parties in men's houses" and of "attempting to interfere with university police officers in the discharge of their duty." It decreed that the chapter be deprived of its social privileges until September 1, 1939, and that the chapter officers relinquish their positions and be ineligible to hold chapter office hereafter.

No penalty for the girl guests was announced, and in its account of the committee's verdict the Daily Illini said: "No action is contemplated against the women involved." The indications are that the committee does not know the names of the "women involved." It is understood that the policemen who said they saw girls in the Deke house could not give definite enough descriptions to identify them certainly. From the fact that this phase of the investigation apparently was not pressed to the last resource, as well as the circumstance that nobody was expelled, it is only fair to assume that the university authorities, while considering the episode a flagrant breach of regulations, do not regard the participants as guilty of serious wickedness.

This assumption is supported by the attitude of the Dean of Men, Fred H. Turner, and Assistant Dean C. R. Frederick, both of whom seem to view the problems of university students realistically. They think that certain D. K. E.'s broke the school regulations and it is proper that the chapter be penalized, but consider unfortunate and false any impression that the incident was more than an escapade. It certainly wasn't scandalous in their opinion.

MEMPHIS, Tennessee. RENUNCIATION is written large in the creed of the Very Reverend Israel Harding Noe, dean of St. Mary's Episcopal Cathedral. When at the peak of his life of service it came to him that there was yet one thing that he lacked, he remembered the saying that "whosoever will save his life shall lose it, but whosoever will lose his life . . . the same shall save it."

There stood the saying, pointing the way to the gain that was to be won by loss. It was such gain, at such cost, that he coveted. So he entered upon the way of renunciation, seeking through negation a greater affirmation, waxing strong in spirit by denying the demands of the weak flesh. In fasting he was spending the strength of his life. Then his spirit was challenged by his protesting flesh, demanding an accounting.

When Dean Noe came to the end of his road of renunciation, faint and ready to fall, friends poorer in piety perhaps but richer in wisdom cared for him and are helping him back to health in the hope that henceforth he will not despise the strength that is needed to serve the world's weakness.

It is a hope, however, which does not have much to rest upon. When it comes to the ordering of his life Dean Noe is not a reed to be shaken by the wind of disapproval. When sustenance has restored him to health, it is not unlikely that he will again go the way that he calls submission of will.

It was in his first renunciation that Dean Noe showed himself disdainful of dissent and superior to restraint and indifferent to the publicity that beat upon him in his high calling. In a situation involving the most intimate relations of his home life, he opened the doors which by concession he might have kept closed.

Years ago, a strong man in the prime of life, he, through a process of suppression and sublimation, attained a celibacy with which his wife was not in sympathy. There was discord in the deanery across the street from St. Mary's Cathedral which became known to some when Mrs. Noe left her priest-husband, taking her children with her. It might have still been kept from the general public if Dean Noe had cared more for the peace and privacy of his household than he cared for his celibacy. But he did not. What his wife required of him was more than he could grant without treason to his conscience and infidelity to ascetic vows that he counted more compelling than the claims of a wife.

It all came out when the wife, despairing of an adjustment—or hoping to bring it about—filed suit for divorce, calling her husband's delinquency by the name of desertion. It was a plea upon which, if the dean had been willing to let the case rest on the question whether his celibacy constituted desertion, divorce might have been granted, but when he filed an answer claiming that, in the matter complained of, he was within his rights, Mrs. Noe filed an amended bill setting forth additional faults.

In Dean Noe's answer to the amended petition there was a hope expressed that a reconciliation might be effected and a hint given that he might have found a way to modify his views on marital relations without compromising his principles, although he still maintained as an ultimate goal a perfect expression of love which would be neither dependent upon proximity or lessened by distance.

ENCOURAGED by this, when the case was called for trial, a continuance was asked and granted on the ground of an expectation that there might be a reconciliation, but when a conference was held it was found that there was nothing concrete in the concession the dean was willing to make. It became clear that he was still unable to square his ascetic code with the claims of his wife, and there was no reason to suppose that time would change his attitude.

They remained apart and although the dean was a frequent caller at his wife's apartment and friendly relations were maintained, their main difficulty continued undissolved, for the dean was unable to admit himself at fault. Standing in his pulpit he justified himself by retelling the story of Samson and Delilah, the strong man of Israel and the woman of the valley of Sorek who enticed him and found the secret of his strength and took it from him.

Afterward, speaking soberly of the problem that confronted him, he said: "If it were merely a matter of a man and wife who had been estranged making up, it would be simple, but there are principles involved, and a man must be true to his principles."

In the trial of the divorce case Dean Noe continued to maintain his principles, though he declared his love for his wife and his desire that they should maintain a home for themselves and their children. He opposed a legal separation for the further reason that it would be very embarrassing for him and his church.

When the testimony had been concluded and the arguments heard, the chancellor's mind was made up. There was no need to take the case under advisement, he said, for "There can be no satisfactory solution of a case of this sort."

When he announced dismissal of the bill Mrs. Noe slid from her chair to the floor in a faint. When she revived and saw her husband by her side she said: "Leave me alone. I never want to speak to you again."

For more than five years Mrs. Noe remained away from her husband, keeping their children with her. The dean visited them at her apartment. As time passed Mrs. Noe noticed, as did friends of the dean, that he was losing the robustness that had been characteristic all through the years. At first he said he was dieting, dispensing with meats and heavy foods. If it was suggested to him that he was overdoing it, he replied that he had been greatly benefited and never felt better in his life. To a few intimates he spoke vaguely of a new way of living that he had found. He had come to believe that he could, by gradually diminishing his food, receive spiritual nourishment which would in time enable him to dispense with food altogether and achieve immortality.

Two years ago he began living on orange juice and cashew nuts and water. Early last year he gave up the nuts and water and subsisted solely on orange juice.

Through it all, although his emaciation became marked and he lost half his weight, he continued to perform the heavy duties of his church and meet all the calls that the community made upon him, including regular radio addresses, and exhibited remarkable vigor, though it was apparent that he was driving himself by the sheer power of his will. He did not call it that. Not by exercise of will but by submission of will had he been cleansed of "carnal" inclinations and now, by such submission, he was being freed from the need of bodily nourishment.

It was quite simple, as the dean expounded it without reserve. Life energy came from cosmos. Man had always taken energy in the form of food, but man could rise above the need of that. The plants and animals that man fed upon derived their life-sustaining substance from the original source. Man, by submission, could derive his subsistence from the same original source. That was what he believed and that was the submission he was practicing. And he was proving all that he said. For he was not taking food in the way that man had always taken food. Yet he lived. His emaciation? That was nothing. His freed spirit had no need of the physical strength which man had mistakenly glorified and upon which he had depended.

THAT was all very well, but there was no mistaking that, though the dean's spirit held strong, the body in which he dwelt, long despised, was growing weaker every day.

Mrs. Noe, although her husband had denied himself to her and she had sought to be divorced from him, still cared. So in December she returned to the deanery to dissuade him from his course if she could, though she doubted that she could, for she knew his vagary as stemming from that other one which had played havoc with home and happiness. She had been helpless then and there was slight hope that she would be more successful now. But she would try. Failing, she could at least care for him.

So far was Mrs. Noe from influencing the dean from his determination that, at the beginning of January, he announced that he had attained to the perfect submission that would enable him to subsist entirely upon the food of the spirit. Henceforth he would receive his life energy from the Great Source of all life. Henceforth he would fast completely. No more orange juice for him. Nothing but the ceremonial wine and wafer of the communion.

The thing went on for twelve days, with the fasting dean becoming weaker daily and more ghastly in his emaciation. But, with amazing exercise of what others call will power but which he calls the utter submission of will, he continued his duties. His voice, strangely strong, was heard in the cathedral pulpit and on the air. He conducted his Bible classes and carried on the heavy work of the parish.

On the twelfth day the press of the city told what the dean was doing and drew to him a flood of public attention and inquiry. The dean met it calmly and spoke frankly of the thing he was putting to the test of proof. He did not decry publicity except that he deemed it premature.

After that the days were counted as the dean continued his fast. He grew weaker every day, but it was a weakness that he called strength. He was proving that he could live without the food and drink that others needed to sustain life. To others it seemed that he was proving nothing except what needed no proving, that without food and drink, the body of a man shrivels and death awaits. They would have saved the man from himself, but they had no right, as they saw it, to interfere with his way of life against his will, even though the end of that way would be death.

THERE was a thought Bishop Maxon, with authority over the dean, might do something, but he was ill and had not been informed of what was going on. He had known that the dean had been practicing a rigorous asceticism, but as long as it was a personal matter and, up to a point, did not involve the interests of the church for which he was responsible, he did not feel called upon to take action. When, partly recovered, he was told that the dean had gone to the extreme, he did not order his subordinate to take nourishment. There might be a question whether his authority extended that far. But he did have the power to remove the dean for a course that he deemed inimical to the interests of the church. Taking cognizance of what he called a vagary, the dean was removed.

"I cannot," he said, "I will not, permit the teaching, the preaching or the practicing of such a vagary in my cathedral. It is contrary to all that the church teaches."

Stunned by his superior's action, but undeterred in his course, Dean Noe withdrew within himself and gave himself up to the meditation and prayer that he needed to sustain him in what he still felt was his unique mission. It was a testing time for him but he did not waver. Rather he took to himself the new valor that a martyr may claim.

Not that he would die, as other martyrs had died. He would live to prove the immortality that others had died to gain. And living, he would confound the powers that had sought to frustrate him. He would have his Gethsemane alone but they should not crucify him.

Now it was Sunday the twenty-third day of his fast and at evening he fell into a deep sleep. He was past choosing or refusing. His wife called friends into consultation. Unless something was quickly done this was the beginning of the end. They knew that if he had been capable of speech he would have denied what to them was evident, but in the face of his helplessness brought about by what the Bishop had called a vagary, they did not hesitate. An ambulance was called and the faster's frail and wasted body was taken to the hospital.

It was almost like raising a man from the dead, for some of his vital organs had already ceased to function. By intravenous nourishment, however, dissolution was stayed and slow restoration of the wastage was begun.

When Dean Noe knew what was going on he did not complain. It was all for the best, what the doctors were doing for him. It must be, as they said, that he had been ill. That, of course, had nothing to do with his great quest for a way of life that would prove, this side the grave, the great fact of immortality. He would soon be well of this infirmity that had hindered, and then he would be again on his chosen way. Unless, with recovery, he makes the discovery that there is a better way for a priest to go, renouncing vagary, ministering to the world's weakness with his strength.

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

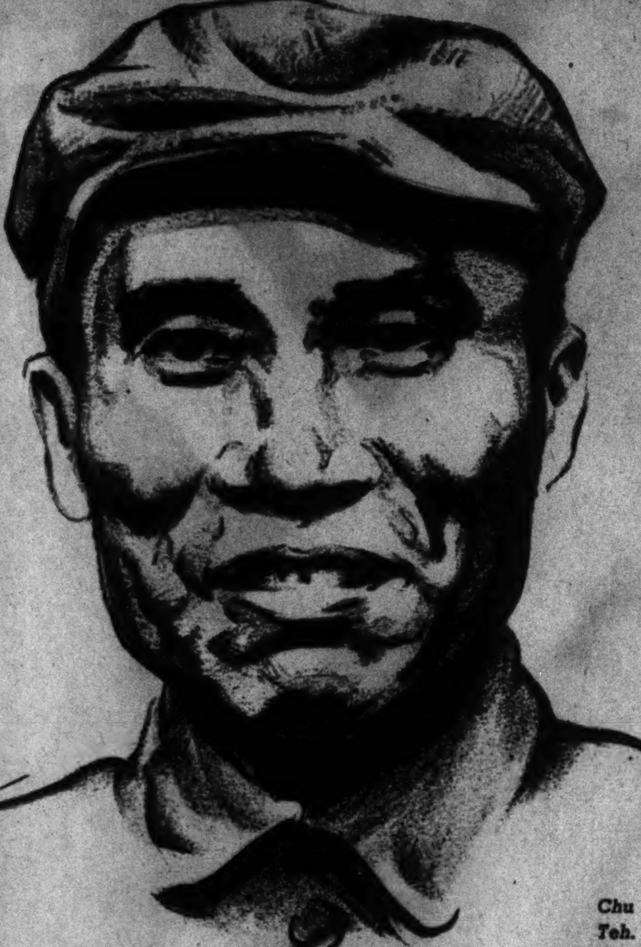
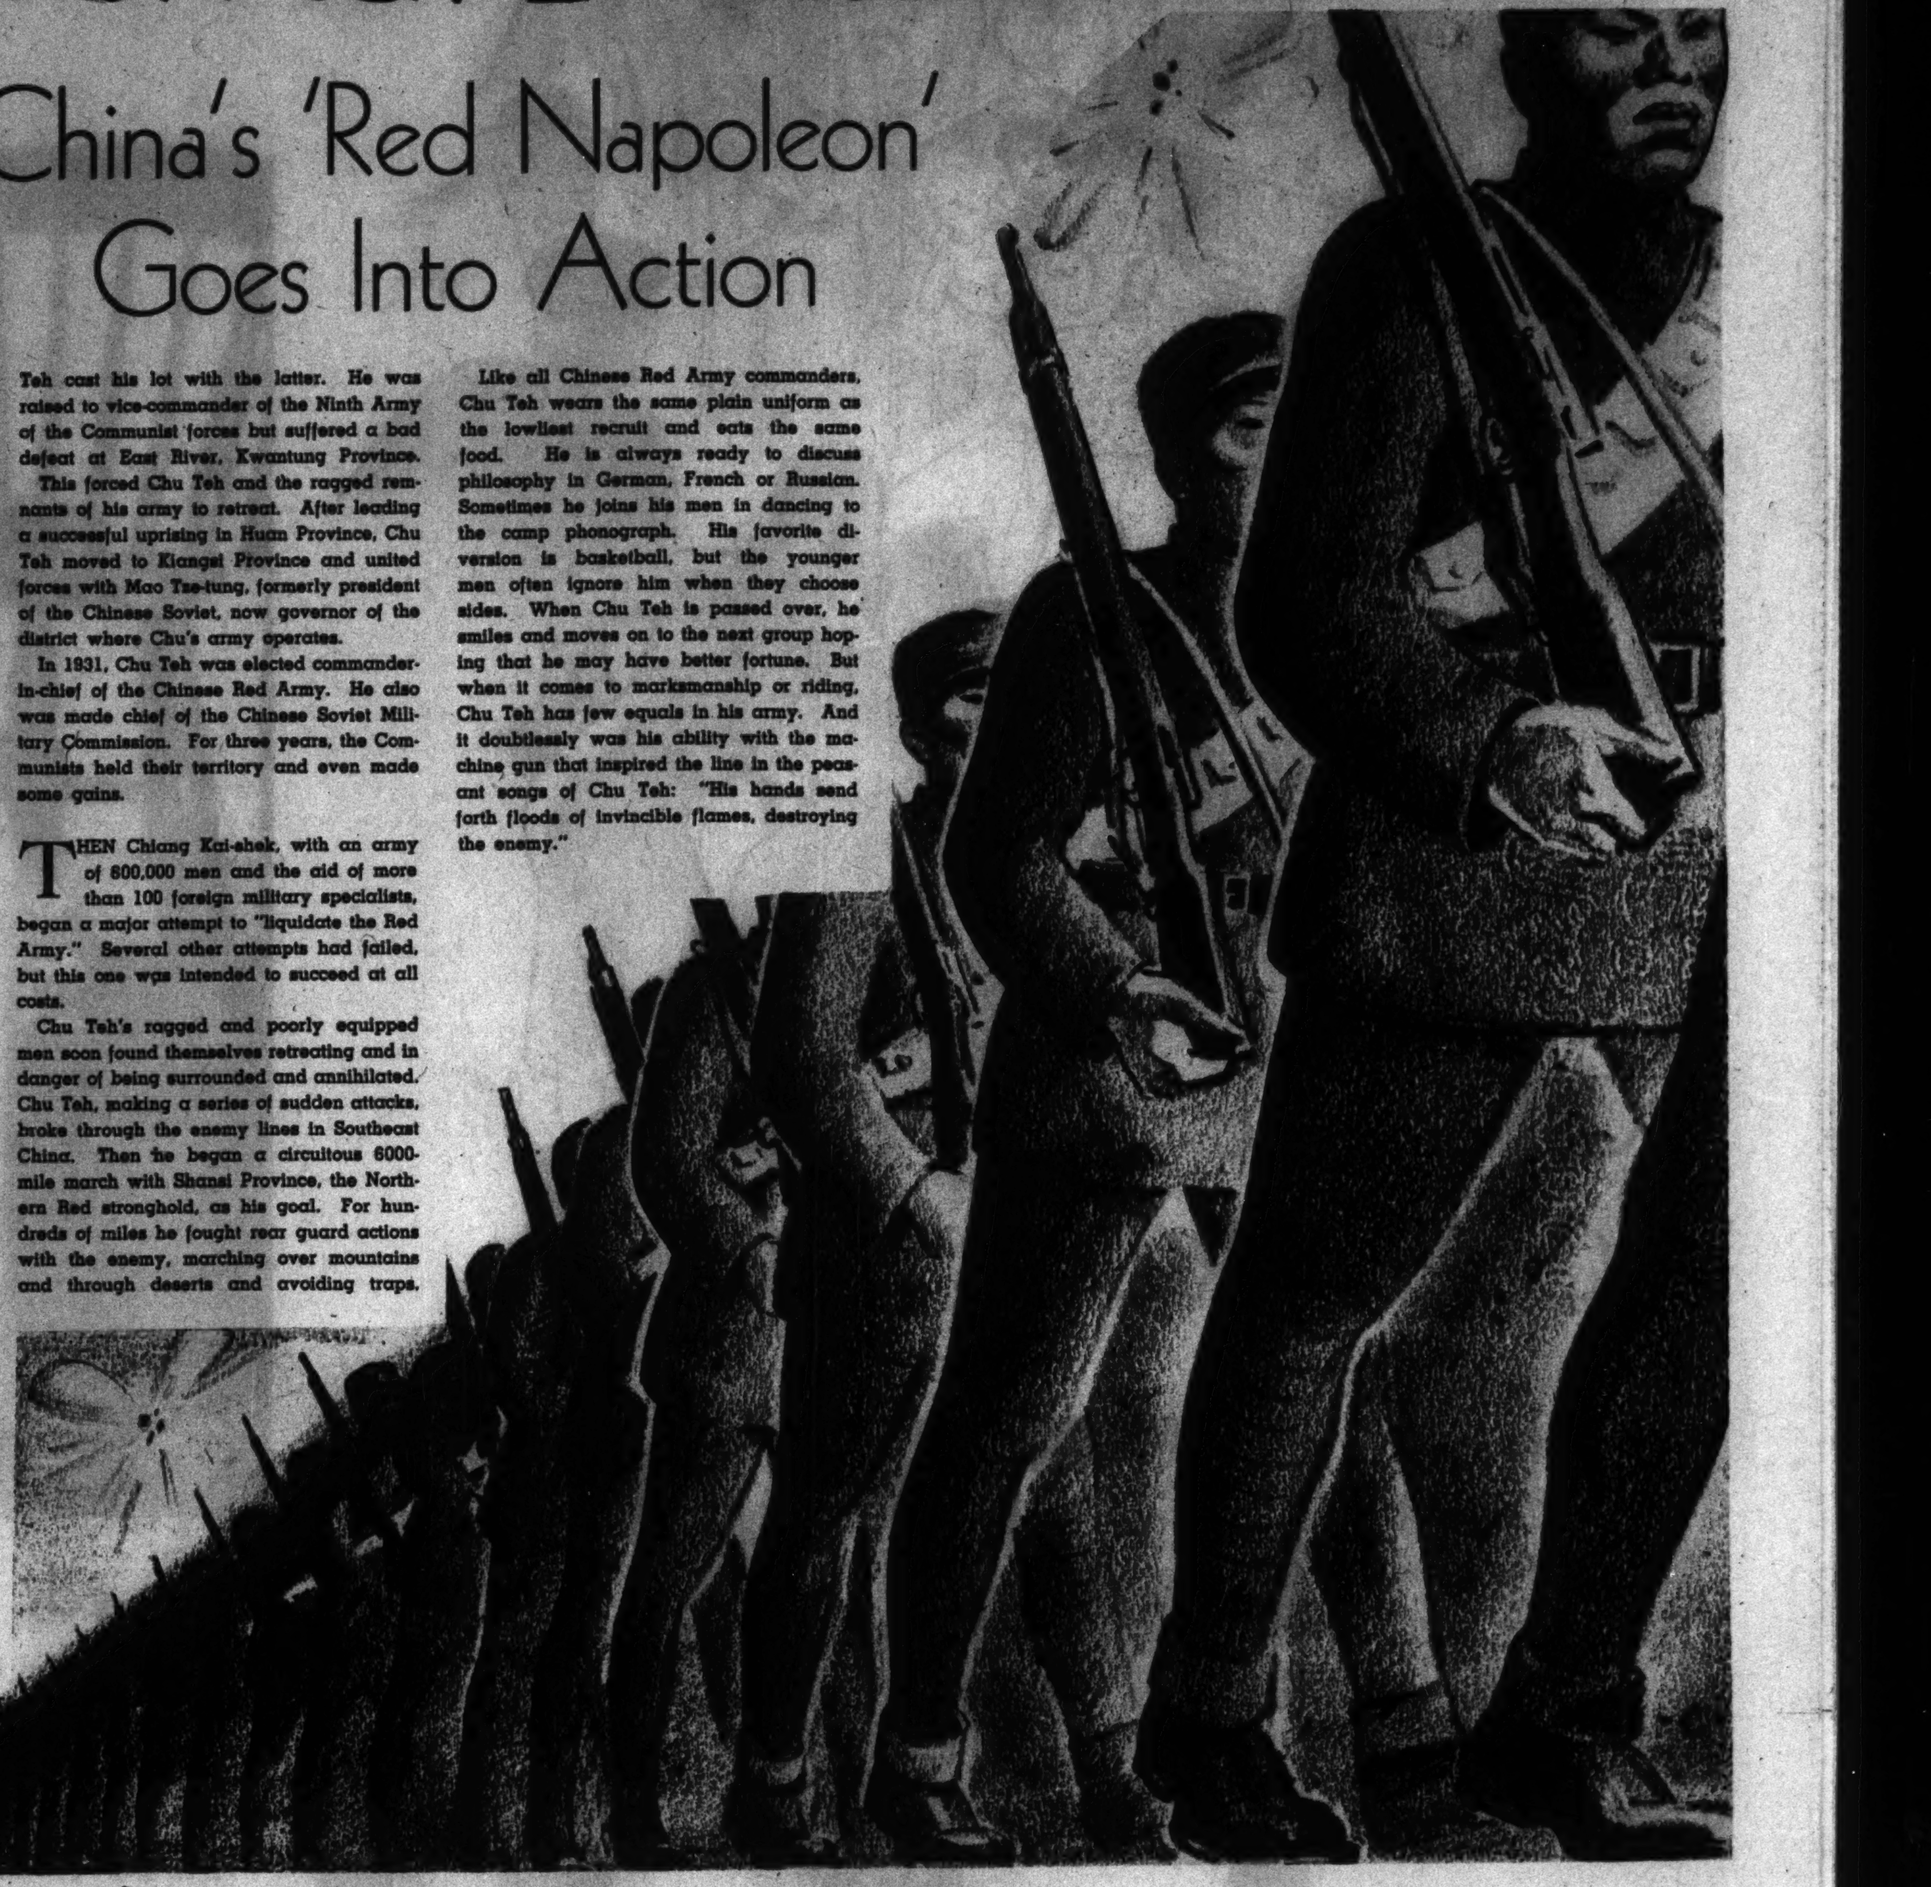
(CHU TEH
GRACIE FIELDS)

China's 'Red Napoleon' Goes Into Action



Chu Teh.



A SHORT, solidly built man with broad peasant face, deep-brown weather-beaten complexion and small bright eyes stood in the rough headquarters of the Chinese Red Army rubbing his gnarled hands together. His face was serious as he deliberated on questions put by an American newspaper man. Yes, he was sure that Japan was about to begin its long expected attempt to swallow China. A matter of a few weeks at most. The Chinese Government would have to accept the Reds as allies. Only Communists could lead the peasants. The way to beat the Japanese—avoid decisive engagements until guerilla warfare breaks down the Mikado's efficient war machine.

That was the substance of an interview given late last June by Chu Teh, the Communist leader. Two weeks later, on July 7, the Japanese troops attacked a Chinese garrison near Peiping. Within a few days it was apparent to the world that Japan was beginning a determined invasion of Northern China. The first part of Chu Teh's prophecy had come true. Six weeks later, Nanking and the Red Army announced that they officially had concluded 10 years of war and were allied to fight the Japanese. The second part of Chu Teh's prophecy had been proved correct.

And in recent weeks, despite the general retreat of the Chinese forces, dispatches have told how the once outlawed army of Chu Teh, now known as the Chinese Eighth Route Army, has inflicted heavy losses on the Japanese. The Japanese have not been able to tell when or where flying units of this army of 100,000 regulars, led by Chu Teh, would strike. These troops, most of them having seen several years of service against Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and his Nanking troops, are past masters at the art of concentrating swiftly, striking suddenly and whisking themselves away before a counterattack can be made.

Main railroad lines, which the Japanese thought were safe, have been cut again and again. Small but valuable depots of food and ammunition have been captured or destroyed by unexpected raids. On October 18 Chu Teh's men rushed a Japanese airport and destroyed 21 of 24 planes. There have been cases where garrisons have been annihilated. The men who composed the garrison at Tinghsien, 100 miles southwest of Peiping, were annihilated on three different occasions, according to reports received late in January. The result is the Japanese army in Shansi has been unable to maintain regular lines of supply and communication. Thus it is apparent that besides being somewhat of a prophet, Chu Teh deserves his nom de guerre of "the Red Napoleon."

Nearly 30 of his 52 years have been spent in active warfare or preparation for it. As his family had much influence in the province of Szechuan, he was appointed to the Yunnan Military Academy and on graduation became a lieutenant in the army of the old Manchu dynasty. In 1911, when the revolution began, he led his men in revolt against the Imperial Government and showed outstanding military ability. By 1916, as a result of his ability plus politics he had risen to brigadier-general. In that year an attempt was made to restore the monarchy. Chu Teh played such a leading role in crushing the move that the Government rewarded him by appointing him Commissioner of Finance for Yunnan. The bureaucracy let him know that it was all right to dip both hands in the public chest. Seeing that other public officials had no scruples, Chu Teh soon set himself up in one of the most palatial homes in Yunnan's capital. He acquired a harem of nine wives. Like his associates, he used the opium pipe daily.

Nevertheless, there seems to have been a latent strain of idealism in Chu Teh. Despite his many vices, he liked to read books. He also enjoyed talking with the serious minded students who, from time to time, came back from foreign universities. As a result, it finally dawned on him that the revolution of 1911-12 had left the people no better off than they were before. He suddenly realized that he needed more learning. So, in 1922, he pensioned off his harem and went to Shanghai where he made friends with the Kuomintang revolutionaries, eagerly absorbing their doctrines. He took their advice, even giving up opium.

Feeling that he needed a broader background, Chu Teh went to Germany in 1922. There, for three years, he studied political and economic science, philosophy and military strategy.

On his return to China in 1925, he resumed his left wing activities and the Twentieth Army Corps of the National Protectionists elected him to represent them in the United Front Council. When the Kuomintang Party and the Communists split, Chu Teh cast his lot with the latter. He was raised to vice-commander of the Ninth Army of the Communist forces but suffered a bad defeat at East River, Kwantung Province.

This forced Chu Teh and the ragged remnants of his army to retreat. After leading a successful uprising in Huan Province, Chu Teh moved to Kiangsi Province and united forces with Mao Tse-tung, formerly president of the Chinese Soviet, now governor of the district where Chu's army operates.

In 1931, Chu Teh was elected commander-in-chief of the Chinese Red Army. He also was made chief of the Chinese Soviet Military Commission. For three years, the Communists held their territory and even made some gains.

THEN Chiang Kai-shek, with an army of 800,000 men and the aid of more than 100 foreign military specialists, began a major attempt to "liquidate the Red Army." Several other attempts had failed, but this one was intended to succeed at all costs.

Chu Teh's ragged and poorly equipped men soon found themselves retreating and in danger of being surrounded and annihilated. Chu Teh, making a series of sudden attacks, broke through the enemy lines in Southeast China. Then he began a circuitous 6000-mile march with Shansi Province, the Northern Red stronghold, as his goal. For hundreds of miles he fought rear guard actions with the enemy, marching over mountains and through deserts and avoiding traps.

Like all Chinese Red Army commanders, Chu Teh wears the same plain uniform as the lowliest recruit and eats the same food. He is always ready to discuss philosophy in German, French or Russian. Sometimes he joins his men in dancing to the camp phonograph. His favorite diversion is basketball, but the younger men often ignore him when they choose sides. When Chu Teh is passed over, he smiles and moves on to the next group hoping that he may have better fortune. But when it comes to marksmanship or riding, Chu Teh has few equals in his army. And it doubtlessly was his ability with the machine gun that inspired the line in the peasant songs of Chu Teh: "His hands send forth floods of invincible flames, destroying the enemy."

Once a Factory Girl, Now England's Top Comedienne

LONDON.

OF ALL the things which have happened to Gracie Fields—and they include wealth, marriage and Hollywood — few have seemed more important to her than what took place on January 1, 1938. On that date the name of the Lancashire comedienne appeared on Great Britain's New Year Honours List; she had been made a Commander of the Order of the British Empire—a pretty high-sounding title to be acquired by a girl who used to work in a textile mill for $1.50 a day.

Gracie's reaction to the big event was characteristic. She was, she declared after recovering from the first impact, "very thrilled" and "very proud"; she was excited at the congratulatory telegrams and telephone calls that deluged her and particularly happy over those from her old home town of Rochdale. But on first hearing the good news, she exclaimed. "Oo 'eck! Look wot I've got now, Mother!"

The congratulations were characteristic, too—characteristic, that is, of the regard in which Gracie Fields is held by Britishers. They came from far and near, from all sorts and conditions of people. Not only did bigwigs, fellow professionals, friends and acquaintances applaud her honor, but policemen, taxicab drivers and street sweepers told her they were happy that she had been so honored. There is probably no actor or actress in America who in this respect offers a parallel to her. She has a public of tremendous size and diversity, which regards her as its prized possession.

One reason for her vast popularity may be that despite the intellectualized acclaim of critics she has kept the knack of making unintellectual people laugh and cry. Another may be that in gaining wealth she has not forgotten that lots of other people are still poor, and has given a good deal of her money away. One of her pet charities is an orphanage which she established at Peacehaven, Sussex, and to which she gave $25,000 for a new wing not long ago.

Of her money some rather fantastic things are told. Her salary is reported—probably truthfully—to exceed that of any Hollywood star of the movies. When she was in America last spring to arrange with Twentieth Century Fox to make pictures for the American company, her manager, Monty Banks, said her earnings were between $800,000 and $1,000,000 a year. Her agreement with the Hollywood concern was understood to call for payment to her of $250,000 a picture.

But her earnings are said to be literally uncounted wealth as far as she is concerned. She said, on her American visit, that she didn't know how much money she had or how much she took in, that her mother and her lawyer attended to that. She said she never saw her salary checks, but "I get a little spending money for myself, and I have some charge accounts at the stores in London." Banks added that the "little spending money for myself" was $25 a week. He also said Miss Fields didn't have any jewelry at all and just one fur coat—which she wore when she thought she might have to pose for photographers. He related that when an English city made her a present of a costly automobile, she sold the car at auction and gave the proceeds to charity. Said Gracie, apparently in defense of her ignorance of the amount of her income, "It doesn't matter, does it, as long as one has enough to do with?"

OF COURSE, there is a limit to such a cavalier attitude toward money. Negotiations concerning film work in America are reported to have encountered difficulty in her aversion to paying income taxes in both countries.

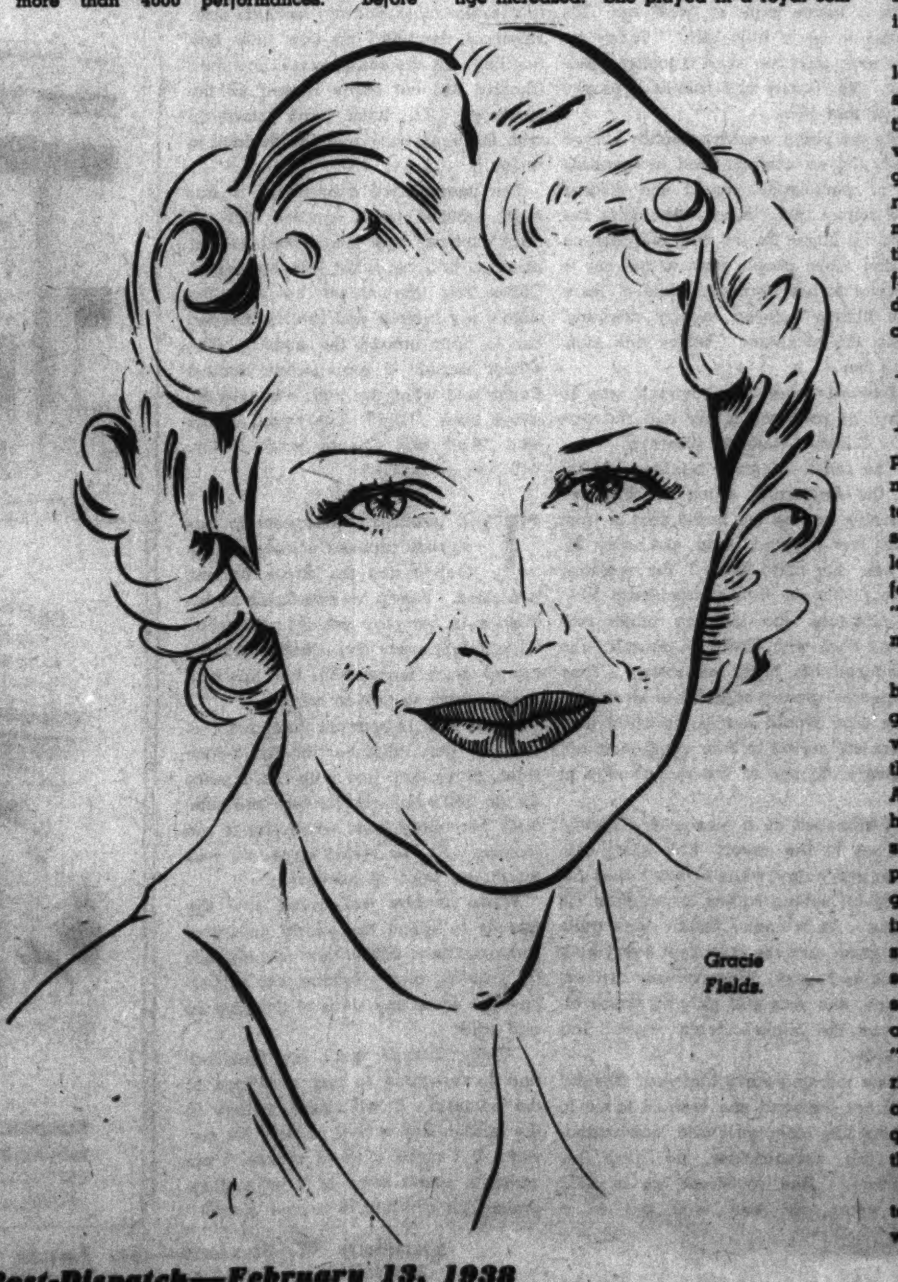
One of Miss Fields' eccentricities is her failure to conceal her age; she has let her birth date go in the record books. "Who's Who in the Theater" says she was born January 9, 1898, which means she is 40 year old now.

Rochdale, in Lancashire, was the place of her birth, and her parents were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stansfield, obscure people who were not of the theater. They named the girl Grace; the affection of the British for their offspring has had a good deal to do with the name's being Gracie now.

Gracie began entertaining the public when she was 8 years old by singing in a movie theater. Then she joined a company of juvenile thespians. But at 14, according to a writer in the London Sphere, she was working in a factory—and amusing fellow workers at odd moments by dancing and singing. She herself has said she went on the stage not because she was stage struck, but because she didn't like working in a factory. Anyway, in 1915 she got into a revue, "Yes, I Think So," which was playing in Manchester, and later that year went with the show to London and gave the metropolis its first look at her. The principal comedian of the show was Archie Pitt. He thought enough of the Lancashire girl's ability to put her in his next show, "It's a Bargain," which ran for two years in Manchester and elsewhere. In 1918 Pitt produced "Mr. Tower of London," with Gracie a featured player.

The piece ran for seven years, with more than 4000 performances. Before the run was over Gracie married Pitt.

She was a great favorite with audiences by this time. After "Mr. Tower" retired, she went into "By Request," and it ran for three years. She played Lady Weir in "S. O. S." and managed to squeeze in some variety engagements at the same time. Other productions, light and musical, such as "The Show's the Thing" and "Walk This Way," followed, and Gracie's following and prestige increased. She played in a royal command performance at the Coliseum in March, 1928.



Gracie Fields.

In 1930 she made her first appearance in New York, doing a repertory of songs at the Palace Theater. The next year she went into the movies, her first picture being "Sally in Our Alley," which was followed by such films as "The Week of Grace" and "Look Up and Laugh"—all made in England. They have not been shown in the United States. Some years ago she added radio broadcasting to her activities.

When Miss Fields came to this country last spring it was generally supposed that she would be starred in Hollywood productions. But she left with an agreement under which she was to make two pictures in England for Twentieth Century-Fox and then return to America for a third. She has just made the first of these films, which has been titled "He Was Her Man." The latest word from Hollywood is that it is doubtful if she does the third picture, at least in this country.

HOLLYWOOD worked on her a bit, though, while it had its hands on her. It informed her that she wasn't pretty—her face was too narrow and her nose too long—and set about doing her over to give her more allure. Gracie, five feet seven, auburn haired and hazel eyed, laughingly wondered "whether it is proper for me to be so bewitching," but finally said, "If they can discover some hidden beauty in me, I'll thank them."

Gracie is far from ill-favored, but it isn't beauty that has made her the fair-haired girl of the English stage and screen. Critics who are presumed to know about those things say she has a tremendous artistry. Along with her talent for foolery—in which her use of North country dialect and way of singing such songs as "Eh Ba Goom" are prominent—they say she has an exceptional gift for emotional acting. Ivor Brown, writing in the Saturday Review some years ago, spoke of her "elastic-sided voice" and observed that she could paint character by slight vocal shadings. He cited as an example of her skill at burlesque that she tore "Sunny Boy" "into merited ribbons of the ridiculous." And he pointed out, as evidence of authentic stage art, her ability to turn quickly from comedy to pathos—and carry the audience with her.

The GIRL who WON'T GROW U

Chebby playing with a doll.

Chebby Cohen Is Married and 23, but She Insists on Dressing and Acting Like a Child—and Now She's in a Circus.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

LONDON.

"STEP this way ladies and gentlemen! Come in and see for yourself. We have something better than the bearded lady and the half man and half woman to offer. It's Chebby Cohen, the 23-year-old child wonder of the world. She won't grow up. Come in and see her play with her dolls and play pick-a-back with her 14-year-old playfellow. All for three pence." That's the barker's song outside the side show of a circus in London.

So great is the public interest in this unusual "child-woman" that as many as 2000 people a day pay the price of admission to see her. And for remaining permanently childish, she receives the substantial salary of twenty pounds a week.

The people peer at a girl wearing Shirley Temple frocks in a play pen and after laughing at her antics are more puzzled than ever. No one has been able to prove that Chebby Cohen is a fake although she is married to a 28-year-old radio salesman, who bounces her on his knee when she comes from the circus at night and gives her a doll to play with on the settee when friends call on Sunday to see them.

He says he has an ideal wife and child in one. Chebby never answers back and is always polite to the company no matter how much they may disturb her childish caperings.

When Chebby's five-year contract with a London amusement company expires she may go to Hollywood as a picture producer has expressed interest in her. There have been several famous juvenile impersonators among actresses like Ann Pennington and Mitzi Green, but with Chebby Cohen, the directors would have to do no coaching. She lives the part of a child in everything she does and her physique is juvenile although she did bear a child that died at four months.

Born in Lancashire, Chebby was brought to London when she was 15 years old. She found employment as a nurse maid to two little girls and proved to be singularly successful not only because she watched them, but because she played and romped with them as though she were their own age.

When curious people asked Chebby why she insisted on acting like a child all the time, she replied with a laugh: "Oh, I never want to grow up. It's grand to be a little girl." Today no one ever asks her such a foolish question. Her family and friends hope she stays that way.

As the years went by Chebby stayed put. On no account, and in response to no persuasion, would she discard her school girl clothes. She kept her hair cut Buster Brown with a ribbon on it and when people tried to get her to answer to her Christian name of Terry she bluntly refused to pay attention. Only the nickname Chebby will summon her.

Edward Cohen, her husband, was 26 when he proposed to her and she was 21. Chebby accepted gleefully.

The radio salesman bundled her off to the registrar's office in Stratford. Chebby, putting her hands first in front and then behind, said she was 21. "Take this child home," the registrar said to Cohen with a significant look.

Indignant, the budding bridegroom came back with Chebby's parents, who produced her birth certificate. They appeared greatly relieved to know that any man would marry the child they were still trying to take away from her nursery rhymes at the mature age of 21.

Established as a housewife, Chebby played in the streets with other children every day while Cohen talked his head off selling radios to maintain his home. As a cook Chebby was quite proficient and she also kept everything spick and span. When a baby arrived, a boy, she was still playing house although the infant's death grieved her greatly.

One morning early last year Chebby told her husband she wanted to go to school like other girls and, understanding her eccentricities, he gave his consent. She registered as a child 11 years old and was put in a class among children of that age.

The teacher, delighted with such a bright pupil, soon made Chebby a favorite. She knew all the answers almost before the questions were asked. In a short time Chebby was promoted to a senior class and the teachers marveled at the child prodigy they had enrolled. In the senior class, however, Chebby did not enjoy herself so immensely. The home work interfered with the housework and she decided to resign.

The unexplained absence of a star pupil aroused much concern and the truant officer was dispatched to her home to find out what had happened. Cohen told the officer he was the child's big brother and that he needed her to help around the house. The school brought a court action against Cohen and when the truth was told the Judge said: "Oh!" The truant officer said "Ah!" and Chebby said: "Now will you be good?"

THE publicity subsequent to this episode aroused widespread attention and the circus became interested. Today for remaining on exhibition in her play pen from 11 a. m. till midnight every day, Chebby is making so much money that her husband doesn't have to talk so hard.

Eddie, her 14-year-old companion of the play pen, takes her for pick-a-back rides, plays leap frog with her, musses up the doll's hair just for fun, and pummels her teddy bear when she is not looking. As the barker says, it's well worth the price of admission.

When Chebby was asked how she intends to spend the yearly salary of approximately $5000 that is paid her for prattling and frolicking, she still refused to show any signs of growing up and said:

"Well, 'Cushy,' that's my husband, and I, are going to buy a cottage in the country. It will have swings in the garden and a real nursery for myself. If I make a lot of money, I am going to spend some of it on a playground for children in a poor district."

Co-eds Tried Outwitting Campus Cops

Thomas Arkle Clark as Dean of Men at Illinois, is a comparatively young man but has become pretty well known through his writings on collegiate affairs. Students seem to respect his forthrightness. "As far as I know," he told the writer, "there was no trace of anything profoundly wrong. My knowledge of the members of the D. K. E. chapter confirms my belief that the thing was nothing worse than a breach of university discipline. I suppose some of the boys thought it would be fun to flout the regulations; and the chapter will have to take its medicine."

On the campus there seems to be widespread opinion that the Dekes have had bad luck in this matter. Students say there have been unauthorized gatherings such as the one in question in most of the fraternity houses here, with no fuss raised; the Dekes were caught because university police have been exceptionally vigilant lately. They explain that the Daily Illini started a crusade against vice in Champaign last fall, and that consequently university police have been directed to keep the school community lily-white so that town authorities can't point derisively at the university and say, "Why don't you keep your own skirts clean?"

The Dekes are feeling the hurt. They say they are philosophical, but they certainly are not happy over the whole thing. One unpleasant consequence of the late lamented festive occasion is that John Lessel, president of the chapter; James O'Neil, vice-president; Dean O. Garvey, commissary; William McEvoy, social secretary, and George Voss, corresponding secretary, must resign these offices. It's a particularly tough break for Lessel, because he was out of town when the episode occurred. Thomas M. Hopwood, on the other hand, was lucky; he resigned as social chairman a couple of days before, and now holds the position of rushing chairman, a job filled by the alumni and not subject to the disciplinary committee's order.

ANOTHER deplorable consequence is that the Illinois Dekes must contemplate the dismal prospect of getting through the rest of this school year and all of the next without giving any parties for which the sanction of university authorities is required. That includes about all the parties that a fraternity wants to give.

The handicaps which the affair has imposed on "rushing" next fall are worrying the Dekes. They can't offer prospective members a seductive array of parties that year. But it would not be very surprising if by good works they were able to obtain modification of their sentence by that time.

Furthermore, they will still be able to tell "rushees" of the ripe age of their fraternity, founded at Yale in 1844; of its 47 chapters; of prominent men, including Presidents Rutherford B. Hayes and Theodore Roosevelt, who wore their badge.

And the young men of D. K. E. may even find an advantage in adversity. The gallant and the chivalrous should be impressed at hearing of their unique achievement in hospitality—at hearing that Dekes camouflage their lady guests, let the snow fly where it may.

The TALE of CINDERELLA

By WALTER DAHLGREN

Through the scorcery of her magic wand the Fairy Godmother enabled Cinderella to go to the Prince's Ball. Cinderella went in state—dressed in finery she had never dreamed of and in the most handsome coach imaginable. Just before the coach drove off the kind old lady bade Cinderella return before 12 o'clock. "For at that time your beautiful gown will return to rags and patches—the handsome coach to it's lowly origin—the horses and coachmen to rats and mice!" Cinderella promised to be home before the first stroke of 12 and off she went.

When she arrived at the palace all the guests were astonished. They were eager to know who the beautiful princess was. Who but a princess could own such an expensive gown and keep such a handsome coach? The Prince himself conducted her to his father, the King. Though they begged and pleaded Cinderella would tell neither her name nor from where she came till at last they named her Princess Mystery. The "Wicked Three" had pushed themselves into the front row—but fortunately they did not recognize their drudge. Everyone loved Princess Mystery on sight and her popularity grew as the ball progressed. The Prince had eyes for no one else and he danced only with her that night! All too soon came the time for Cinderella to depart. When she still refused to tell the Prince her name he urged her to return to the ball the following night. Princess Mystery promised, for the Prince held her hand until she did, and hurriedly left. When her stepmother and sisters returned they found her sitting among the ashes as though nothing had happened.

The second night of the ball Cinderella's Godmother again came to Cinderella's aid. Her success was greater than the preceding night. On leaving she once more refused to tell her name, but promised to attend the final night. The third night came and Cinderella went again. The evening was merry and before Cinderella knew the clock began striking 12! In her panic she fled—losing her slipper as she ran. The Prince caused the whole Kingdom to be searched for the slipper's owner. After many discouragements Cinderella was discovered. "Will you be my Princess?" asked the Prince. Of course Princess Mystery said "YES," and they were married that very day!

DIRECTIONS ● Mount the page upon heavy cardboard and cut out the figures. Next paste the two halves of each character together and mount in base (as made for Cinderella). This completes the series.

Modernizing St. Louis' Municipal Theater

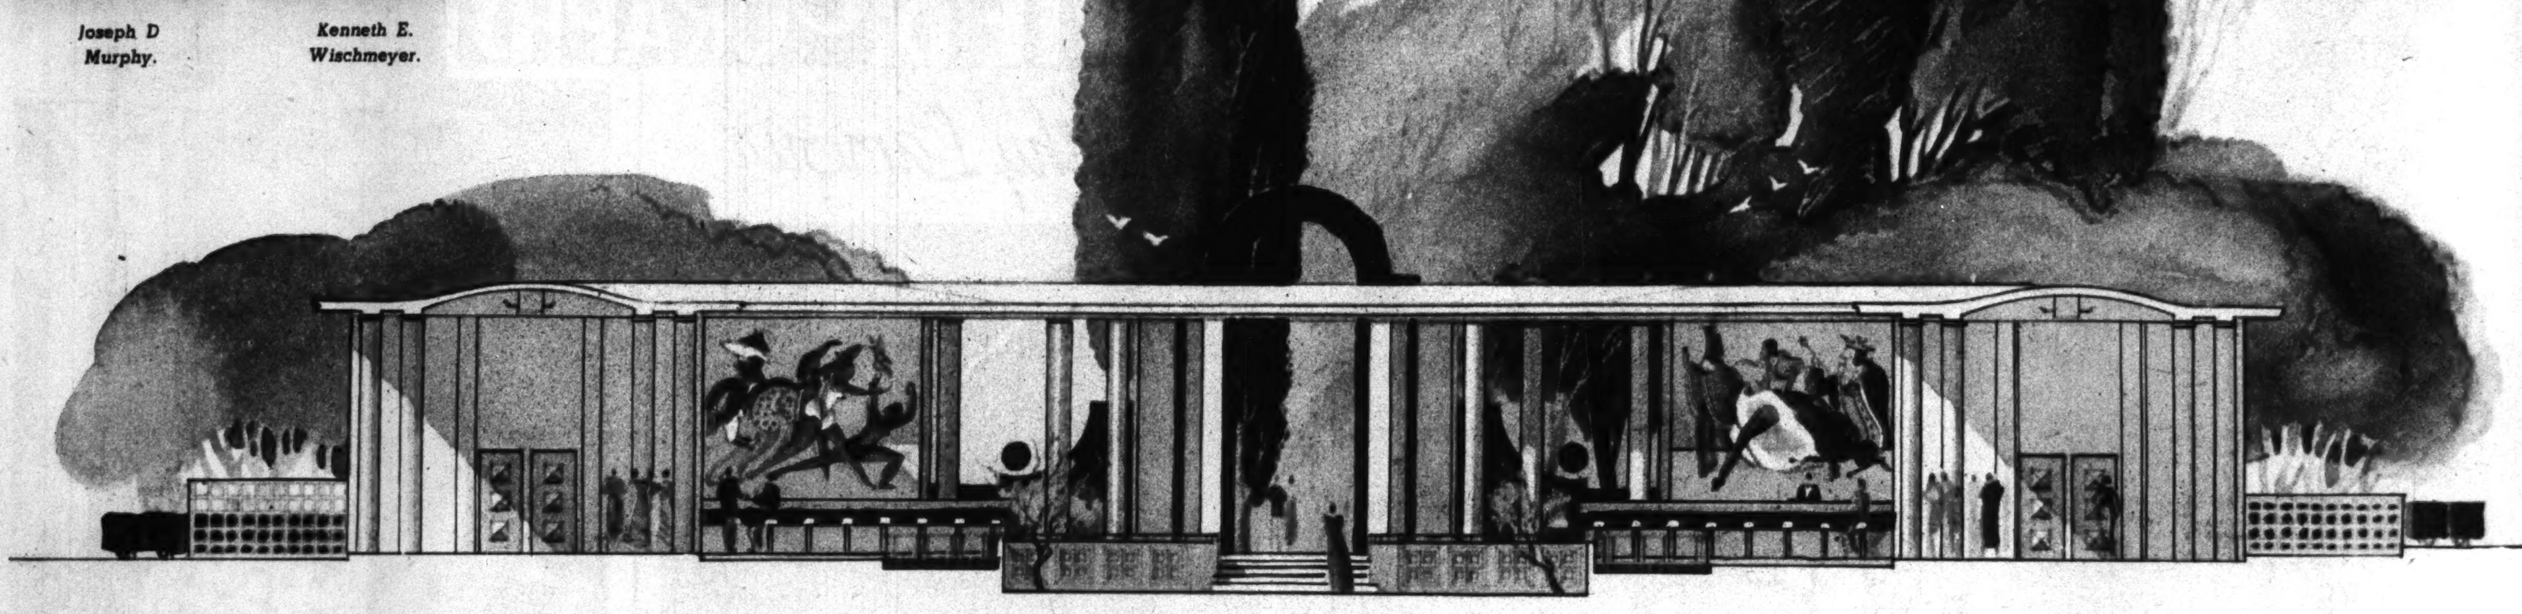
Kenneth E. Wischmeyer.

Prize Winning Plans for Future Remodeling of the Summer Playhouse Include a New Entrance, Shelters, and Refreshment Stands.



One of the refreshment stands.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

THE Municipal Theater of the future, with eventual expenditures estimated at $250,000, is forecast in the prise-winning drawings of Joseph D. Murphy and Kenneth E. Wischmeyer, reproduced on this page to show how the completed plan may be expected to look in the impressive natural setting in Forest Park.

The immediate project, for completion in probably three years at an estimated cost of $100,000, comprises a new lower or main entrance, new refreshment stands and new pergolas at the sides capable in a sudden shower of sheltering all the 10,000 spectators. First steps are to be taken as soon as the winning architects can complete detailed plans and weather allows construction to begin, in the hope of having part of it ready for the opening of the season in June.

Eventually the plans—selected from 42 entries by a jury of architects and representatives of the city and the Municipal Theater Association—call for a structure entirely new except for the concrete seating tiers and the 50-foot light towers which flank the stage. They provide for a new entrance at the upper as well as the lower end of the theater, and for a modern group of dressing, wardrobe, rehearsal and reception rooms, offices and the like, to replace the present frame structures back of the stage. This further development, with whatever revision in detail later experience or new requirements may dictate, will go forward as needs arise and funds become available from proceeds of tickets and concessions at the nonprofit summer opera.

Because of the short time remaining before the 1938 season, the Municipal Theater Association does not consider undertaking more this year than the pergola and possibly the refreshment stand on the northerly side, or at the right of the audience. Before the refreshment stand can be begun, the lower part of that runway is to be relocated to make it symmetrical with that on the left, which bends outward on a slight angle at a point even with the stage. The right hand ramp now lies on a straight line from the top of the hill to the entrance, cutting off a material portion of the space to be made available back stage.

Stylistically, Grecian influence is apparent at a glance, but equally striking are the departures from it—principally from its mass toward the slender simplicity and airiness possible in reinforced concrete, a stronger if not more lasting material than Attic stone, and suitable to the nature of an al fresco theater designed for light opera. The columns are to be rectangular, with capitals in an abbreviated Ionic version suitable to concrete construction. Their rectangular cross section is to conserve space in the passages, and, with a three-foot extension of the roof on either side, it gives the pergolas a "shelter capacity" equal to the seating capacity of the theater. The roof is planned low enough so that wind-driven summer rains cannot readily drench the shelter-ees in the outer rows.

The association can let its conscience and pocketbook be its guide as to how far to go in the equipment of the back stage buildings, and in certain of the decorative high spots. A statue of Orpheus is planned for the main entrance foyer, where the main box office, information desk and lost and found bureau will be situated, with secondary ticket offices at the sides and upper entrances. Fountains, in niches sculptured in low relief, are indicated for the points where the elevation drops away on either side of the upper or easterly entrance. Mural paintings fitting the atmosphere of summer opera have been sketched for back bar decoration in the refreshment stands—or cafes.

The designers will get the usual six per cent architect's commission with an advance of $500. Wischmeyer, 29 years old, graduate of Washington University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was a recipient of the James Harrison Steedman fellowship in architecture and has home and studio at 5559 Maple avenue. Murphy, 30, is associate professor of architecture in Washington University and has studied at M. I. T. and in Europe as winner of several scholarships.

COLERAINE'S PULLING A SURPRISE—RUNNING HER FASTEST MAN THIRD!
NED'LL HAVE A 10-YARD LEAD TO OVERCOME
HE'S ONLY FIVE YARDS BEHIND NOW, GAIL!

NED'S SAVING HIS STRENGTH FOR THE HOME STRETCH!
Ten yards from the tape Ned Brant turns it on. With an astonishing burst of speed he passes the Coleraine anchor man and streaks for the tape.

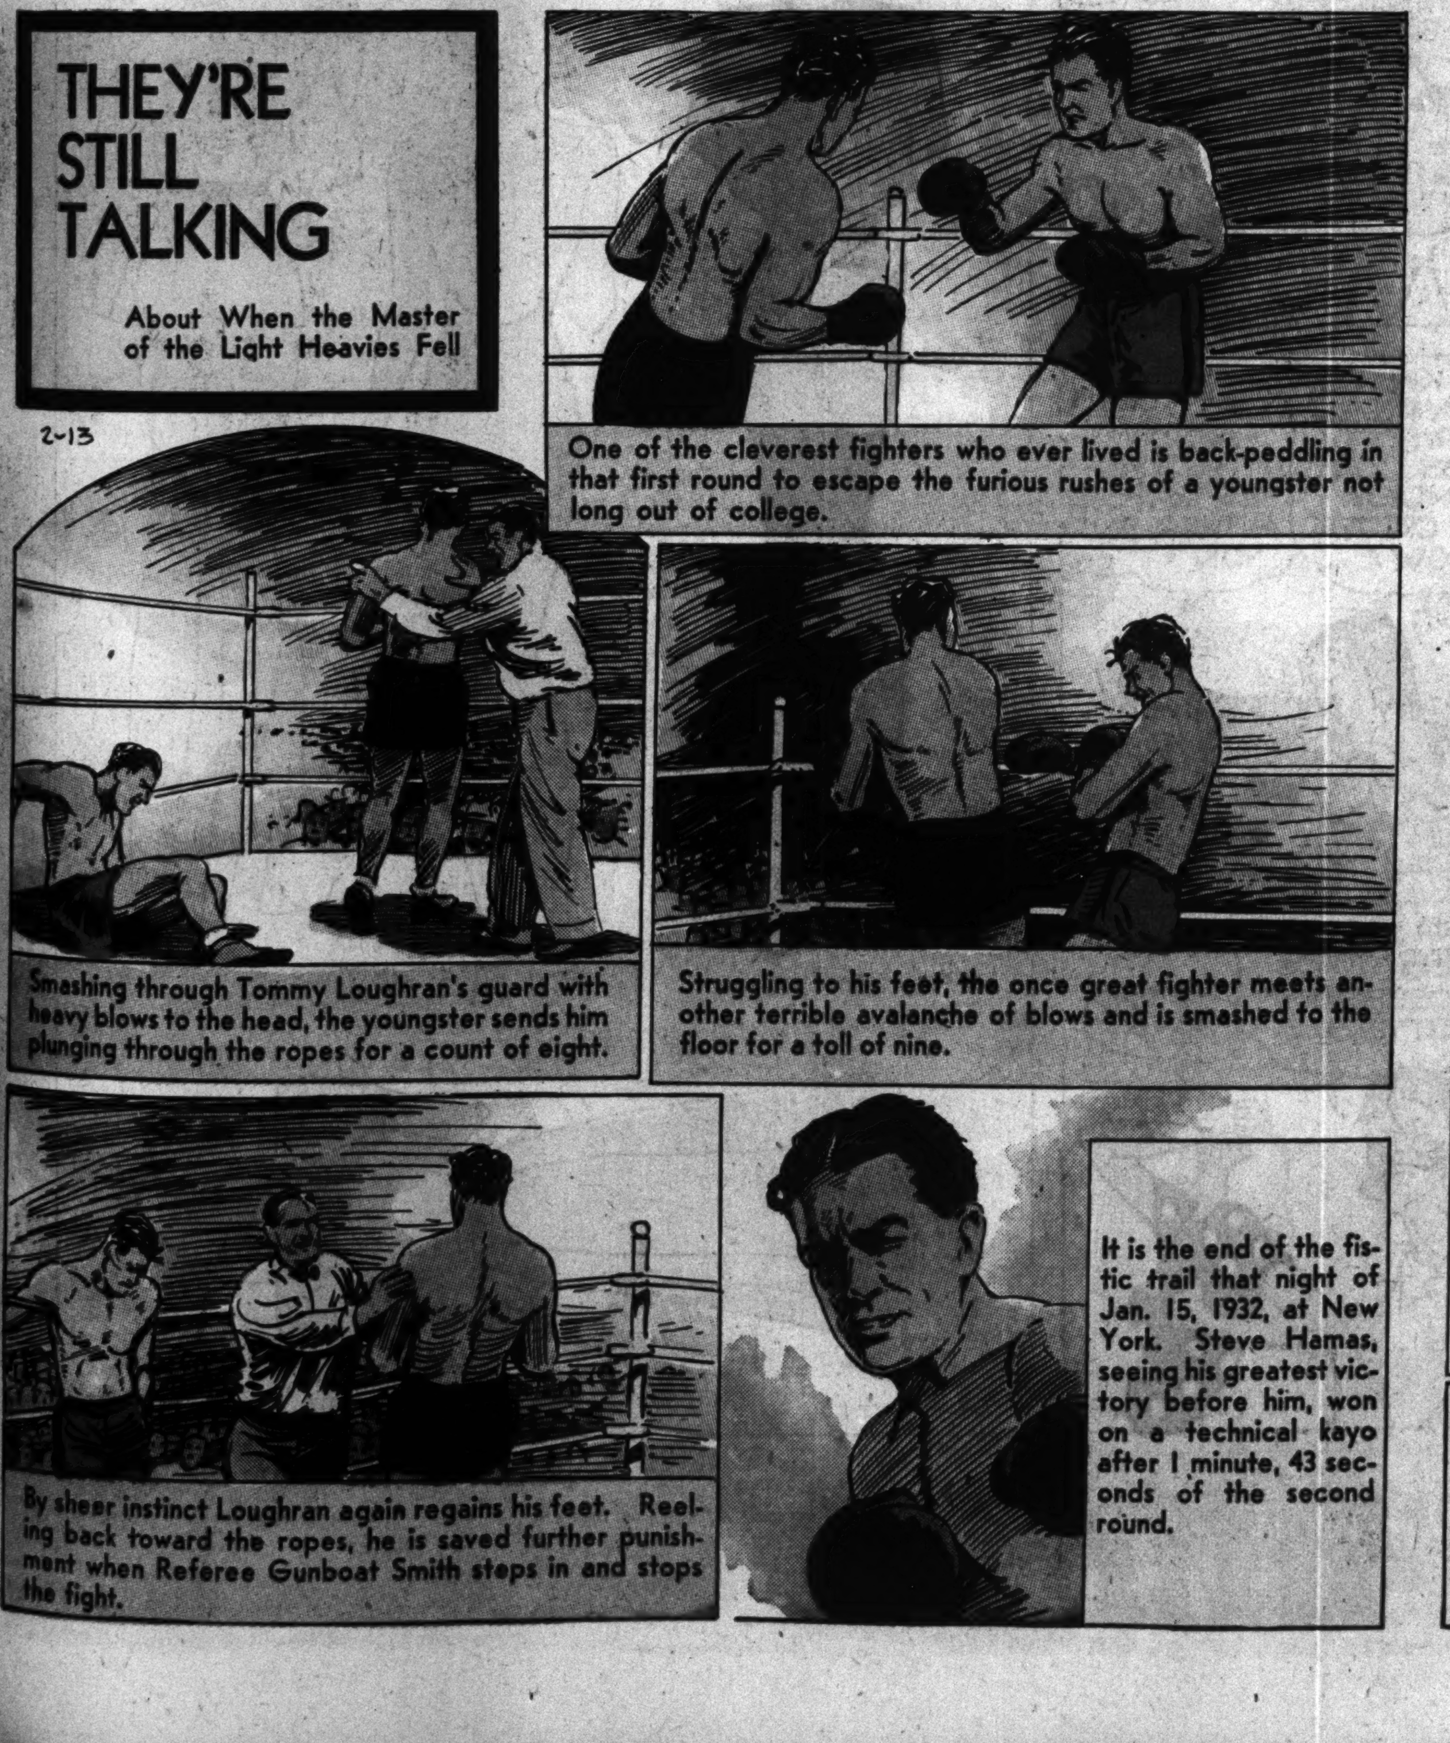
The crowd jumps to its feet as Brant, with victory apparently certain, trips and flounders. The Coleraine boy flashes past him!
Even the cheers of the delirious Coleraine rooters are hushed as Ned Brant falls heavily on his face just short of the finish line.
WELL, MY WEB-FOOTED FRIEND, DO YOU STILL THINK YOU BELONG WITH THE MERCURY QUARTET?
WHY DON'T YOU CRAWL INTO A HOLLOW LOG, SHEKELS?

THEY'RE STILL TALKING

About When the Master of the Light Heavies Fell



One of the cleverest fighters who ever lived is back-peddling in that first round to escape the furious rushes of a youngster not long out of college.

Smashing through Tommy Loughran's guard with heavy blows to the head, the youngster sends him plunging through the ropes for a count of eight.

Struggling to his feet, the once great fighter meets another terrible avalanche of blows and is smashed to the floor for a toll of nine.

By sheer instinct Loughran again regains his feet. Reeling back toward the ropes, he is saved further punishment when Referee Gunboat Smith steps in and stops the fight.

It is the end of the fistic trail that night of Jan. 15, 1932, at New York. Steve Hamas, seeing his greatest victory before him, won on a technical kayo after 1 minute, 43 seconds of the second round.

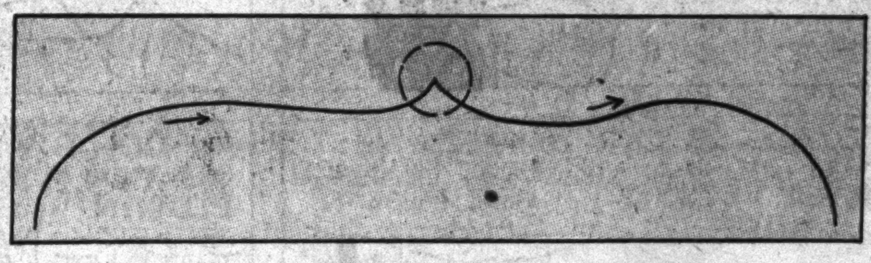
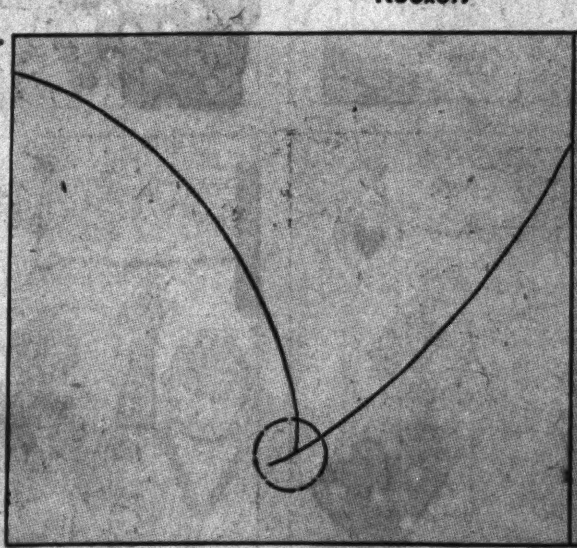
Brackets.



A hard one. Takes plenty of practice. Push off hard with the right foot, inside edge, until you complete the forward curve. Then turn the body to the right and rotate on the ball of the skate until you are facing in the opposite direction. Finally, complete the backward curve on the inside of the right skate.

Rocker.



Pushing forward on the right foot, outside edge, execute a quick turn with the body and on the ball of the right skate to come into a backward curve on the same edge of the same skate.

ENATE PASSES FARM BILL, SENDS IT TO PRESIDENT

ONTROLS SET UP OR 5 MAJOR CROPS

the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14. — The ministration's new farm program ceived Senate approval today ter weeks of congressional conroversy.

y a roll call vote of 56 to 31, the ate approved the measure rked out by a Senate-House comttee from separate bills passed the two bodies at the special sion last fall. The House acpted it last week.

The measure sets up production d marketing controls for five ajor crops. Congress began work it last fall. It provides for conuation of the present soil conrvation program and for estabment of marketing quotas for at, corn, cotton, tobacco and e when supplies are heavy and owers approve in referenda.

Senator McNary (Rep.), Oregon, debate preceding the vote, told Senate the program would ake every farmer "a vassal of the cretary of Agriculture."

The Republican leader, former airman of the Senate Agriculre Committee, charged the bill ovided nothing worthwhile that s not in existing legislation.

He asserted that Secretary Walce's pet "ever-normal granary" an and the theory of "parity es" for farmers had been "comtely stricken from the legislan" and that the benefit payments d loans provided by the legislan were available under present ws.

McNary took the floor shortly bere the hour set by agreement for ting on the measure.

Other Critics of Bill.

Earlier, the bill had been assailed Democrats and Republicans as revolutionary" and "fundamental wrong."

Senator McAdoo (Dem.), Califor, predicted its enforcement uld bring "such a hubbub" that e legislation would be repealed the next session.

Senator Johnson (Rep.), Califora, told his colleagues that "if you rry out this measure you're beinning the regimentation of instry in this country." The farm ll, he said, would give the Secrery of Agriculture "more power an any man ever had before."

Senator Borah (Rep.), Idaho, ad from an interview with Louis ean, economic adviser to Wallace, hich said the legislation would not aterially increase farm prices.

McNary criticised especially the tton provisions inserted in the mpromise bill by the Senateouse Committee.

Under these, McNary said, cot farmers could turn over "been 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 bales" 1937 cotton to the Government at cost of about "11, or 12 cents a ound" and the Government could t "get rid of it for about four ars."

The Republican referred to a prosion sponsored by Senator Smith Dem.), South Carolina) which perits cotton growers to turn over the Commodity Credit Corporan the title to cotton held for serity on loans of up to 9 cents a ound and receive two-cents a und bonus.

nator Burke (Dem.), Nebraska, d he opposed the new program cause it "says to farmers, you rm as you are told, or else you on't get this, or won't get that." "Compulsion is the heart of this gislation," he said.

McAdoo described the legislation "revolutionary."

Anti-Lynching Bill.

Senator Wagner (Dem.), New ork, co-author of the bill with nator Van Nuys (Dem.), Indiana, as the first to sign, followed ickly by Senator Bulkley (Dem.),
